Author of Graham-Grimes Genealogy

"Down the centuries a-line, a-row,
Grandmothers, grandfathers, belle and beau,
Puritan, vagabond, gipsy, peer,
Barefooted carle, or cavalier,
Bone of the mountain, blood of the sea,
Reaching down through the years to you and to me!

Bravely and surely, as one kept the sword
Unsheathed for the King in Naseby fight;
Steadfastly, purely, as one kept his word,
A Puritan word in a battle of right.
Puritan courage and Cavalier pride:
The ages have sifted their dust away!
Dead are the causes for which they died,
But it's their name I bring thee to-day,—
The name that you will bear alway."

To My Beloved Husband

DR. GEORGE D. SITHERWOOD

Who Answered to the Call That Never Meets Refusal

January 5, 1929

I Inscribe This Book

In Memory of All the Dear Partnership

In the Work and Research of the Years

What profit pedigree or long descent
From farre-fetched blood, or painted monuments
Of our great-grandsire's visage? 'Tis most sad
To trust unto the worth another had
For keeping up our fame: which else would fall,
If besides birth, there be no worth at all.
For, who counts him a gentleman whose grace
Is all in name, but otherwise is base?
Or who shall honour him that honours shame,
Noble in nothing but a noble name?

It is better to be meanly born and good
Than one unworthy of his noble blood;
Though all thy walls shine with thy pedigree,
Yet virtue only makes nobility.
Then that this pedigree may useful be
Search out the virtues of your family;
And to the worthy of your father's name,
Learn out the good they did and do the same;
For, if you bear their arms, and not their fame,
Those ensigns of their worth will be your shame.

—From "Old Latin Verse," in Burk's Patrician.

FOREWORD

No record of long years and many people can ever be perfect no matter how much of study and careful labor has been bestowed upon it. Many things must be omitted that one would like to record, and much must remain unknown that descendants would like to know and find interesting. Of the Virginia Throckmortons it should be stated that a member of that branch of the family is writing its history, and so needless repetitions have been avoided here. It appears that all the Throckmortons in the United States have descended from two progenitors bearing the same name—"John Throckmorton"—though they bore no direct relationship to each other unless far back in England, where the history and the name of the family dates back to William the Conqueror. The two in this country settled, the one at Salem, Mass., in 1630, the other in Gloucester Co., Va., in 1660.

The descendants of these two John Throckmortons are arranged and grouped here by generations in the order of their regular succession. The name of every child mentioned, whose surname is Throckmorton, is given a number. The name occurs again in capital letters, with the same number, as head of a family in the succeeding generation. When the descendant dies in youth, or has no issue, the full biography, with few exceptions, will be found where the name is first mentioned. The biographies of the female Throckmortons will also be found under the first numbered paragraph descriptive of her who, by marriage, takes the name of her husband. The names enclosed in parentheses at the beginning of each biography show the line of ancestry back to John Throckmorton, the figures indicate where such ancestor's full record appears.

This following of family history has taken its compiler through years of travel and search, east and west and England, to historic libraries, State Houses and family attics, to old letters and old graveyards. She wishes to thank the many who have so courteously replied to her letters, and the relatives who have financially aided in her research. Some of these are numbered with the "loved and lost" before this record can be in print. To those who remain, and to those who shall follow them, may this story of the race prove interesting.

THE ORIGIN OF THE NAME OF THE MANOR OF THROCKMORTON
THE BEGINNINGS OF THE FAMILY

This ancient seat was never held as a knight's fee. Its overlord was the Bishop of Worcester. It was Church Lands. The temporal holdings of this Bishopric at the Conquest were very great; among many others practically the entire Hundred of Oswaldslaw. This Hundred was itself named from an early Bishop who derived his name from St. Oswald (605-642), King of Northumbrians from 634 to 642. The holders of such church lands were in some cases and in some lands subject, like him who held by purely feudal tenure, as a knight's fee, to follow his lord to war; but it is safe to say that in the case in hand, and in the time of Edward the Confessor, the service, such as it may have been, was compounded for a money rent. After 1415, we are told, this rent was £12 per annum.

"Throckmorton is not mentioned in the Domesday Survey, being then probably included in Fladbury of which it was a part till the 15th century. After 1415 the manor was held of the Bishop of Worcester at a fee-farm rent of £12. Throckmorton gives its name to the family of Throckmorton, who were tenants of the Bishop of Worcester at an early date." (Victorian Hist. of Worcestershire, Vol. III, p. 356, et seq.)

This place (if not as early as stated by Dugdale who says that John was Lord of Throckmorton in 1130, but for which statement Betham: Baronetage of England, I, 486, says there appears to be no authority), at least before the year 1174-5 had given its name to men of Worcestershire. In that year (Pipe Rolls 21 Hen. II) Adam de Throckmorton* owned land in that County; and a year later appear the names of John and Joscelin† Throckmorton. Though the lands of Adam are not expressly stated as being in Throckmorton itself, his name de Throckmorton, wherever his then listed holdings, shows the place of his origin to be Throckmorton. I venture to say that Dugdale is right, and that as early as 1130, the tenancy had a distinct name: Throcmortune, Trokemardtune, Trockmerton, Trochmerton, Throkmarton, etc. Wulfstan (Wulstan), Bishop of Worcester from 1062 to 1095, the era of the Conquest, mentions "three mansae at Throckmorton" (Henning, op. cit. ii, 580). This gives the place its name at or before the coming of William (1066), and if named as a place or holding, its holder had its name, of course; particularly if it had then the importance of three mansae. That is to say, it had risen to the dignity of being peopled by rent-holders of position: not merely by villeins, serfs and bondmen.

There was a John de Throckmorton at the beginning of the 13th century, for then Henry, son of John de Throckmorton, obtained half a hide of land from Mauger, Bishop of Worcester from 1199 to 1212. This was about 70 years after the date when Betham says there is doubt of Dugdale's statement, and more than 100 years after the place undoubtedly had its present name. (Pipe Rolls 22 Hen. II; 23 Hen. II, 65). Whatever the time, at any rate, the family took its name from the ancient seat in Worcestershire, over-looking the Avon, which to this day bears the ancient appellation. Did this holding of the Bishop, from its origin, stand in the name of those whose blood coursed in the veins of the Throckmortons mentioned as such in the 12th century? Did John Throckmorton, say, stand in direct descent from the very first tenant on this particular spot, or had there been a forfeiture and a reinvestment at any time? Probably not. There was no eviction.

The Conquest generally caused no disturbance of the tenancy of church lands. Particularly should this have been true of the lands under Wulfstan, then Bishop of Worcester, who was one of first and most persistent friends of the Norman line (Freeman, Vol. V, p. 51). So, we may believe, the first Throckmortons of the name were pure English in stock, allegiance and alliance.

They did not come with the Normans; they had "always" been there, under the Bishop, and long before the Conquest they had been Throckmorton in name because rightful tenants of the manor of that name in Fladbury (de Throckmorton). Again, there is nothing Norman, nor Norman-French in the name of the place itself. It is pure English (Anglo-Saxon), from end to end.

*There was also an Adam de Throckmorton, son of Robert (Testa de Neville, Rec. Comm. 41b.), who released to Bishop Blois, in the reign of Henry III, his right in a pasture near his parcary, or sheep-fold, at Throckmorton; for which the Bishop gave him five marks in silver. (Nash: Worcester, p. 452). This Adam held a virgate of land in Throckmorton about the beginning of the 13th century. (Testa de Neville, Rec. Comm. 41b). He dealt with a third part of a fee in Upton and Throckmorton in 1232-3 (Feet of Florence of Worcester, 17 Hen. III, No. 14); died before 1248. His son Robert Throckmorton was alive 1252 (Nash, op. cit. i, 452), and appears to have been succeeded before 1266 by his son, Simon Throckmorton (Excerpta e Rot. Fin.-Rec. Comm.-ii, 447).

†William Throckmorton, son of Joscelin, held a virgate of land in Throckmorton about the beginning of the 13th century (Testa de Neville, Rec. Comm. 41b).

Taylor: Words and Places, p. 100, et seq: The suffix ton constitutes a sort of test word by which we are enabled to discriminate the Anglo-Saxon settlements. It is the most common termination of English local names; and although it is a true Teutonic word, yet there is scarcely a single instance of its occurrence throughout the whole of Germany. The primary meaning of the suffix ton is to be sought in the Gothic tains, the old Norse teinn, and the Frisian tene, all of which mean a twig—a radical signification which survives in the phrase "the tine of a fork." In modern German we find the word zaun, a hedge, and in Anglo-Saxon we have the verb tynan, to hedge. Hence a tun or ton was a place surrounded by a hedge, or rudely fortified by a palisade. Originally it meant a single croft, homestead. or farm, and the word retained this restricted meaning at the time of Wycliffe. He translated Matt. xxii, 5: "But thei dispiseden, and wenten forth, oon into his toun another to his marchaundise."

Now the lower course of the Avon marks the extreme south-westerly extent of the Kingdom of Northumbria under Oswald, in his wars with the Welsh and their allies the Mercians. The name: Oswaldslaw, the name of the Hundred, perpetuates the historic fact. The realm, or law, of Oswald. One of the chieftains who followed Oswald in his activities, or rather one of the then Northumbrian families in the King's favor was that of Thorgrimr, from whom the present name of Thornthorpe in Northumberland takes its name. In Domesday this place is called Throgrmir still (Id. 211). This old name was in fact found as a surname in Worcestershire as late as the Visitation of Worcestershire in 1569, where we find (pp. 116, 147) "Throgryme; Throgrim; (Throgmer or Frogmer): Argent, on a bend engrailed cottised sable three mullets of the first."

I suggest that here we have the true etymology of the name THROG(CK)MORTON.

Commonly the ton names in England are composed of but two elements: a stem-word—a proper family name—plus the termination ton or tun. It is quite extraordinary to find a term of as many as four elements, seldom even three. *"The Rock Moor Town" (as generally given), strains the imagination. It must be admitted that all the elements claimed for the word according to the Rock-Moor theory, are good enough Anglo-Saxon. But roc, rock, is essentially not Saxon but Celtic, and is an interloper into the Anglo-Saxon, pure English, speech. Moor, mor, is good Anglo-Saxon, but it means exactly what the region about the old Throckmorton place was not. A mor was a barren, unfruitful place, strictly speaking an open, unenclosed place. Throckmorton, from the beginning, must have been in a fertile, fruitful country. A careful study of the published geology, soil and products of the immediate region, not forgetting the topography, as set forth in the Victorian History of Worcester and authorities which it cites, necessitates this view. Again, to say, rock-moor, would be in most instances supererogatory; for a moor is, among other things, likely to be rocky.

An alternative to the Throgmer-ton derivation, and surely a better than the rock-moor theory, is this: Ton, as above. Gemaera, A. S., boundary; from which, mere, a furrow used as a boundary line; a boundary stone. The word is used in Milton in that sense, according to the Int. Dict., and the Standard Dict. calls attention to such uses as: meresman, merestake, merestead, etc. Thaere, A. S. demonstrative adjective. (Thaere-gemaera-ton).

The fact that another of the three chapelries now composing the parish of Fladbury is named Moore, or Moor, does not detract from the theory that gemaera: mere, rather than mor, should be taken as the element in the name Throckmor(mer)ton. Because: Throckmorton stands but 106 feet above the sea, and surely not more than 10 to 20 feet above the slow-moving Avon or its bottom-lands. Moor is still lower down and nearer the Avon. The primitive character of the area was one of grassy meadows, running in places to boggy or swampy. There is nothing of the moor about the area at all. Back of Throckmorton, to the northeast, and separating it from the second seat of the family (Coughton), lie the Malvern Hills, which are composed of rocks in situ, and were in early times on the far border, looking south-westwardly, of the wooded, rougher area, of which the famous Forest of Arden, is the center. Coughton is about 200 feet above the tide, and its stream, the Arrow, is a comparatively swift-moving water. The river-names in this area are Welsh (Celtic); the town and settlement names, until we go just beyond the Throckmorton seat, are almost never at all Celtic; always English.

* The origin of the name has been given by some writers thus: "Th," a contraction of "at the," a prefix used with place names in the early days to indicate that the individual referred to dwelt in that place. "Rock," means just a rock. "Mor," is but the word moor. "Ton," is an enclosed or fortified dwelling place, that has developed the meaning of our modern town or city. Throckmorton therefore means "At the Rock-moor-town." Barring arbitrary assumption of the surname at some period, people bearing it may be sure of one thing, that their ancestry traces back to this town in medieval England.—(Public Ledger, Philadelphia, Pa., 1921).

Mere, the meadow; not mor, the moor, is the stem-word in both Throckmorton and Moor. Morton is Merton; not Moorton. Again: Mor, is an unenclosed place; ton, is an enclosed place. Moor-ton should be an unenclosed, enclosed place! A white black bird!!

Simeon Wilson Dixon, 1916.

Throckmorton, Throcmortune, Trotemertona, Trochemerton, Trokemerton, Trocmaretona, Throkemerton, Trokemareton, Trochmarton, Trokemertun, Trokemarton, Throgmerton, Throgmarton, Throkmorton, Frogmorton. This is a difficult name. If, as seems probable, we ought to take the first part to be throcmer(e), it is probably more than a coincident that there is a place called Þrocmere, with varying forms Þorcmere, Þorocemere, now Rockmoor Pond. This is a pond, and by Throckmorton there are two old moated areas. If so, it would seem that the whole name must mean "farm by the Þroc-mere." The exact sense of this word is uncertain, but the late Henry Bradley suggested to Dr. G. B. Grundy (Arch. Journ., ixxvi, 186) that the word was connected with the dialectal thurrock and meant drain. This found apparently by itself in Thurrock (Ess), D B Thurruca. Turroc.

It is of course possible that the first element was really Þrocmor later weakened to Throcmer. The element Þroc, in the sense suggested, would be equally appropriate with mor.

THROCKMORTONS OF WORCESTERSHIRE AND WARWICKSHIRE

The Hundred of Oswaldslaw

"The church of St. Mary of Worcester has a hundred called Oswaldslaw, in which hundred the Bishop holds Fledebirie (Fladbury). There are 40 hides that pay geld. In demeane are 7 hides, where are 9 ploughs, and (there are) a priest who has half a hide, and 23 villeins and 17 bordars with 19 ploughs. There are 16 serfs and 2 bondwomen, and a mill worth 10 shillings, and 20 stichs of eels (meaning that from the mill pond so many eels were to be had as revenue; there were 25 eels in a stich), and 50 acres of meadow. The woodland is 2 leagues long and half a league in width, and the Bishop has all its proceeds in hunting and honey and timber for the salt pans at (Droit) wich, and 40 shillings (also)." (Domesday)

Most of the manors in Oswaldslaw appear to have been let out by the Bishop on "riding service," which was that of attendance upon the Bishop in his journeys "from manor to manor." The Bishop was also entitled to circset from his tenants (which was one horse load of the best grain from each hide of land) and had the right of sepultra, i.e., the fees and profits from burials. Under the Norman, knight service was due to the Crown from the Bishop of Worcester and in 1166 there were 37½ knight's fees in this hundred. Wulfstan and certain other bishops of Worcester leased of the church lands to laymen,—usually for three lives. Succeeding Bishops were inclined to call such leases in question. (As an instance: that of one John Throckmorton, questioned by Bishop William Carpenter, against John's son Thomas.)

Throckmorton is not mentioned in Domesday, but according to Sir William Dugdale "John de Throckmorton was lord of the manor of Throckmorton in the vale of Evesham, about 60 years after the Norman Conquest, 1130, which leaves no room to doubt but what the family possessed it at the entrance of the Normans (1066) or long before." Also, "Henricus filius Johannis de TROCHEMERTON(E)" acknowledge the grant by Bishop Mauger (1199-1212) of half a hide claimed by him in Fladbury; another vigrate was held by "Adam de TROKEMERTUN(E)" in 1220-1221, etc. The manor of Bishampton (lying next north of that of Throckmorton) was held of the Bishop of Worcester in 1500-1 by Robert Throckmorton (Chan. Inq. p. m. ser. 2, xiv, 6). Thomas Throckmorton is said to have sold his land at Bishampton in 1615, holding rents from the land in Bishampton (Do. ccclxvii, 100), and Habington, about the middle of the 17th century, states that Mr. Throckmorton held land there (Habington, op. cit. i. 57), and Sir John Throckmorton in 1795 had certain quit-rents, heriots and services from land in Bishampton, due at his court of Throckmorton (Priv. Act, 35 Geo. III, cap. 4).

The Parish of Fladbury

The parish, now chapelry, of Throckmorton, at Domesday, was part of Fladbury, in which it was included until the 15th century.* The Throckmortons held land at Throckmorton in Fladbury from the days of William the Conqueror (or soon thereafter), on and on, to recent times. The name of Throckmorton still applies to the hamlet or parish which lies about 5 miles north of Evesham, on the Avon. The house stands on a sort of second level, rather more than 100 ft. above the sea, and a little above the low alluvial margin of the Avon, which is there a meadowy stream with low banks. The only portion of comparatively flat land in Worcester is the so-much sung "Vale of Evesham," along the Avon, which the Throckmorton house stands barely above and overlooks.

Sir John Throckmorton (d. 1445) by his marriage (1409) to Eleanor, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Guy Spiney, or de la Spine, of Cocton (Coughton), Warwickshire, Cocton (Coughton) passed into possession of the Throckmorton family, where it still remains. Sir John Throckmorton was the first lord of Coughton, of the name of Throckmorton, and so our attention belongs from thence to Coughton and later to Haseley (Victorian Hist. of Worcestershire, Vol. I.).

Church of St. John the Baptist

Under the tower of this church at Fladbury, is a large altar tomb of marble to Sir John Throckmorton (d. 1445), Eleanor his wife, and Thomas his son. At the west end of the nave is an undated Latin inscription to Godytha (Bosom), wife of Robert Olney. Her dau. Margaret, m. Thomas Throckmorton. The old communion plate was removed in 1801 to the chapels of Throckmorton and Wyre Piddle. The registers at Fladbury are as follows: (1) Baptisms and marriages from 1560 to 1630, burials 1560 to 1629. (2) Baptisms and burials from 1630 to 1713, marriages from 1630 to 1713, with gaps from 1640 to 1660. (3), (4), and (5), of later years.

The church of Throckmorton consists of a chancel 12½ by 16 feet, a central tower 11½ by 13½ feet, a nave about 45 by 17½ feet, and a small south aisle 4½ feet in width. All measurements taken inside. The chancel is of the 13th century. The registers before 1812 are: (1) Baptisms from 1546 to 1717, marriages from 1545 to 1717, and burials from 1661 to 1717. (2) Baptisms from 1717 to 1812, burials from 1721 to 1750, marriages from 1718 to 1754. (Vict. Hist. of Worcester, p. 361.)

The Manor of Throckmorton

The Manor of Throckmorton: Long. 2 deg. 2 min. West; Lat. 52 deg. 9 min. North. Altitude about 110 feet above tide. The Manor contains 1322 acres, of which 1017 are tillable and 492 of permanent grass. The land slopes toward the wash to Whitsun Brook, which flows south into the Avon about two miles away. The rocks underlying are Keuper red sandstone. To the north-east of Throckmorton between that manor and the manor of Coughton, lies a low extension of the Hagley, or Lickey Hills. An old writer, speaking of Warwickshire says:

"It is situated near the heart of England, and therefore participates with her in the best both of air and soil, wanting nothing either for the pleasure or profit of man. It may most accurately be described as the county of leafy lanes and beautiful rural panoramas. . . . The natural beauties of the shire have been enshrined by the 'poet of all times' in the fruitful imagery which he has drawn from its meadows and banks teeming with wild flowers of varied hue, its woodlands clustering on the hillsides, and its streams purling through many a sylvan nook and richly carpeted meadow."

Coughton Court

Coughton Court is two miles from Alcester, a mansion house prettily situated in well wooded grounds, watered by the river Arrow. At the southwest corner of the park, surrounded by a railing, is the base of an ancient cross. This point in ancient times was one of the entrances to the great "forest" of Arden (of which it is said, according to Elton, that even in modern times a squirrel might leap from tree to tree for nearly the whole length of the county) and it is said that at this cross travelers were in the habit of offering up their prayers for protection and deliverance from the robbers who haunted the recesses of the forest.

Coughton Court was noted by Leland* on his visit: "Mr. Throgmorton hathe a fayre maner place moated at Coughton." The manor came to the family in the reign of Henry IV (circa 1399-1415) and has remained in the same hands. The main feature of the mansion house is the central portion of the front, which was anciently the Gate-house, termed by Dugdale "that stately castle-like Gate-house of free stone." It was built by Sir George Throckmorton in the reign of Henry VIII, and his intention was "to have made the rest of his house suitable thereto (Turner: Shakespeare's Land, p. XIV). "The fine turret gateway is said to have been removed from Evesham at the dissolution. Some of the windows probably were brought from there. The principal parts of the house are of the best years of Henry VIII, but with numerous alterations of the worst period of Charles II. The gate house is a specially fine example of the early Tudor style, and the stone selected was so excellent that the details seem as fresh and clear as any work of recent date." (Timmins: Hist. of Warwickshire, London, 1889.)

The entire structure formerly consisted of a quadrangle surrounded by a moat which was spanned by a drawbridge, giving access to the gateway, which led into the quadrangle. During the Civil War the house was greatly injured, being set on fire in three places, Jan. 1644, by the Parliament forces. The damage was repaired, and at the same time the house was considerably altered, in the reign of Charles II, by Sir Francis Throckmorton. On the expulsion of James II, 1688, a Protestant mob from Alcester, on a day known as "Running Thursday," wrecked and pillaged the chapel, which formed the east side of the quadrangle, and about 1780 Sir Robert Throckmorton pulled down the remains of this side, filled up the moat, and converted the gateway into a hall, at the same time adding the stuccoed portions of the front of the house.

The gatehouse is a remarkably fine and well preserved specimen of its class, its tall octagonal turrets rising clear above the parapet. The spandrels of the archway contain the arms of Throckmorton, with quarterings. Over the door in gilt letters is: "Nisi dominus edificaverit domus, in vanum laboraverunt qui edificant eam." A fine oriel runs up from the archway to the battlement parapet, the windows on each stage being continued round the turrets, giving the whole structure an air of lightness and elegance. On the base of the oriel is the family crest, an elephant's head. The inner front of the gateway differs slightly from the exterior, the turrets being somewhat larger and the windows in them of a smaller character. Over the door in gilt letters is a versicle: "Nisi dominus custodierit domum frustra vigilat qui custodit eam." The north and south wings of the house are gabled half-timbered structures coated with rough cast, the gables on the south side having carved barge boards with finials of the Elizabethan period. The north side is covered by a very fine Wisteria Sinensis, of great age.

The hall, which is formed out of the ground floor of the gatehouse, is vaulted with fan tracery, and contains some tables of the Elizabethan period. At the foot of the staircase is a window of four lights, containing shields of arms, and the south-west window of the drawing-room on the first floor is similarly decorated. A newel staircase of twenty-nine steps leads from the first floor to the Tower Chamber, which contains an old stone mantle-piece. The turret in the northeast corner of this room was opened about 1860, and found to be hollow from top to bottom. In it were discovered two ladders tied together, which still remain, and which enabled persons to go up or down. At the bottom, thirty-six feet below, was a priest's hiding place, in which a portable altar-stone measuring six inches by four inches was discovered, marked with the usual consecration crosses, and was removed to the adjacent Catholic Church. There is a tradition that an underground passage leading from the priest's hiding-place exists underneath the field in front of the house to the road.

The dining-room in the south wing is paneled with oak in the style of the reign of Charles II, and contains a handsome oak mantle-piece, with the Yate and Packington arms, brought from Harvington, and also a chair made from the wood of the bed occupied by Richard III, the night after Bosworth Field.

The house contains a large collection of family pictures, among which the following are the most interesting:

Sir James Willford, in armour, anno. 1547 on panel;
Colonel Ambrose Throckmorton, temp. Charles I;
Sir Nicholas Throckmorton at the age of 49 (Throgmorton Street in London is named after him from its containing his town house);
Mary Throckmorton, wife of Thomas Fitzherbert, painted by her brother George;
Elizabeth, wife of Sir Robert Throckmorton, 8th. Bart., with her two eldest children, by Partridge;
Sir Thomas Throckmorton, first Bart., 1642;
Sir Francis Throckmorton, died 1680, by Zoust;
Ann Throckmorton, abbess of St. Augustine's Convent, Paris, 1730;
Robert Throckmorton, 1772, by Batone;
Ann, Lady Throckmorton, died 1728, by Lely;
Sir Charles Throckmorton, 1757-1826, with dog and gun, by Kosse;
Sir George Throckmorton, 1754-1826, by Phillips;
Mary, wife of Sir John Throckmorton, by Batoni;
Sir Robert Throckmorton, died 1580, on panel, one hand resting on a skull.

Catherine, wife of Sir Robert Throckmorton, 4th Bart, and daughter of George Collingwood, of Esslington, Northumberland;
Queen Katherine Parr, niece to Katherine, wife of Sir George Throckmorton, Knight;
William, 2nd Marquis of Powis, by Kneller;
Sir Robert Throckmorton, 1702-1791, by Rigaud;

In the passage is an old piece of carved oak, found at Ombersley, which contains a small shutter, like a buttery-hatch, through which it is conjectured alms and provisions were distributed to the poor. It bears the following inscription: "Domina Elisabeth Throgmorton, Abatissa de denne devs, LVII°°". After the dissolution, the abbess, who is buried in the church, took refuge at Coughton with two of her nuns, and occupied the Tapestry Bedroom.

Beyond the quadrangle, which is occupied by formal flower-beds, is an extensive lawn, with terrace-walks and fish-ponds, to the left of which is a remarkable and lofty hedge of clipped yew.

From October 29th to November 3rd, 1605, the house was occupied by Sir Everard Digby, who, on the plea that he wanted to attend a hunting match in the neighborhood with several friends, obtained the use of it from Thomas Throckmorton, the owner, then residing at Weston-Underhill, another family seat in Bucks. At the time of the discovery of the Gunpowder Plot, Fathers Greenway and Garnet, with Mrs. Brooksby and Ann Vaux, daughter of Lord Vaux, of Harrowden, were here awaiting the news of its success, and Bates, Catesby's servant, brought them the terrible tidings of its failure in a letter from Sir Everard Digby.*

In connection with this house is a ghost legend, the mystery of which has never been unraveled. Sometimes by day and at other times by night, weird footsteps are heard ascending the main staircase; they then proceed round the drawing-room to the south-west turret, where they die away, causing from the mysterious invisibility of the agency a feeling of superstitious awe in the minds of listeners. In the life-time of Sir Robert Throckmorton, the flooring of this turret was taken up, and an old short sword was discovered underneath the boards. This sword is now preserved at Buckland. According to tradition it was with this weapon that Sir Francis Smith, of Ashby Folville, rescued the King's standard at the battle of Edge Hill.

Church of St. Peter

In proximity to the house on the south side is the Church of St. Peter, which is in the late Perpendicular Style, probably built between 1486 and 1518 by Sir Robert Throckmorton. It consists of a chancel with two chapels and a clerestoried nave with aisles; the embattled tower with pinnacles is at the west end; the clock is dated 1690. At the east end of the north aisle is a turret, which probably contained the staircase to the rood-loft. The interior contains numerous monuments to the Throckmorton family. In the center of the nave is a high tomb of mottled colored marble, intended to be the burial place of Sir Robert Throckmorton who died on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land about 1520. It has since been appropriated as the resting-place of Sir Robert Throckmorton, 4th Bart., d. 1791, of his grandson Sir John Throckmorton, d. 1819, and of Mary, his wife, d. 1821.

Under the arch, between the chancel and the north chantry chapel is the high tomb of mottled marble of Sir George Throckmorton, knight, d. 1558, and Lady Catherine, his wife. On the opposite (south) side of the chancel, within the altar rail, is a large tomb with a canopy supported by columns, with effigies of Sir John Throckmorton (d. 1580) and Dame Margerie, his wife, holding each other's right hand. On two sides are kneeling figures of nine children, one a baby in swathing bands. (Engraved in Dugdale's Warwickshire.)

Under the arch, between the chancel and the south chantry chapel is a plain, high tomb, the sides divided into compartments containing shields and an inscription to Sir

* The Gunpowder Plot was principally the work of Robert Catesby of Lapworth and Bushwood in Warwickshire. It was proposed (among other things) to seize Prince Charles or the Princess Elizabeth, then living at Combe Abbey near Coventry, as she was chosen to be the Roman Catholic representative and to be married to some Roman Catholic peer. Catesby's father had been frequently fined and imprisoned for recusancy and Robert seems to have been formerly a Protestant, when he married Catherine, dau. of Sir Thomas Leigh of Stoneleigh; but his mother was a Roman Catholic,—one of the Throckmortons of Coughton Court. He associated himself (inter alios) with Guido Fawkes, and the plan was discussed and extended at . . . Coughton. The Warwickshire share was to be accomplished through a hunting match at Dunsmore near Dunchurch, and on receipt of news of the success of the plot in London, the local conspirators were to ride to Combe Abbey and carry off the Princess Elizabeth. Before midnight, 5 Nov., 1605, the news was brought by Catesby, Rokewood, and others who had ridden post haste from London that Fawkes had been taken the night before and that the plot had failed. The chiefs fled. They passed by and alarmed Coughton Court in their flight.
(Timmins: Hist. of Warwickshire, London, 1889.)

Robert Throckmorton, son and heir of Sir George Throckmorton, with laudatory verses in Latin. The date has not been inserted, but should be 1580. The north chantry chapel once had a brass plate to the memory of Dame Elizabeth Throckmorton (aunt to Sir George Throckmorton), the last abbess of Denny, near Waterbeach, in Cambridgeshire, who d. 13 Jan., 1547. This plate has recently (written 1893) been stolen. (Turner: Shakespeare's Land, p. 181.)

There is considerable quantity of stained glass of the late 15th century in the north chapel, probably German. A Roman Catholic chapel dedicated to SS. Peter and Paul and St. Elizabeth was built by the Throckmorton family in 1855.

Leland's "Itinerary" (1535-43) says: "The Paroche church of Coughton is very faire, excedyingly well glasyd and adornyd, partly mad by Sir George Throgmorton's father, partly by Ser George hym selfe. There is a goodly tombe in the body of the church made by Sir George's father, that dyed in peregrination going to Hierusalem. From Coughton to Alcester 2 myles by enclosid ground. I markyd the countrye about Coughton and Alcester to be meatly well woodid. Part of the forest of Fekenham in Worcestershire is withe in 3 miles of Coughton."

MANUSCRIPTS, STATE PAPERS AND OFFICIAL CALENDARS

Concerning the Throckmorton Family

Among the MSS. at Coughton, Co. Warwick, an ancient seat of the Throckmortons, are charters relating to many ancient holdings of the family, among which are: Astwood; Aedebury (Co. Oxon.); Aspus (Co. Warw.); Brouctone (Brocton); Cliftone; Chechele; Ekyntone; Emberton; Filgrave; Fladbury; Gayhurst; Helpistone; Hortone; Hanslape; Hyde; Lathbury; Lavendone; Middleton-Keyes; Olney; Plumberwe; Newport Pagnel; Rokkesdone; Ravenstone; Springtone; Staverton; Schadewell; Stodham; Sutton; Stoke-Goldington; Syngleberwe; Turvye; Wodeberghe; Weston-Underwood; Windsor; Wytlebury (priory of).

(Hist. MSS. Comm. Rep't, Vol. 3, p. 256-60.)

Title: The manuscripts of Sir N. William Throckmorton, Bart., at Coughton Court, Warwickshire. This series of documents is at once extensive, ancient and interesting. It embraces title deeds of the estates which are or once were the property of the family of Throckmorton and its branches. The charters begin with the early part of the reign of Henry III (1216-1272) and come down to the year 1680. There is also a voluminous series of miscellaneous documents: as letters, papers, etc., derived from various sources. The entire collection is in a strong room, apparently fire-proof, which leads off from the principal stair-case. The smaller documents are in eight oaken chests, and the larger ones are placed on shelves. One other ancient iron-bound chest the commissioners were not in 1872 able to open. At a later time, before 1885, this chest was opened, and found to contain many other old documents, the contents not yet, it seems, particularized. A very large folio volume of 1800 to 2000 documents, contains the ancient charters relating to the family estates. (see supra.)

A few of the documents enumerated by the Commission, are:

Compotus Henrici de Dereham de manerio domini Roberti le Finel apud Westone a festo S. Michaelis anno regni regnis Edwardi (primi) XXIX, finiente usque festum B. Petri ad Vincula proxima sequens. (date: 1267).

A license from Henry VI (1422-1461) to Mary Throckmorton to grant lands to the Abbott of Evesham.

A lease by the Abbott of Evesham to Robert Throckmorton of the manor of Samburne, 8 March 29 Henry VIII, together with various documents connected with said manor.

The last will and testament of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick and of Albemarle, made by me at Rouene the last daie of Averyle the yere of our Lorde MCCCCXXIX. (Note.—Another authority somewhere, says this will was dated at Caversham, 8 Aug. 1435, and that the testator died at Rouen, April, 1439. One of the six executors was his faithful knight John Throckmorton.)

A roll respecting the property of the said Earl.

A commission from Pope John (XXIII) to Thomas Balsing, canon of Hereford authorizing him to sanction the alienation of the manor of Throckmorton (Warw.), if he finds it to the advantage of the Bishop of Hereford; dated Constance, 2 kal. Feb., 5 pont. (31 Jan. 1415)

A commission from Pope Martin (V) to the abbott of Pershore authorizing him to permit the alienation of the manor of Throckmorton if he finds it to the benefit of the Bishop of Worcester. Geneva, 7 id. Julii, 1 pont. (9 July 1418)

Original rent rolls of the manor of Weston-Underwood, from 1444 to 1471.

Wills of various members of the Throckmorton family from 1518 to 1700.

A letter from "Jo. Cantuar" (John Whitgift, Archbishop of Canterbury) to Sir Thomas Heneage, about the custody of Mr. Throckmorton, a papist Recusant. Lambert, 21 Jan. 1587.

A rental book of the manor of Chadsley-Corbet and other estates, from 1586 to 1598, also from 1596 to 1605.

Household expenses at Coughton, 1585.

A manuscript: "The Life and Death of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton," a poem of 57 pages. There is another copy of this, transcribed in 1618, at Buckland House, Faringdon, and two others in the British Museum: Harl. 6353 and Add. 5841.

"Gens Throckmortiona; or a history of the family of Throckmorton"; a folio in the handwriting of Sir Robert Throckmorton.

A History and Pedigree of the ancient family of Throckmorton, by Brown Willis, Esq., compiled in 1730 from the family papers at Coughton. This still remains in manuscript, but was used by Miss Strickland in her "Lives of the Queens of England."

Antiquities, from Mr. Abingdon's MSS. of Throckmorton and Fladbury.

Extracts from Domesday book, relating to Weston and other places belonging to the Throckmorton family.

Licenses to recusants, permitting them to travel beyond five miles from their place of residence, granted to members of the Throckmorton family, from 1618 to 1639, with a few dated 1645 to 1671.

(Note: The reporter of the above for the MSS Comm. was Rev. Jos. Stevenson.)

The manuscripts belong to Sir N. William Throckmorton, Bart., kept at Buckland House, Faringdon. The documents relate to the early history of the ancient family of Throckmorton, extending as far back as the beginning of the reign of Henry III, are deposited partly at Coughton Court and partly at Buckland House near Faringdon. It was intended that the more ancient charters and papers should remain at Coughton, where a fire-proof room was built for their safe custody, and that the more modern records should be placed in the library at Buckland.

Among many others at Buckland is a volume on vellum, written in the 15th century, with the title: "Here begynneth the Mirrour of Sinners." It begin thus: "For that we ben in the way of this fayling liffe and oure dayes passene as a schadowe, therefore it nedithe ful ofte to recorde in owre mynde that thing that oure frealte and oure dedly sykeness makith us ofte to forget."

(From Hist. MSS. Comm. Vol. 10, part IV, pp. 168-176.)

The Legend of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton

An historical poem, consisting of 229 stanzas of six lines each. It gives in a vague fashion the chief facts of the life and death of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton. It professes to be spoken by Throckmorton's ghost to his nephew, after the manner of the poems in the Mirrour for Magistrates. It begins:

"In bed I lay, forcasting how to live,
Devising means by credit to arise;
Then haughtie heart 'gainst base estate did strive,
And I suppos'd the meaner sort unwise;
Sith ev'ry man doth frame his proper lot:
The poorest soul is still the simplest sot."

The authorship is uncertain. It was first printed from a badly copied manuscript at Coughton Court by Francis Peck in an appendix to his Life of Milton in 1740, and was inaccurately assigned by Peck to Sir Nicholas's nephew, "Sir Thomas Throckmorton, of Littleton, in Com. Warw. Kt." Apparently the person intended was Thomas Throckmorton "esquire" (son of Sir Nicholas' brother, Sir Robert Throckmorton), who died 13 March, 1614-15, aged 81, and was buried at Weston Underwood, Buckinghamshire. (Lipscomb: Buckinghamshire, iv. 399). Charlotte Carmichaels Stopes in "Shakespeare's Warwickshire Comtemporaries" declares "there are no grounds for this opinion. Sir Thomas Throckmorton spent much of his life in prison for the old faith and he would not call it 'superstition' or speak of 'spiteful Papist.' The editor, John Cough Nichols suggests it may have been Job Throckmorton, or John, son of Anthony Throckmorton of Castleton, youngest brother of Sir Nicholas. But I think it much more likely to have been Edmund Neville." (Id. Chap. viii).

"The Legend of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton is itself a literary curiosity and deserves to be better known; for though a very humble imitation of Spenser, there are passages in it by no means unworthy of the Elizabethan age." (Criminal Trials: Library of Entertaining Knowledge.)

A copy of Peck's Life of Milton is found in the Boston Library,—London Printed MDCC, XL. A facsimilie copy of the poem is in possession of the compiler. Several stanzas are found in Strickland's "Lives of the Queens of England."

Manufacturing Celerity

Some years ago, a gentleman made a bet of one thousand guineas, that he would have a coat made in the course of a single day (between sunrise and sunset, or 16 hours), from the first process of shearing the sheep, to its completion by the tailor. The wager was decided at Newbury, on the 25th of June 1811, by Mr. John Coxeter, of Greenham Mills, near that town. At five o'clock that morning, Sir John Throckmorton, Bart., presented two South-Down wether sheep to Mr. Coxeter. Accordingly the sheep were shorn, the wool spun, the yarn spooled, warped, loomed, and woven; the cloth burred, milled, rowed, dyed, dried, sheared, and pressed, and put into the hands of the tailors, by four o'clock that afternoon; and at twenty minutes past six, the coat, entirely finished, was presented by Mr. Coxeter to Sir John Throckmorton, who appeared with it before an assemblage of upward of 5000 spectators, who rent the air with their acclamations. (The Little Gem, pp. 76-7, John J. Spowers, 187 Fulton St. Brooklyn, 1845.)

A picture hangs in the front hall at Coughton Court of the occasion, a parchment of the bet is also framed there, and the identical coat hangs in a glass case.

But read the words of Sallust: ". . . Their ancestors have left all things which are in their power to leave them . . . the noble recollection of themselves."

THROCKMORTONS, OF COUGHTON, WARWICKSHIRE, ENGLAND

Created Baronet, September 1, 1642

---

1. JOHN de THROCKMERTON, according to Sir William Dugdale, was lord of the manor of Throckmorton, in the Vale of Evesham, about 60 years after the Norman Conquest, 1130; which leaves no room to doubt but what this family possessed it at the entrance of the Normans (1060), or long before, the etymology of the name being either British, or Saxon. From this John descended,

2. HENRY de THROCKMERTON,* who made a grant of a yard of land in Hulla, temp. Henry III, 1220.

3. ROBERT de THROCKMORTON, his son (I presume), 1252. He gave the king half a mark for a writ, &c breve vi & armis habendo coram justic, ad primam assissam, &. (Rot. fin. ajusd. Ann. M. 7), and mandate thereupon was to the sheriff of Worcester, &c. He had issue,

4. SIMON de THROCKMORTON, who, with Isabel, his wife, 1266, paid half a mark to have a writ of oyer and terminer ad bancum; and a mandate thereupon was directed to the sheriff of Worcestershire. Simon was buried at Fladbury. Had issue: John and Giles,† which last had an annual revenue out of the manor of Throckmorton, 1330.

5. JOHN THROCKMORTON, the eldest, was possessed of Throckmorton, 1339, and m. Agnes, or Anne, dau. and heiress of Sir Richard Abberbury, in Oxon., and was succeeded in the lorship of Throckmorton by,

6. THOMAS THROCKMORTON, his son and heir, who was of the retinue of Thomas Beaucamp, Earl of Warwick, 20 Rich. II (1399) and also escheator for the county of Worcester in 3 Henry IV (1403),—in those days an office of great trust; he was constable of Elmley Castle, 6 Hen. IV (1406). Made a lease of the manor of Throckmorton in 1410-11 (Ft. of Fl. of Worc. 12 Hen. No. 26). By Agnes, his wife, dau. and heiress of Sir Alexander Besford, he was father of

* "Henricus filius Johannis de Trochemerton(e) acknowledged the grant by Bishop Mangus (1199-1212) of half a hyde claimed by him in Fladbury, this deed being assigned by Mr. Poole to circa 1200." (Hist. MSS. Comm. Rep. XIV, App. viii, 194.)

† Visitations of Gloucester, Norfolk and Warwickshire, also Harl. MSS. 1041, fo. 65; 1543, fo. 64, all give Robert as son of Simon. While Johnson & Kimber, and Betham state that: "Simon had issue two son,—John and Giles." "Robert de Throckmorton, son of Simon, 4 Edw. II, obtained a dispensation from the Bishop of Worcester, 1275 (Reg. G. Giffard—Worc. Hist. Soc., 81; Habington op. cit. i. 227). In 1299 Robert was holding three virgates of land in Throckmorton, and also 2½ hides for which he had to defend the manor of Fladbury from suit at the County Court (Red Book of Bishop of Worcester, fol. 69). Robert was living in 1315-16 (Cal. Inc. p. m. 10-20 Edw. II, 409). Note: Perhaps identified with that Robert de Throckmorton who, in 1333-4, settled four messuages and also land in Throckmorton upon his son John, and Maud his wife, with remainder to his other children: Nicholas, Sybil, Alice and Joan (Feet of Fl. of Worcester, Hiliary Term, 7 Edw. III, No. 9).

Robert had issue two sons: John and Giles, etc. (as above). The manor of Throckmorton itself seems to have passed to his son Giles, for a messuage and two carucates of land in Throckmorton settled in 1341-2 upon Giles and his wife Agnes, and their sons: Robert, John, Thomas and Richard, in tailmale (Ft. of Fl. of Worc. Trinity Term, 15 Edw. III, No. 5)." From this on the lineage goes on as given above.

7. SIR JOHN THROCKMORTON* (d. 1445), who was under-treasurer of England. According to Dugdale he was "brought up to the study of laws and was afterwards of the King's council." He became a clerk in the treasury and, in time of Henry IV's reign, was granted lands in Fladbury for his services by the Bishop of Worcester: "14 messuages and two carucates of land in Throckmorton at a fee-farm rent" (Cal. Rot. Pat. in turri; Londin, pp. 264, 340). In 1417-18 he was in attendance on Richard de Beaucamp, earl of Warwick, at Caen, of which the earl had been appointed governor on its surrender to Henry V. Elected knight of the shire for Worcestershire in the parliament summoned to meet 19 Nov., 1414, and returned for the same constituency 1420, 1422, 1432. In 1426 he was a commissioner, with sundry other persons of eminence, for raising a loan of money in Warwickshire. In 1431 he was appointed one of the Earl of Warwick's attorneys during his absence abroad, and in the same year was retained as a member of Warwick's council for life with a salary of 20 marks per ann. On the earl's death, 1439, Throckmorton was joined in authority with Richard, Duke of York, Richard, Earl of Salisbury, and sundry other persons of quality, for the custody of all castles, lordships, etc., belonging to the said earl, during the minority of Henry, his son and heir. In 1433 he was made "surveyor of the administration of effects" of Edmund, Earl of March (Rot. Parl. IV, 471). In 1434 and again in 1440 he served on the commission of peace in Warwickshire. In the latter year he was styled chamberlain of the exchequer and under-treasurer of England (Nicholas, Acts of Privy Council, V, 81). He died 1445, leaving Eleanor, his wife, who was dau. and co-heiress of Sir Guy de la Spine,† or Spineto (by the heir of Wyke) lord of Coughton, in Warwickshire. By this marriage of Throckmorton (1409), Cocton (Coughton) passed into the possession of the Throckmorton family.

In accordance with his will, dated at London, April 12, 1445, he was buried in the church of St. John the Baptist, Fladbury (Nash: Worc., I, 452):

"Under the tower of this church is a large altar tomb of marble to John Throckmorton who d. 1445, and Eleanor, his wife, and Thomas, his son. It was removed from its former position in the church (1865 to 1871). On the slab are the brass figures of a man in armour and a lady with five shields, one of which is missing. The other four have the arms of Throckmorton impaled Azure a fesse or with three pheons thereon." (Vict. Hist. of Worc., p. 361). The brass figure of Sir John is engraved in Rev. H. Haine's: Military Brasses, IV Century, Part I.

Sir John Throckmorton by his testament bequeathed his body to be buried in the parish church of St. John the Baptist; appointed that his executors should provide a marble stone of such largeness, that it might cover the graves of his father, mother, and his own, with his wife's, in case she should determine to be buried there; and constituted Rauf Boteler, Lord Sudley, then treasurer of England, his overseer, departed this life the same year as appears by probate thereof. He m. in 1409, Alinora (Eleanor), dau. of Sir Guy Spiney, by whom he had two sons and six daus.:

1. Thomas, of whom later; 2. John, m. Isabel, dau. of Edward Bruges of Lone, Gloucestershire, Esq. (from whom descended Sir William Throckmorton of Tortworth, Gloucestershire, created baronet, 9 James I—1576—, which title is extinct). 3. Eleanor, m. Richard Knightly of Fawsley, Northamptonshire, Esq.; 4. Maud (called Matilda), m. Sir Thomas Green, of Greens Norton, Northamptonshire, Knt. She was the great-grandmother of Katherine Parr, Queen Consort to Henry VIII, 1543-1547. In a list of Monumental Brasses in the British Isles XV Cent. Part I is this:

"Northamptonshire, Greens Norton. Sir Thos. Grene, 1462, and widow Matilda (dau. of John Throckmorton, Esq., under-treasurer of England), with three sons (lost): Thomas, ———, John, and one daughter, Elizabeth, marg. inscription, large, once an Altar Tomb." Inscription: "Hic jacet Thomas Greene, miles Dms de Norton et Matilda ux. ejus Dni ero Thomas fuit filio et heres Thomas Greene milit Dni ed eddm et Philippe, uxus ejus, filie Robert; Dni Ferrarrs de Charteley Elizabeth uxis ejus, filie Thome Le Spencer, qui guide Thomas Greene, Pater predicte Thome Greene fuit filius et heres Thome Greene Militis Dni de Norton, predico, et Marie uxis ejus, fille Tici Dni Talbot." (Halstead: Gen. Proofs.)

5. Margaret, m. John Rous; 6. Agnes, m. John Winslow; 7. Elizabeth, m. Robert Russell, and according to some pedigrees another Elizabeth, m. Robert Gifford, and by others—Seymour.

8. SIR THOMAS THROCKMORTON, eldest son and heir, m. 1446, Margaret, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Robert Olney, of Weston, in Bucks., Knt. (by Goditha, his wife, dau. and co-heiress of William Bosum, or Bosun), by whom he had four sons and four daus.: 1. Robert, of whom later; 2. John, m. Jane, dau. and co-heiress of Henry Baynard, of Spelshull, Suffolk, and was ancestor to the Throckmortons of Claxton, and Southelham, &c in Norfolk and Suffolk; 3. Richard, ancestor to those of Great Stoughton in Huntingdonshire; 4. William, LL.D.; 5. Goditha, wf. Edward Peyton, of Chesterton, Warwickshire; 6. Mary, wf. Thomas Middlemore, of Edgbarton, Warwickshire; 7. Margaret, wf. Sir William Tracy, of Tuddington, Gloucestershire, Knt. (d. 1530); 8. Elizabeth, the last abbess of Denny, d. 13 Jan., 1547, and lies buried at Coughton.

The "14 massuages and 2 carucates of land in Throckmorton" granted to his father by the Bishop of Worcester at a fee-farm rent,* was called into question by John Carpenter, a succeeding Bishop, who so much disliked the alienation of Throckmorton that he threatened to excommunicate the prior and monks of Worcester on account of it, whereupon they sued to the Archbishop of Canterbury to send for Thomas, son of John Throckmorton (John having d. 1445) and command him to give satisfaction to the Bishop. But "thys lounge contention beeinge in the end utterly extinguished, thys good Bishopp entred into such a leauge of fryndshyp with Thomas Throckmorton as in Testimony of his charitye he entertayned him to be Stuarde of all hys Castelles, Mannors, etc., with a fee of 10 li. per annum." (Hab. op. cit. i. 425). Diplomatic Thomas!

In 26 Henry VI, Sir Thomas and his mother gave lands of six marks per ann. to the monks of Evesham, for the maintenance of a priest to sing divine service perpetually at the altar of our Lady, in the church of Evesham, for the estate of King Henry VI, Queen Margaret, his consort, and of the said Eleanor and Thomas during this life; and for the health of their souls after their departure hence; and also for the souls of the said king's father and grandfather, late kings of England; of Catherine, late queen of England; and for the soul of John Throckmorton before specified, Thomas his father, and Anne, his mother, with their ancestors, and all faithful deceased. Which king also (in consideration of the good service performed by the said John Throckmorton, to himself, and to Henry IV and V, his father and grandfather, late kings of England, in the office of Chamberlain of the Exchequer), gave further license to them, 14 May, 1448, the said Thomas and Eleanor, that they, or either of them, or the heirs of the longer liver of them, might found a chantry to be called "Throkmerton Chaunterie" of one priest, to sing divine service every day during the estate of him the said king, and of all those above mentioned; and to endow the same lands to the value of 10 lb. per ann.* Till the time of said Thomas Throckmorton, it seems that this family was not wholly possessed of Coughton, but than did John Tracy, son and heir of Alice, the other dau. and co-heiress of Sir Guy Spine, by his deed, bearing date May 29, 28 Henry VI (1449), grant unto him, the said Thomas, and his heirs, that moiety thereof by inheritance belonged to him. Of which Thomas, all I have seen farther memorable is, that 5 Edw. IV, he underwent the office of Sheriff of the counties of Warwick and Leister, and that he departed this life in 1474.

9. ROBERT THROCKMORTON, ESQ., son and heir, 21 years old at his father's death, was a justice of peace for Warwickshire, from 2 Rich. III (1485) till towards his death. In I Hen. VII (1486) he was made of the king privy council, and in 1487, he made the park at Coughton, enclosing therewith a certain common ground called Wikewood, whereunto he afterwards added Samburne Heath, and Spiney's Leys lying within the said lordship of Samburne. In the same year was a commander in the king's army at the battle of Stoke. In 10 Hen. VII (1496) he received summons, with divers other persons of quality, to appear before the king in person, upon the Feast Day of All Saints (Nov. 1), to receive the order of Knight of the Bath, upon advancement of Henry, the king's 2d son, to the dukedom of York. (Dugdale does not find this title attributed to him until 1502).

He was a man of singular piety, the sundry bequests contained in his testament do sufficiently manifest; and of no less devotions, as may be seen by his pilgrimage to the Holy Land, which in 10 Henry VIII (having settled his estate) he undertook; but died beyond sea in that journey, 1519 (and his body was never placed in the beautiful tomb he had prepared for it at Coughton!). By his testament, bearing date 1518, he "Bequeathed his body to be buried in the church at Coughton, in case he should die within this realm; appointing that not above 6 L- 13 s- 4 d, should be spent at his funeral; and directed that after his burial there should be said for his soul, in the monasteries of Studley and Evesham, 30 masses to Jusu; every priest to have 4 d for his labour; and willed that the east window of the chancel at Coughton should be glazed at the charge of his executors; also, that 20 s should be given to the glazing of the east window of the north aisle there, with the representation of the seven sacraments; and as much for the east window of the south side, that to be of seven works of mercy. He also willed that the image of our Lady should be set on the north side, at the end of the altar, in the south aisle; and that the image of the angel Gabriel on the same side of the aisle; at the pillar between the aisle and the chancel, the image of St. Raphael, painted and gilded; and that in the north aisle, at the north end of the altar, the image of the Trinity; to be placed at the south end, the image of St. Michael; all of which images to be richly painted and gilded.

And he farther willed, that certain lands to the value of 16 L per annum, should be put into the hands of feoffees, to the use of a priest to sing perpetually, in the north aisle of Coughton church, for his soul, and the souls of his ancestors; and that the south aisle should be called Trinity chapel, and the priest, the Trinity priest; which priest was also to teach a grammar school freely, for all his tenants' children, and to have yearly thereof 8 L and his chamber; but the residue of the said 16 L to be paid monthly to five poor men

* William Lane, the chantry priest, obtained a license in 1547 to grant all lands belonging to the chantry to George Throckmorton. In 1549 the chantry was dissolved and the chantry house seems to have been granted to Stephen Hales. (Vict. Hist. Worc.) dwelling in the almshouse, at Coughton, viz.: every one 6*d* a week and his house-room forever; the residue, viz.: 8*s*- 8*d* to go to the reparation of the alms-house; and that the said priest should every Sunday, say a mass of the Trinity; Wednesday, mass of requiem; and Friday, mass of Jesu, in case he was disposed; and once in the week, dirge for his soul and all christian souls, except the days before rehearsal fell upon double festivals. Which poor men, so placed in the alms-house, to be chosen out of those that had been his tenants, or serving men, at the discretion of his son and heir, and heirs successively; advertising his son and heir, that if he should so amortize this land for those uses, that none should break his will under pain of the church's curse; which will was dated Aug. 10, 1518; proved Nov. 9, 1520.

Robert Throckmorton left issue by his 1st wife, Elizabeth, dau. of ——— Baynham, only one daughter: Ursula, wife of Sir Thomas Gifford, of Chillington, Straffordshire, Knt.; and by his 2d wife, Catherine, dau. of Sir William Marrow, Knt., alderman of London, and his wife Catherine, dau. of Thomas Rich, of London, Mercer, he had 4 sons and 7 daus.: 1. Sir George, see later; 2. Anthony, m. Catherine, dau. of Wm. Willington, Esq., of Barcheston; he was killed in the battle of Pavia, Italy, 1525; 3. Michael, who became the trusted follower, secretary and friend of Cardinal Reginald Pole. Henry's wrath at the position Pole took against his divorce forced Michael to stay abroad during his reign, but on the accession of Mary he was welcomed in England, and she granted him many of the Warwickshire manors of the attainted John (Dudley), Duke of Northumberlain. Among these was Haseley, which he handed over to his nephew, Clement, next year. He finally took up his residence at Mantua, Italy, where he died 1 Nov., 1558, and lies buried "under a faire tomb." He is credited with the authorship of a volume entitled "a copy of a very fyne and wytty letter sent from the ryght reuerende Lewes Lippomanus, byshop of Verona in Italy," London, 1556, 8vo. His son Francis was famous for his hospitality to the English travelers at Mantua where he lived, notwithstanding his burial at Ullenhall, parish of Wootton Wauen, Warwickshire, 1617. 4. Richard, seneschal of the duchy of Lancastershire; m. Jane, dau. of Humphrey Beaufo, of Warwickshire. 5. Mary, wf. of Thomas Burdet of Bramcote, Warwickshire, also of Richard Middlemore, of Edgbaston, do., Esqs. 6. Elizabeth, wf. of Sir Thomas Englefield, Knt.* 7. Catherine, wf. of ——— Boughton, of Lawford, Warwickshire, Esq. 8. Ursula; 9. Bridget; 10. Alice, d. unm.; 11. Margaret, became a nun. (Will of Sir Robert mentions his daus. thus: Mary Burdet, Margaret Joyce, Alice, Ursula and Anne.)

10. SIR GEORGE THROCKMORTON, eldest son, succeeded, and was one of those that attended in court at the coronation of Anne Boleyn; in 25 Henry VIII (1534) and in 18 and 35 Henry VIII (1527, 1544) executed the office of sheriff for the counties of Warwick and Leicester. He built the tomb for himself and wife, Catherine, and also that stately castle-like gate-house of freestone (of material taken from the dismantled monastery at Evesham), at Coughton, intending to have made the rest of his house suitable thereto; but Lord Cromwell, vicar general to the king, being lord of the manor of Oversley, in Warwickshire, and beholding with a rapacious eye this estate, lying in the vale below, had him imprisoned in the Tower (1540) for refusing the oath of supremacy,† though he was ready to lay down his life for the same principle as Bishop Fisher and Sir Thomas More professed. But Katherine Parr, niece of Sir George's lady, begged the life of her uncle, and was so great a friend to him, as to procure preferments for his sons,—Clement, Nicholas and George; and when the Lord Cromwell fell into disgrace, the king was pleased to advise with Sir George, amongst others, in what manner to proceed with that unfortunate statesman. Sir George afterwards had the manor of Oversley granted to his heirs,‡ in exchange for lands in Bedfordshire, and the sum of 744 L. 9 s. 2 d., which manor was forfeited by the attainder of the Lord Cromwell. (W. Betham: Baronetage of England.)

Sir George is frequently mentioned in the metrical chronicle of the Legend of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton (see Agnes Strickland: Lives of the Queens of England), which also introduces Katherine Parr, whose father was a half-brother of Lady Throckmorton, and who at the time of Sir George's imprisonment was the wife of a zealous Catholic peer and herself a member of the church of Rome. It was probable from the eloquent lips of this strong-minded and intrepid lady, when pleading for the life of her uncle, that Henry learned the extent of Cromwell's rapacity. Sir George m. Catherine, dau. of Nicholas, Lord Vaux of Harrowden, and Elizabeth Fitz-Hugh, widow of Sir William Parr, K.G. He was made Keeper of the House of the Lady Anne Cleves, and to have the government thereof. (Acts Priv. Council, 26 May, 1553). His life is best illustrated in the career of his large family of 9 sons and 11 daus.: 1. Sir Robert, of whom later. 2. Kenelm, of whom nothing remarkable is recorded except that objecting to the old family names for his children, he gave them outlandish ones, such as Octavian, Marpollian, Theodorus, Constantine, Mymsbrey, etc. The certificate of levy for the hundred of Dunmow, Essex, is signed by him, 1593. 3. Deodatus. 4. Clement, of Haseley, in Warwickshire; he and his brother Nicholas accepted Protestantism. He was cupbearer in the Queen's household, 17 Hen. VIII, 1536 (Harl. MS. 642). A commander at the siege of Boulogne, and upon the dissolution of the abbeys, had several ample grants from the king and his successors, Edw. VI and Queen Elizabeth (Betham: Baronetage of Eng.); 1554 he assessed the value of the College of Stratford-upon-Avon (Book of Fees & Annuities, No. 69, P.R.O.) and had a life annuity from its income. On him, probably on account of his literary tastes, his Catholic uncle Michael settled Haseley, 1553-5. He was justice of the peace, and is often noted in the records; m. Katherine Neville, dau. of Sir Edward, and had seven daus. and six sons, of whom the eldest, Job, succeeded him. At the Inquisition Post-mortem of Clement's property, 1 April, 1575, it is stated that he had extensive lands at Claverdon and elsewhere in Warwickshire; that Haseley had been settled upon himself and his wife for life, then on his son Job and his heirs male, then on his other sons, failing whom, on his brothers in the following order: Anthony, Kenelm, George, John, Nicholas, Robert, or their heirs male. 5. Sir Nicholas (1515-1571), separately noticed. 6. Thomas, who d.s.p. 7. George, at the siege of Boulogne, where he was wounded and taken prisoner; the French wanted a thousand pounds for his ransom, as they heard he was of the king's kindred. "His wife Frances seemed to have been fond of resorting to those that used palmistry and enchantments. He said she was wishing to poison and destroy him. He accused her himself, and bullied the witnesses, threatening them with prison and rack if they did not confess just what he told them. Lady Elizabeth Chandos wrote to Lord Robert Dudley complaining that her daughter, wife of Sir George Throckmorton, was kept a close prisoner in the Fleet; being with child, it was a great risk to her. The charge was witchcraft and sorcery, but the accused protests her innocence. Sir George brings forward some witnesses, poor people of no credit, who speak of things said to have happened several years ago, but she denies them (Add. MS. 32091, f. 176). Lady Elizabeth also wrote to Cecil, 20 Aug., 1559, asking him to favor her daughter, Frances Throckmorton, whose innocence will be apparent if she has impartial judges. A new set of judges had up the old witnesses before them, and unravelled the truth. The second judgment was that the lady was overmuch given to fantastical practices of palmistry and such like devices, but that she had made no attempt to poison her husband. On the contrary, her efforts had only been initiated to win his perfect love. (State Papers, Dom. Ser. Eliz., vi. 24 & vii. 42). Sir George left sons,—Nicholas and John, and daus.: Elizabeth, Sara and Jane.

8. Sir John, son of Sir George, knighted by Queen Elizabeth in the first year of her reign at Kenilworth, and was master of the requests, and Justice of Chester; and lies buried in the chancel at Coughton under a handsome monument, supported by six pillars, with the image of himself and lady in full proportion. He is bareheaded, with mustachios and beard, and wears a doublet or jerkin, buttoned from the neck downwards, and over it a long side gown, open in front. The lady is attired in a puckered gown, a ruff round her neck, with a close fitting cap on the head, over which is a French hood. Her right hand holds her husband's hand. At the head, in bas relief, are the kneeling figures of five children. On the north side in two compartments are three kneeling females and an infant in swathing bands. The inscription* runs thus:

"Here lieth interred the bodie of Syr John Throckmorton, Knyght, of Feckenham, the seventh sonne of Syr George Throckmorton, Knyght of Coughton. Some time master of the requests unto Queen Marie, of happy memorie, who, in respect of his faythful service, bestowed upon him the office of Justice of Chester, and her counsayle, in the Marches of Wales, in which room hee continued XXIII years, and supplied, within the same time, the place of Mr. Vice President, the space of III years. (Index of Wills Proved in Prerogative Court of Canterbury, 1383 to 1558, Somerset House, London).

Sir John's name is recorded in connection with several Warwickshire transfers, with many law cases, and various State Papers. It is said that he died of mortification at the slights and wrongs put on him by the Earl of Leicester (Shakespeare's War. Con. Ch. IX). His children were: Francis, Thomas, John, George, Edward, Joan, m. Richard Wigmore, Mary (Index of Wills, 1586), Anne, and another Mary. 9. Anthony, son of Sir George Throckmorton, of Castleton, in Oxfordshire, married Katherine, dau. and co-heiress of William Willington, of Barcheston, Warwickshire, Esq. (State Papers, Dom. Ser., Add. Mary VII, 38). Anthony makes a great show in the Visitation of Oxford, for he had all his ancestors' arms, empaled and quartered, blazoned in his house, which is described. His wife Katherine, died 6 Jan., 1592, and her tomb is carefully preserved (Monumental Brasses in British Isles) with three sons and five daus. Anthony's will proved in Prerogative Court, Canterbury, 1595. "citizen of London." Inq. p. m., Ser. 2, xcviii, 75.*) He had a more numerous posterity than any perhaps in England at that time, having 112 grandchildren. He was buried under a very handsome monument standing toward the north side of the chancel of Coughton, which he had cause to be erected in his life-time. On the slab are brass effigies of the knight in armour, and his wife in a gable-shaped head dress and high bodiced gown. Beneath these, on brass plates in two groups are 8 male and 11 female children. Above and below are brass shields charged with arms. The inscription thereon:

The Haseleys had become Protestants, and Clement a Puritan. In 1586, the year of the Babington Conspiracy, George Throckmorton, son of Sir John, examined about Anthony Babington, said he had been brought up in France to the Roman Catholic religion, but for a year had had no communication with "persons of that mind." Sir Robert died in 22 Elizabeth (1580) and lies buried at Coughton. Under the arch, between the chancel and the south chantry chapel is his plain high tomb, the sides divided into compartments containing shields, and an inscription to Robert Throckmorton, son and heir of Sir George Throckmorton, with laudatory verses in Latin:

12. THOMAS THROCKMORTON ESQ., only surviving son of Sir Robert, succeeded him. His life was a continued scene of trouble, on account of his religion* (Catholic), his estates being frequently under sequestration, and his person often imprisoned; but the severest hardship was the loss of the manor of Ravenston, which he held by lease from the Crown, paying 63 l. 13 s. yearly, at Lady-day and Michaelmas or within 40 days after, by equal portions: but advantage being taken many years after for default of the rent at the exact time (occasioned by a servant losing part of the money at gaming, which he was sent to pay) he lost the same; and though the queen's receiver had afterwards received it, and gave an acquittance, as if paid at the proper time, yet he never could recover it. He was probably the author of the poem called "The Legend of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton" (Lipscomb: Buckinghamshire, IV, 399; also Francis Peck: New Memoir of the Life & Poetical Works of Mr. John Milton). He married Margaret, dau. and co-heiress of William Whorwood, Esq., attorney-general to King Henry VIII, by whom he had one son, John, and five daus.: Margaret, wf. of Sir Rice Griffin (or Griffith), of Brome Court, in Warwickshire; Elizabeth, wf. of Sir Henry Griffith, of Whichnore, in Staffordshire, Knt.; Eleanor, wf. of Sir Henry Jerningham, of Cossey Hall, in Norfolk,

13. JOHN THROCKMORTON, of Coughton, Esq., his only son, died in his father's lifetime; he married Agnes, dau. of Thomas, son of Sir James Wilford, of Newman Hall in Quindon, Essex. Knt., by whom he had four sons: 1. Robert; 2. Ambrose and 3. Thomas, who were both colonels in the army of King Charles I, and died unmarried; 4. George, who died in Italy, unmarried; also five daus.: 1. Eleanor, wf. of Sir Edward Golding, of Colston Barret, in Nottinghamshire, Bart.; 2. Winifred, wf. of John Powell, of Stanford, in Oxfordshire, Esq.; 3. Margery, prioress of the English nunnery at Louvain; 4. Margaret; 5. Mary.

I. ROBERT THROCKMORTON,* of Coughton, Esq., eldest son, and heir to his grandfather, was advanced to the dignity of baronet 17 Charles I (1 Sept., 1642). He resided very little at Coughton, but kept a bountiful house at Weston for many years, till the breaking out of the civil war, when his estate was sequested and his house at Coughton plundered, miserably defaced and made a garrison of, by the parliament forces; whereupon he was forced to secure himself at Worcester, leaving his lady at Weston, and dying Jan. 16, 1650, was buried at Coughton. * Up to this point the lineage of the Throckmortons of Coughton, has been given as in "The Baronetage of England," by W. Betham, with additional data from other given sources.

† "The Throckmortons had a mansion at Weston, and Cowper was favored with a key of their pleasure-grounds. He soon found himself a favorite visitor at Weston Hall. In the easy intercourse of growing intimacy, Sir John and his Lady (then Mr. and Mrs. Throckmorton) became Mr. and Mrs. Frog, and by that inevitable name have obtained a more lasting remembrance in Cowper's letters than could have been conferred on them by a ducal title." (Life of William Cowper as given in Cowper's Poetical Works, 1782,—a copy of which is in possession of the author.)

‡ Weston Underwood, an estate in Bucks, chiefly noted for its association with the poet Cowper, who lived at The Lodge for several years, has been sold by auction, at the Mart, Tokenhouseyard, for £40,500. The property occupies a beautiful position two miles from Olney, and embraces nearly the whole parish of Weston Underwood, having a total area of 1,564 acres and a rent-roll of 1,900 per annum. The estate is watered by the River Ouse, which forms the southern boundary, and has been for many centuries in possession of the Throckmorton family. The purchaser was Major Wentworth Grenville Bowyer. —Clipping from English paper.

and Warwick. High Sheriff for Berks, 1872; b. April 25, 1838. Baily's "Monthly Magazine of Sports and Pastimes" (1871-2), Vol. xxi, pp. 187-8, says:

"There are few pleasanter hunting grounds than the country that takes it name from the "White Horse"* on the Berkshire hillside—scene of many a legend told alike in history, tale and song—which looks down over a vale gladdening to the eye both of sportsman and farmer. . . . Nimrod, in one of his famous tours, describes it as in part resembling Leicestershire. "There is the large grass field, the stout ox fence, the bridle road, the guide post, the windmill, and here and there a good rasping brook." Railroads and high farming have somewhat altered these characteristics, perhaps, but the chief of them remain. The Oxford youngsters of some thirty years ago used in their impudence, to call the V.W.H. (Vale of White Horse), "the very worst hunt," a name that if it were deserved then, which we much doubt, it assuredly does not now.

Sir William Throckmorton—the representative of one of the oldest Catholic families in England, the original roof tree of which was, we believe, Coughton Court, in Warwickshire, but now settled at Buckland House near Farringdon,—was born in 1838. . . . Early entered to hounds, Sir William has followed from his youth upward the pursuits and pleasures of a country gentleman. He has raced, he has hunted, he has farmed. Never keeping many horses at a time, the "black and diamonds" have yet been seen to the fore as often as the owner of a small stud can expect. . . . In 1869 he succeeded to the Mastership of the V.W.H. With his heart in the work before him, a good judge, riding well to hounds, and popular with all classes of hunting-men, the present Master of the Vale of White Horse sits easy in his saddle of office. . . . For a Throckmorton to be a farmer is a tradition in the family; and they have been mighty breeders of Southdown sheep, taking prizes at Baker Street as well as Islington . . ." A very good picture of Sir William is contained in the same magazine. (Newberry Library, Chicago)

THROCKMORTON COAT OF ARMS

Arms granted Sept. 1, 1642.—Gules on a chevron argent, three bars gemel sable. Crest—An elephant's head proper. The more recent crest is a falcon

* "White Horse Vale, was near Oxford, and dreadfully malignant; full of Throgmortons, Puseys, and Pyes, and such-like, and their brawny retainers."—Thomas Hughes: "Tom Brown's School Days."

volant ppr. belled and jessed or. Mottoes—"Moribus antiquis," (With ancient manners), "Virtus sola nobilitat" (Virtue alone ennobles), and "Virtus sola nobilitas" (Virtue is the only nobility).

The red (gules) shield, shows the zeal, or fiery executive power of the first bearer of this shield, and was exercised for the protection of his country, as indicated by the chevron ⩓ which resembles a roof. The three bars gemel tell us that he barred out enemies of his country by force, and as a commander. The elephant—at once strong and gentle, is an emblem of good fortune.

† The New England branch of the Throckmortons may descend from this line, through one of Clement's sons.

A.B. at Oxford, 1563. Sat in Parliament from 1572 to 1583 for East Retford, and for Warwick, 1586-7. He became entangled in the Martin Mar-Prelate controversy in 1589 and later was indited at Warwick on a charge of associating with other religious malcontents; but no evidence was forthcoming to prove the charge and he was acquitted. The lord chancellor said to her Majesty and openly in court that he "knew Job Throgmorton to be an honest man" (Pierce: "Vindication," Part I, p. 142). One scurrilous and abusive writer issued a vehement attack on Throckmorton in 1594, asserting, despite the absence of legal proof, that he was guilty of complicity both with Penry (Martin Mar-Prelate) and Hacket (who was convicted of treason). Throckmorton, who was a well educated man and a master of a very facetious and satirical style, replied in a published "Defence of Job Throckmorton against the Slanders of Matthew Sutcliffe, taken out of copye of his own hands, as written to an honorable personage."

Throckmorton's religious zeal increased with his years; he was a man of high repute and a valorous preacher of the word. According to Camden he was both learned and eloquent. Toward the end of the century he fell into a consumption and being oppressed with melancholy apprehension about the safety of his estate, he removed from Haseley to Canons Ashby, Northampton, so he might benefit by the spiritual consolation of the Puritan minister, John Dod. A little before he died he said to Mr. Dod, "What will you say of him who is going out of the world and can find no comfort?" Mr. Dod replied, "What will you say of our Saviour Christ, who when he was going out of the world found no comfort, but cried 'My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' " This administered consolation to Mr. Throckmorton's troubled mind, and he departed soon after, rejoicing in the Lord (Clark: Lives). He is denominated "as holy and as choice a preacher as any in England," and it is said he lived thirty-seven years without a comfortable assurance of his salvation, but secured it within an hour of his death. He d. early in 1601, and was buried in the churchyard of Haseley, on Feb. 23 (Register). He m. Dorothy, dau. of Thomas Vernon, of Howell, Stratfordshire. Ch.: (1) Sir Clement, see later. † The Haseley pedigree shows the six sons of Clement and Katherine (Neville) Throckmorton, from one of whom, many believe, John Throckmorton, the New England immigrant, descends. This is the only branch in which the uncommon christian name, "Job," occurs: a name bestowed by the immigrant on one of his sons, and which still continues in the family. Also this branch early embraced Protestantism, and John 1st was a Puritan. Some of Clement's sons lived in London, and family tradition says, "John 1st came from London and was related to Sir Nicholas Throckmorton."

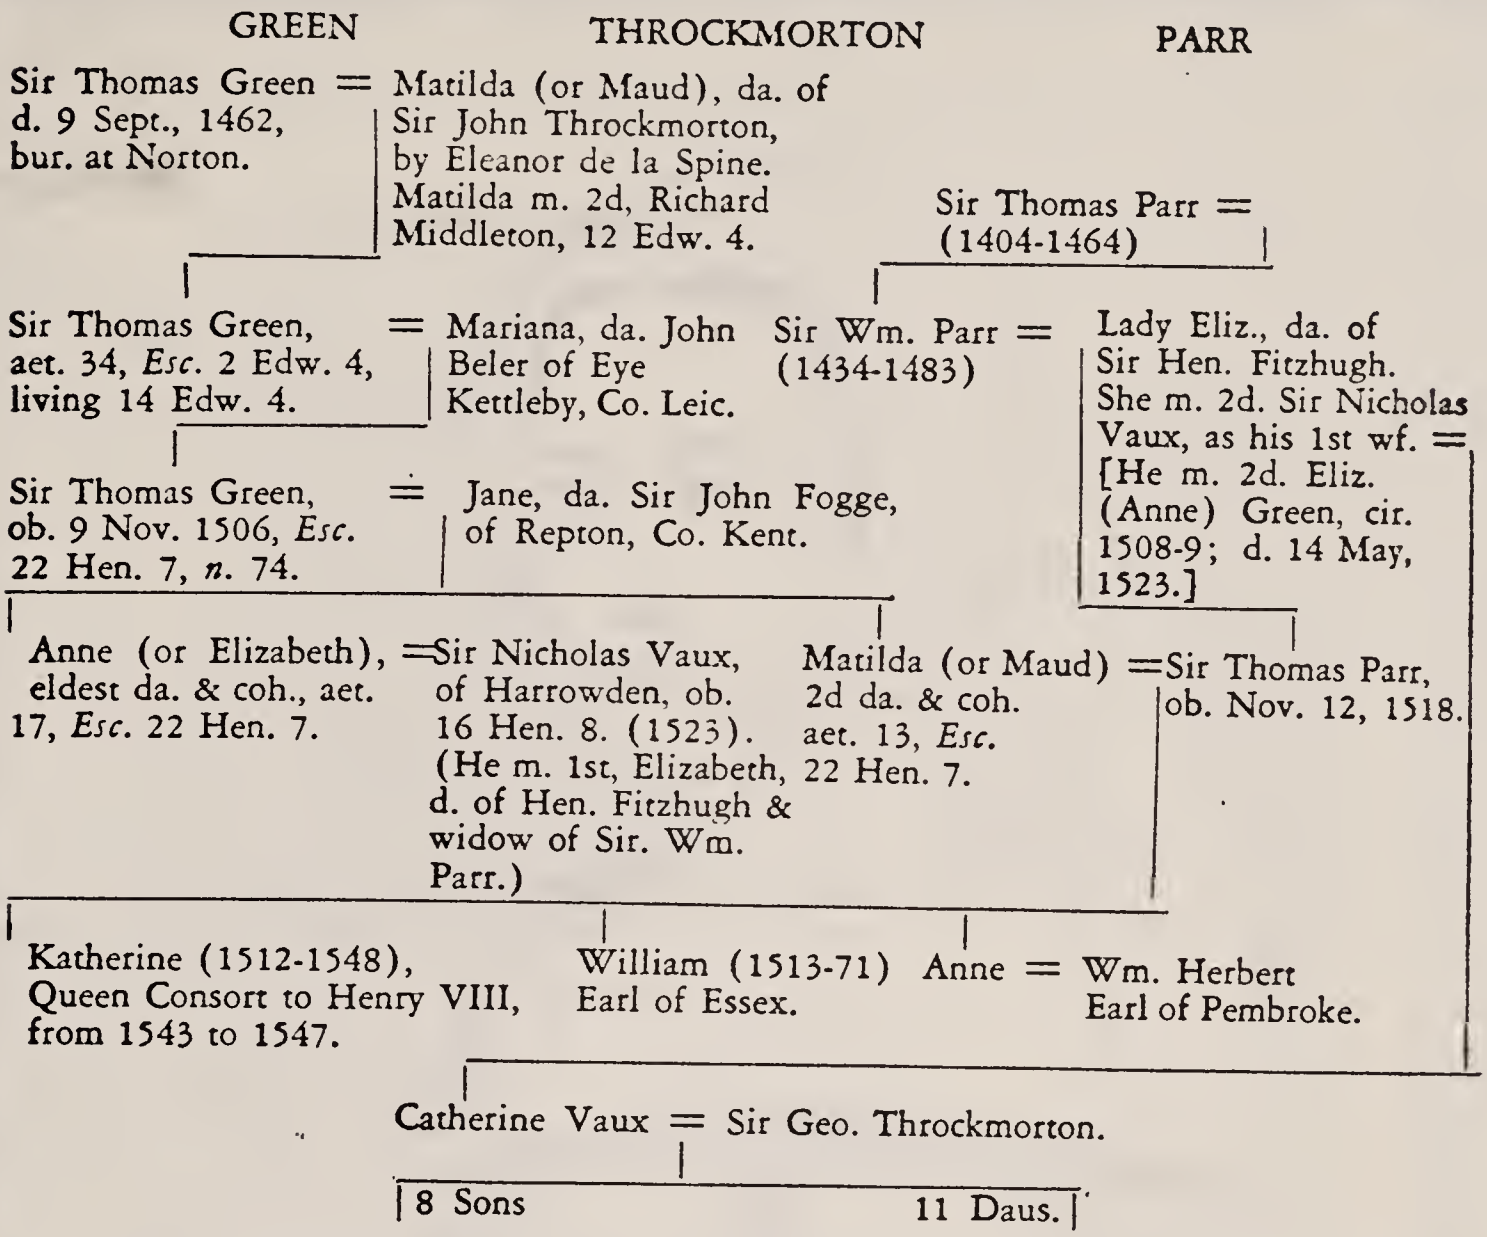
A short pedigree of the Green-Parr-Throckmorton families, so far as necessary to the better understanding of the relationship of Katherine Parr, Queen Consort to Henry VIII.



Queen Katherine Parr's paternal grandmother, Lady Elizabeth FitzHugh (widow of Sir William Parr, K.G.), by a 2d marriage with Sir Nicholas Vaux, became the mother of Catherine Vaux, who married Sir George Throckmorton. Lady Catherine Vaux-Throckmorton was a sister by the half-blood to Sir Thomas Parr,—the father of Katherine Parr, Q. Consort. Sir Nicholas Vaux married 2d, Elizabeth (Anne) Green, sister to Lady Maud Green-Parr, and both these ladies were great-granddaughters of Lady Matilda Throckmorton-Green, whose stately monument is to be seen in the church at Greens Norton. Thus we see that "Queen Katherine Parr was bound by a triple cord of alliance with the family of Throckmorton."

(Strickland: Lives of the Queens of England: Journal of Am. Hist., Vol. XII, 4th Quar., No. 4, 1918; also 2d Quar., No. 2, 1918.)

PROMINENT MEMBERS OF THE ENGLISH FAMILY

SIR NICHOLAS THROCKMORTON (1515-1570), diplomatist, 4th son of Sir George and Katherine (Vaux) Throckmorton. His mother was aunt by marriage to Queen Katherine Parr, and Sir Nicholas claimed the Queen as his first cousin. He was chiefly brought up by his mother's half brother, Lord Parr. Served as page to the Duke of Richmond in France and learned the language. When Katherine Parr married Henry VIII (1543), he and his brothers, Clement and George, went to Court: Clement became the Queen's cupbearer, Nicholas was server to the King, and George received a pension "for valour in youth rare." The following year Nicholas, Clement, George, and John Throckmorton (four brothers) were at the seige of Boulogne. George was taken prisoner by the French and ransomed by the King at a high price. After Henry's death (1547), Nicholas still served Katherine, who became the wife of Lord Seymour, and later served the youthful Edward VI with whom he was a great favorite. Accompanied the army of Somerset to Scotland, 1547, and engaged in the battle of Musselburgh, and was sent to bear the tidings of victory to Edward. The young king received him with utmost cordiality and wanted to knight him against his will; he ran from the room and hid in a corner in the passage, but the King found him and knighted him there! He m. Anne, dau. of Sir Nicholas Carew, K.G., and brought his Lady to Court. The King gave him the manor of Paulers-pury and knighted his elder brother. His father died, having first seen his five sons (Robert, Clement, George, Nicholas, and John) all members of Parliament. Nicholas represented Devizes in the House of Commons from 1547 to 1552, and sat for Northamptonshire in 1553. In consequence of his office in the Privy Chamber he was present when the King expired, 6 July, 1553, and sent Queen Mary word of her brother's death. Sat as member of Old Sarum in her first parliament, Oct.-Dec. 1553.

The next year his loyalty was suspected and he was sent to the Tower on a charge of complicity in Wyatt's Conspiracy. Throckmorton defended himself at his trial, in the Guildhall of London (April 1554),* with resolute pertinacity, fought through all the charges against him, and dissected the depositions with the skill of a practised pleader, and was boldly acquitted by the jury. The crowd, as Throckmorton left the court, threw up their caps and shouted. But Queen Mary ordered the jurors to the Tower and fined them, and detained Throckmorton in prison until her marriage with Philip of Spain, who released him. He retired to France to avoid the persecution to which as a Protestant, he might be subjected under the reign of Mary. For unlike most members of his family he had accepted the reformed faith of his mistress, Queen Katherine Parr,† and remained a sturdy Protestant till his death. But his brothers and other friends interceded for him and he was brought home and reconciled to the queen. He was at the taking of St. Quentin, 1557, fell sick and returned to England. Visited Elizabeth by stealth at Hatfield where he was a welcome visitor. Busy rumor ante-dated the death of Queen Mary (which occurred 17 Nov., 1558) and Elizabeth told Sir Nicholas she would never believe in her sister's death until she received the black enamelled ring given by Philip to Mary on their betrothal. When Mary died he waited to receive this ring from a kinswoman of his, who was in the service of Mary, and fled with it to Elizabeth, accompanied by his brothers. But a deputation from the late queen's council had already arrived at Hatfield to apprise her of the demise of her sister and to offer homage to her as their rightful sovereign. She had already bestowed all the places in her gift, except that of Chief Butler, which he was fain to accept. But Elizabeth's accession to the throne opened to him a career of political activity. Beside Chief Butler he was appointed Chamberlain of the Exchequer, and elected M.P. for Lyme Regis, Jan. 1559. In May the same year he was sent as her ambassador to France where his negotiations were of the thorniest sort, and where he remained until 1564. The next year he was sent on a diplomatic mission to Scotland with instructions to prevent the marriage of Mary Queen of Scots with Darnley. But the queen received him reluctantly and turned a deaf ear to his protest. He was created M.A. at Oxford, 1566. Ordered to Scotland a second time, June 1567, in a dangerous crisis in Queen Mary's affairs, who was imprisoned in Lochleven Castle. He saves her life and returns home "in great favor, and as greatly hated." He retained his personal influence with Elizabeth; though his choleric disposition, somewhat soured, perhaps, by repeated disappointments in his application for court preferment, made him many enemies, so that it became a by-word when the queen commanded anything which was thought harsh, or denied any petition which was thought reasonable, to say that "weazon-faced Throckmorton had been there!" (Criminal Trials, "Library of Entertaining Knowledge," London, 1832.) He was suspected of sympathy with the rebellion of northern Catholics in Queen Mary's behalf, and in Sept. 1569, was imprisoned in Windsor Castle, but was soon released and no further proceedings were taken against him. But he never regained the Queen's favor or confidence. This treatment from his royal mistress, in whose service he had with the most cordial and indefatigable zeal spent the greater part of his life, seems to have broken his heart. Much more might be said of his actions and negotiations, for he was a valiant soldier and commander, and a consummate statesman. He left his life in verse, written as is supposed, in his imprisonment; and died Feb. 12, 1570, aged 57, and Fuller says "at supper, eating of sallad, not without suspicion of poison, the rather because happening in the house of one, no mean artist in that faculty, R. Earl of Leicester";* and lies buried on the south side of the chancel of St. Catherine Cree Church, near Aldgate, London, his parish. On his monument of alabaster, where his statue in armour is cut, is this inscription:

† "The Throckmortons, be it remembered, were the near kinsmen of Queen Katherine Parr and confidential members of her household. They were her élives, and converts withal, to the faith of which she was the nursing-mother." (Strickland: Lives of the Queens of England.)

"Here lyeth the body of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, Knt. The fourth son of Sir George Throckmorton, Knt. The which Sir Nicholas was chief butler of England, one of the chamberlains of the exchequer, and ambassador lieger of the Queen's Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, in France; and after his return into England, he was sent ambassador again into France, and twice into Scotland. He married Anne Carew, daughter of Sir Nicholas Carew, Knt., and begat ten sons and three daughters. He died the 12th day of Feb. Anno Domini, 1570, aged 57 years."

The mass of Throckmorton's original papers were made over to the public record office; others are in the British Museum, and elsewhere. His widow m. Adrian Stokes, and many of her letters are preserved among the British Mus. MSS. Various pedigrees and Sir Nicholas' will give the names of the following children: 1. Sir Arthur (1557-1626), matriculated from Magdalen College, Oxford, in 1571, aged 14; he was M.P. for Colchester in 1598-9; joined in 1596 the expedition to Cadiz, where he was knighted; inherited from his father the manor of Paulerspury, Northamptonshire, of which county he was sheriff in 1605, and was buried at Paulerspury, 1 Aug., 1616. His dau., Anne, was 1st wife of Richard, Lord Dacre of Chevening, in Kent. 2. Sir Nicholas, the youngest son, was knighted 10 June, 1603, and adopted by his uncle, Sir Francis Carew, of Beddington, and took the name of Carew, and succeeded to the Beddington property, dying 1643. 3. William; 4. Henry; 5. Edward; 6. Robert; 7. Thomas. Daus.: Frances; Elizabeth, m. Sir Walter Raleigh.

A portrait of Sir Nicholas, painted when he was 49, is at Coughton. An engraving by Vertue is dated 1747. Throckmorton Street, E.C., and Nicholas Lane, London, were both named for Sir Nicholas Throckmorton.

LADY RALEIGH (nee Elizabeth Throckmorton) was a daughter of Sir Nicholas Throckmorton and Anne Carew, his wife. She was named after Queen Elizabeth who was her godmother. Nothing is known of "Bess Throck-

* "Leicester, it is said, never forgave Throckmorton for his vehement opposition to the earl's proposed marriage with the Queen. Later on his changing ideas, the Earl was apprehensive he might make a discovery of his secret practice, and for that reason took care to dispatch him." (Lives of Cecil & Leicester: The British Plutarch, Vol. II.) morton's" childhood, but she must have been very young and long an orphan when she was taken to Court and appointed one of the maids-of-honour, a much coveted post, but not altogether a pleasant one in the reign of "Good Queen Bess," who was apt to vent her displeasure very freely on her unfortunate ladies, not only the royal tongue but also the royal hand being used for their correction!

About this time young Walter Raleigh, freshly come from his voyage of discovery and bringing dispatches to the Queen, appeared at Court and gained almost instant favour. A particular favorite of the Queen, and therefore the object of attention and flattery of the whole Court, he must have found singular attractions of mind and person in the young maid-of-honour to cause him to risk his whole career, and the good graces of his Queen. The young people fell in love with each other, but in order not to jeopardize his favour with his royal mistress the marriage (which can be fixed with tolerable precision, either as being late in 1591 or early in 1592), was kept secret for a time. Then, the secret being discovered, as was bound to be the case in a jealous Court, Queen Elizabeth took sweet revenge and ordered the bride and bridegroom to spend their honeymoon in the Tower where they enjoyed ample leisure for repenting of their transgression! More than this she compelled Raleigh to give her the enormous sum of 80,000 pounds as purchase money of his release from the Tower.*

But the married life which began so romantically continued to be a very devoted one through years of separation and of great sorrows. That Lady Raleigh was made unhappy by the long absences of her husband on voyages of exploration, we know by her pathetic letter to Sir Robert Cecil, written in 1593 before the expedition in search of the city of Manoa:

"Now, Sir," she writes, "for the rest, I hope you will rather draw Sir Walter toward the east, then help him forward toward the sunset, if any respect to me, or love to him, be not forgotten; but every month has his flower, and every season his contentment, and you great Counsellors are so full of new counsels as you are steady in nothing, but we poor souls that have bought sorrow at a high price deserve and can be pleased with the same misfortune that we hold, fearing alteration will but multiply misery, of which we have already felt sufficient. I know only your persuasions are of effect with him, and held as orrekeles, therefore, I humbly beseech you stay him rather than further him, by the which you shall bind me forever."

From henceforth there was little else but trouble for the poor lady. On the return of the expedition to Manoa, James I, who succeeded Queen Elizabeth, sent Raleigh to the Bloody Tower on a charge of treason, 1603, and for more than twelve years those doleful walls were his home. While his enemies plundered him of his estates and revenues, notwithstanding the noble exertions of Lady Raleigh, who in vain appealed to James and Cecil for some small show of compassion in her hour of need. Sherborne, Raleigh's famous home, was given by the King to his favorite Carr, Earl of Somerset. But Lady Raleigh did obtain one great boon, permission to share her husband's confinement, and their youngest child, Carew, was born within the walls of the Tower. Raleigh wrote his "History of the World" during his imprisonment. In 1615 he was released that he might point out a gold mine which he said existed in Guiana, and again husband and wife were parted, and this time both son and husband "went forward towards the sunset" from whence the younger Walter (bp. 1 Nov., 1593) never returned. He was killed gallantly leading a charge against the Spaniards at St. Thome. Raleigh returned to England only to die. He was again imprisoned and the 28 Oct., 1618, he was informed that he must prepare to die next morning. In the evening his brokenhearted wife was admitted to take her last farewell.* And at 9 o'clock the following morning, Oct. 29th, he was beheaded in Old Palace Yard, Westminster. It is not certain whether Sir Walter Raleigh lies in St. Margaret's, Westminster, where a tablet of brass years later was erected to his memory, but it is certain that Lady Raleigh succeeded in obtaining his head, which she had embalmed, and from which she was never parted. After his death she seems to have retired to West Horsley, where she led a very quiet and peaceful life, occasionally troubled over money matters. After 29 years of widowhood, Lady Raleigh died in 1647.

So endeth the love story of the beautiful, golden-haired Elizabeth Throckmorton, whose personal charms, mental endowment, virtue, devotion and misfortune shed a luster over the close of the 16th and early years of the 17th century. Her portrait proves her to have been handsome. She was tall, slender, blue-eyed and golden-haired. Her mental qualities, her worth and fidelity were in evidence during the long train of misfortunes which beset the latter years of Raleigh's life. Never were written more charming letters than hers, in more unembarrassed phonetic spelling. (See History of Surrey, by Manning & Bray.) She was succeeded by her only surviving son, Carew Raleigh (1605-1666).

FRANCIS THROCKMORTON (1554-1584), son of Sir John and Margery (Puttenham) Throckmorton, had license to marry Anne Sutton, dau. of Sir Edward, Lord Dudley, 3 June, 1571. In 1572, he and his brother Thomas went to Hart Hall, a favorite college for Catholics in Oxford, and his brother George joined him there in 1573. "Francis was attainted in 26 Elizabeth (1583) for treason laid to his charge, as having conspired, God knows what, on behalf of the Queen of Scots" (Camden). It was so easy in those days to slip unconsciously into treason through sentiment and faith, before prudential reason had calculated worldly peril! Treason depended on whether Elizabeth Tudor or Mary Stuart lived the longer. Francis was one of the Throckmortons that clung to the old faith. He was young, chivalrous, romantic, and discontented with the treatment of his father, his house, and his co-religionists. It is evident that he had personal interviews with the Queen of Scots, and that her wonderful charm and afflicted condition had won his chivalrous devotion. Burleigh (Lord Cecil) had spies everywhere. He knew all about the Throckmortons. He knew that Thomas, 2d son of Sir John, was abroad under suspicious circumstances; that George, another son, had served the Prince of Parma, and had returned to London. He knew that Francis went much abroad and that he was in the habit of carrying letters to the Scotch Queen. He had him stealthily watched, his letters intercepted, and his ciphers translated, his companions followed. "Cunning was practiced and counterfeit letters scattered." Francis was arrested. The unequal battle with the torturers and examiners followed. He yielded to confess everything he knew. Sitting in wretchedness beside the horrid rack, the Nov. light faintly straining down the tunnelled windows into the dungeon beneath, he broke his pledged word, and broke his heart along with it. Then he drew himself up and sobbed in misery: "I have disclosed the secrets of her who was the dearest Queen to me in the whole world, whom I thought no torment could have drawn me so much as to have prejudiced as I have done by my confession. Chi a perso la fede, a perso l'honore." He was allowed to see his wife. 10 July, 1584, he was taken from the Tower to Blackfriars by water, thence dragged to Tyburn, and executed as a traitor. (State Papers; Official Narrative; MSS. Dom.) Both at the arraignment and on the scaffold he denied the truth of his confession, charging her Majesty with cruelty and the Council with untruth. It must not be forgotten that they who scruple not to torture his body would not scruple to torture his words. His mother died of a broken heart and his young widow afterwards married Mr. Thomas Wilmer, councilor-at-law.

JOHN THROGMORTON, "attinctus," called "Long John," a kinsman of Sir Nicholas, was implicated in the Dudley Conspiracy to dethrone Queen Mary and make Elizabeth queen. He was a young man who had been at the French court and made arrangements with Henry II who was to aid. He returned to England. The conspirators were betrayed to the government, seized suddenly and sent to the Tower, Throgmorton among the number. All the others turned approver under torture. Throgmorton, however, who knew the most, would tell nothing, though the rack was used freely to open his lips. He was silent to the last, and was sentenced 21st April, 1556, and suffered on the 28th. (Froude: Hist. of Eng. Vol. VI.) Stopes: Shakespeare's Contemporaries:

"Katherine, the widow of John Butler, citizen of London, alienated the manor of Pipe, near Erdington, and afterwards married Anthony Throckmorton. From the State Papers we know that this Anthony was the brother of John Throckmorton, the only brave man of the Dudley conspiracy in Mary's reign, who was executed as a traitor on 24(?) April, 1556. Katherine Butler, alias Throckmorton, the wife of Anthony, was called to prove that John was her husband's brother, and resided in their house, but that she knew nothing of the conspiracy."

The only pedigree that gives a John, the "brother of Anthony," that might be identified as John "attinctus" is the Gloucestershire one (1623), which shows that: William Throckmorton and his wife Margaret, dau. of Sir David Matthew, had sons: Sir Thomas, of Cross Court, d. 1586; John, d.s.p.; Anthony, m. "Catherine, dau. of John Keymes" (probably widow of John Butler.) The Huntingdonshire Pedigree also gives a John the recognized "brother of Anthony" (sons of Richard); but this John was father of Sir George Throckmorton, Sergeant of the Hawks, to Q. Elizabeth, and could not have been John "attinctus" (Long John). Among the Wills proved in Pre. Court, Canterbury, are these: "1593, Anthony Throkmarton, citizen and mercer of London" and "1594, Throckemerton Katherine, widowe of Anthony Throckemerton, London."

THE THROCKMORTON FAMILY IN AMERICA

THEORIES CONCERNING THE ANCESTRY OF JOHN THROCKMORTON 1ST, OF NEW ENGLAND

A tradition has prevailed from generation to generation in the New England branch of the family that John Throckmorton 1st, was of titled descent and related to Sir Nicholas Throckmorton. He is called "8th in line of descent from John Throckmorton, who was possessed of Throckmorton in 1339."[1] Joseph Gardner Bartlett, whom many regard as the best English searcher now living, gives the following as a result of his investigation:

"John Throckmorton of Providence, R. I., was probably the son of Bassingbourne Throckmorton of Norwich, England, where he was armiger and alderman. The pedigree of Bassingbourne is found in the Norfolk and Suffolk Visitations. He belonged to the Throckmortons of Bungay in Suffolk, who descend from the main family in Worcestershire coming from a younger son of Sir John, the Under Treasurer of Henry IV.

Bassingbourne had among other children a son John, mentioned in his will and, in 1637, in a Chancery suit, his executors state they wish to keep John's share as they do not know whether he be living or dead and that their father did not know when he died whether John was alive or not. The only other record we have of this John is that in 1623 he was apprenticed by his father to a scrivener. This is of great importance, because Roger Williams states that John Throckmorton of Providence had formerly been an officer of a corporation in England with some knowledge of the law.[2] This would apply to a scrivener who drew legal documents.[3] If we can find that Bassingbourne's son John was also an officer of a corporation, i.e., a municipal corporation, the proof will be complete, but as yet I have failed to find this fact. So I may say at present (1917) the line is not proven, but there is every indication that we have the man."

S. W. Dixon, "a lawyer's lawyer," Chicago, Ill., and a descendant, writes:

"The frequent occurrence of the conspicuous and uncommon Christian name which John Throckmorton gave his third son, namely Job, and which his descendants appear to have felt a pride in giving to their sons from that day down to this, would seem to indicate that he belonged to that branch of the family in which this name alone occurs and which alone early embraced Puritanism,—the Haseley Throckmortons of Warwickshire.[4]

We are told (Nat. Cyclo. of Biog.) that Clement Throckmorton of Haseley "early accepted Protestantism" and that Job, his son and heir of Haseley, became an ardent Puritan (1545-1601). Clement had several other sons who also, probably, became Puritans, and John of Providence, R. I., may descend from one of them. The Haseley family were, it seems, prominent in Puritan and non-conforming circles thereafter. The fact that this family were Puritans, or Separatists, and that in this family alone do "Puritan Names"[5] prevail to the exclusion almost of all others—Job particularly—the fact that the "Midlands" contributed so heavily to early accessions to Massachusetts Bay; that Roger Williams, the Cottons, Rev. John Davenport, and a score of other early New England notables, were from Warwickshire—the fact that the "Lyon," the ship so much mentioned in New England annals and which brought our John Throckmorton, was wont to touch east of Bristol, then the main port for the Avon and Severn river region—all these and others we could mention leave it the necessary conclusion (in the absence of negative evidence) that John was of Haseley, County Warwick. In fact the name "Cotton" borne by the early directors of Massachusetts so prominently, had its origin at and is derived from Coughton, the Warwickshire seat of the Throckmortons."

1. JOHN THROCKMORTON, "gentleman," b. in England in the first decade of 1600. Of his early life nothing is known except that he was "an officer of an English Municipal Corporation and had some acquaintance with law."[1] At the height of the Puritan emigration he, with his wife Rebecca, embarked from Bristol, Dec. 1st, 1630, in the ship Lyon for America. Among the passengers was the celebrated Roger Williams with whom John Throckmorton sustained relations of intimacy. After a tedious and stormy voyage of sixty-five days the ship arrived off Nantasket Beach, Feb. 5th, 1631 (legal year 1630). The arrival of the ship is thus recorded by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 5:

"The ship Lyon, Mr. William Pierce, Master, arrived at Nantasket. She brought Mr. Williams, a godly minister, with his wife, Mr. Throgmorton, Perkins and others, with their wives and children, about twenty passengers, and about two-hundred tons of goods. She set sail from Bristol Dec. 1st. She had a very tempestuous passage, yet through God's mercy, all her people came safely, except Way, his son, who fell over the Spiritsail yard in a tempest, and could not be recovered, though he kept in sight near a quarter of an hour; her goods, also, came all in good condition."

John Throckmorton settled at Salem, then the chief port of New England, and took the oath of freeman 18th May the same year. He made purchases of land in the Forest River section of Mass., now known as Marblehead Farms. "Throckmorton Cove," which commemorates his name, makes in at Salem Harbor. He retained this land after he removed from Salem, as 11th of 7th mo. 1642, he brought "an action of tresspasse upon the cove against John Gilbert to the dam of 41r." And Gilbert was "ordered to pay Mr. Throckmorton XXX[s] in money, corne, beauer, or cattell."[2]

In Jan. 1636, when Roger Williams fled from the tyranny and persecution of the Salem Church to Rhode Island and made "Covenates of a peaceable Neighbourhood with all the Sachems and Natives Round about," he communicated his purchase unto his "Loving Friend John Throckmorton" (and others "distressed for conscience"), who might desire to take shelter with him. Throckmorton probably went to R. I. during the summer of 1636 when Mrs. Williams joined her husband. Williams speaks of "neighbour Throckmorton" in letters in June and July, 1637, and his name also appears at this date in an order confirming certain land to him.[3] He was the sole witness to a deed, Nov. 10, 1637, wherein Roger Williams, jointly with Gov. Winthrop, purchased from Canonicus the large island in Narragansett Bay named by him Prudence but called by the Indians, Chibachuwest.[4] Oct. 8, 1638, he was one of the twelve to whom Williams deeded land he had purchased from Canonicus and Mantonomi, and was thus one of the thirteen proprietors of Pawtuxet.[5]

John Throckmorton was among the fifty-four persons to whom was allotted the first home lots in Providence and one of the three men on the committee which formed the original list of lots and the Towne Street on which they lay. His lot was "not far above the Quaker Meeting House, or Court House parade, with Wm. Harris next to him on the south and Roger Williams on the north at the foot of the present Howland Street." When Roger Williams turned Baptist and founded the first Baptist church in America[3] with twelve constituent members, John Throckmorton and his wife were on the "List of Original Members Received in 1638." This re-baptism of adults, who had been previously baptized by sprinkling, gave great offence to the Salem church when they heard of it, and they were promptly excommunicated:[4]

"Salem 1st 5th mo. '39.

Reverend and dearly beloved in the Lord:

We thought it our bounden duty to acquaint you with the names of such persons as have had the great censure passed upon them in this our church, with the reasons thereof, beseeching you in the Lord, not only to read names in public to yours, but also to give us the like notice of any dealt with in like manner by you, that so we may walk toward them accordingly; for some of us here have had communion ignorantly with some of other churches. . . . We can do no less than have such noted as disobey the truth.

Roger Williams and his wife, John Throgmorton and his wife, Thomas Olney and his wife . . . . These wholly refuse to hear the church, denying it, and all the church in the Bay, to be the true churches, and (except two) are all re-baptized . . . . Thus

April 22, 1639, John Throckmorton bought Roger Williams's interest in Prudence Island,[1] and either went there to live or erected a trading-house there. For Williams in a letter to Winthrop, 21 July, 1640, mentions his fear that the Nayantaquit Sachems "will take revenge upon Mr. Throckmorton at Prudence."[2] He retained his interest in this island for more than fifteen years.[3] Williams, in a letter dated Aug. 1638, speaks of "four desperate white men of Plymouth" who robbed and murdered an Indian messenger: "Mr. Throckmorton met them about Naposit River in the path, who riding roundly upon a sudden by them was glad he had passed them suspecting them. They denied that they met Mr. Throckmorton." July 27, 1640, Throckmorton and thirty-eight others signed an agreement for a form of government. The Providence Town Papers recite several transactions in which "Throckmorton paid money for the use of the townes."

In 1642 he sought permission from the Dutch authorities to make a settlement with thirty-five English families within three leagues of Amsterdam, and was granted the long point of land jutting out into Long Island Sound, to which he was destined to give his name, or a corruption of his name,—"Throg's Neck," for the remainder of history!

Land Brief Granted to Jan Throckmorton.[4]

"We, William Kieft, director general, and the council, in behalf of their high mighty lords, the States General of the United Netherlands, his highness the Prince of Orange, and the noble lords, the managers of the General Incorporated West India Company in New Netherlands residing, by these presents, do publish and declare that we, on this day under written, have given and granted unto Jan Throckmorton a piece of land (being a portion of Vredeland), containing as follows,—along the East River of New Netherlands, extending from the point half a mile, which piece of land aforsaid is surrounded on one side by a little river, and on the other side by a great kill, which river and kill on high water running, meet each other, surround the same land, as will more clearly appear by a map of the same which has been made and marked off by the surveyor, with the express condition and terms that the said Jan Throckmorton, or they who by virtue of these presents shall succeed to his action, the noble lords, the managers aforsaid, shall acknowledge as their lords and patroons, under the sovereignty of the high and mighty lords, the States General, and unto their director and council here, shall in all things be confirmed as all good citizens are in duty bound; provided also that the said Jan Throckmorton and his company (associates) shall furthermore be subject to all such burdens and imposts, as already have been enacted by the noble lords, and hereafter may yet be enacted. It is furthermore made an express condition that the aforesaid Jan Throckmorton, according to promise, shall settle on the aforsaid lands as many families as may offer in the same manner, constituting over the said Throckmorton and his company, in our stead, in the real and actual possession of the aforsaid piece of land lying on the East river aforsaid, giving them by these presents the full and irrevocable might, authority, and special permission the aforsaid parcel of land to enter, cultivate, inhabit, and occupy, in like manner as he may lawfully do with other his patrimonial lands and effects, without our, the granters in quality aforsaid, thereunto any longer having, reserving or saving any part, action, or control whatever, but to the behoof as aforesaid, from all assisting from this time forth and forever, promising moreover this transport firmly, invariably, and irrevocably to maintain, fulfil, and execute, and to do all this in equity we are bound to do. Done in Fort Amsterdam in New Netherlands, this 6th day of July 1643.

Among the thirty-five associates who accompanied Throckmorton to New Amsterdam were Thomas Cornell and the noted Mrs. Anne Hutchinson. His settlement here, however, was one of short duration, for Winthrop records[1] in Sept. of the same year, 1643, that the Indians set upon the English, who dwelt under the Dutch, and killed "such of Mr. Throckmorton's and Mr. Cornell's families as were at home." Anne Hutchinson and her family were cruelly murdered. The opportune passage of a boat enabled a number of the settlers to escape but as many as remained were slaughtered, their cattle killed and their homes and barns destroyed. It is supposed that Throckmorton and Cornell were in New Amsterdam at the time with their families, or at all events with some of their children, and thus escaped the murderous fury of the Indians. Throckmorton did not return to the "Neck" to live after the massacre, but went back to Rhode Island with his family. He retained, however, possession of his land at the "Neck" until Oct. 1653.[2] When he went to New Netherlands he probably sold everything he owned in Providence to Henry Wright,[3] retaining, however, his interest in Prudence Island. Warwick, just south of Providence, was settled in 1643 and probably Mr. Throckmorton went directly there for a brief period, as the "Fac-simile of the signatures of the First[4] Settlers of Warwick, R. I.," shows the name of "John Throckmorton' at the top of the 14th page. The name is incomplete through the tearing of the leaf, but it is John Throckmorton:

14 Jo. Throa

"A bark belonging to Mr Throgmorton and Peter Lourens" mentioned in Court[5] proceedings, July 8, 1644, N. Y. He was again living at Providence Feb. 27, 1647, where he was granted the house and land that was Edward Cope's.[6] Fragments from letters[7] of Roger Williams to Gov. Winthrop:

(Prob. 1648) "I pray, sir, write where Mr. Throckmorton is, and whether he desires I should trouble you with the peag of which I wrote, which I propose if God please (unless countermanded by either of you) to send immediately upon hearing from you." Narragansett, Feb. 1648-9 . . . "This is the chief of the matters told me a few days since by Mr. Throckmorton, who came ten days since from the Bay, and came well in a full laden vessel to anchor by Saconet rocks, but it pleased God his new cable was cut by the rocks, and he drove upon Rhode Island shore, where it is feared the vessel is spoiled but (through God's mercy) he saved his goods." June 13, 1649, Mr. Throckmorton hath lately brought some corn from Hemstead and those parts, but extraordinary dear. I pay him 6*s* for Indian, and 8*s* for wheat. These rains if God please to give peace, promise hopes of plenty. . Feb. 16, 1649-50, Mr. Throckmorton is preparing and waiting daily for a season to visit you. (No date, prob. May 1650) "Sir,—Loving respects, etc. . . . Mr. Throckmorton and Thomas Doxey two days since put forth from Newport, but Mr. Throckmorton being a league the foremost, met upon Point Judith with a gust from the Southwest, which brought him on backstays, laid his vessel on one side, in much danger, his canoe fell over from him and was lost, his oars, etc., but God brought him mercifully safe in hither, and Thomas Doxey back to Newport."

John Throckmorton was quite prominent in the early history of Providence, as indicated by the public records. Among the many, many references only a few can be given:

In the spring of 1672, George Fox, the distinguished founder of the society of Friends (Quakers), visited Newport, R. I., and under his eloquent preaching many of the leading inhabitants became Quakers, among them John Throckmorton. While the Quakers were not persecuted in R. I., Roger Williams hated their doctrines and felt called upon to debate against them with all the energy of his fiery nature. In that rare book, "George Fox Digged Out of his Burrows" (reprinted in Narragansett Club Pub.), are found three letters written by John Throckmorton to Roger Williams upbraiding him for proposing a joint discussion with George Fox touching Quakerism. Admirers of Williams, who simply accept his own opinions expressed in his replies to "J. T." when there was bitter enmity between them over religious differences, have unjustly criticised Throckmorton. If they had taken the trouble to read "J. T.'s" letters with the same bias they would find plenty to criticise in R. Williams also, especially as he provoked the issue. A few fragments are here given from these ancient letters, prefaced by Williams' note:

"(J. T. his first letter to me.) My former antient Neighbour and friend, J. T., being bit by such infectious Teeth himself, fell on me, as a man would fall upon a Toad or Serpent, and sent me this Letter, notwithstanding he was but newly bitten by them; and for forty years pretended no small love and respect to God and me. He first gave fire upon me in the following Letter:"

written keep thee far from an evil matter, thy paper being full fraught with impudent Lyes and Slanders, with high flown airy imaginations, which if thou shouldst live the days of Methuselah thou couldst not perform. In love to thy Person and Name which ought to be precious, I advise thee not upon a sudden motion (as thou termest us to act by) but from the spirit of Truth and tender love unto thy soul, which Spirit by thy writing appears thou art a stranger to, Consider thy latter end, lest like Cardinal Mazarin, thou cry out in a dying hour Oh my poor Soul, what will become of thee? Whither art thou a going? And said if he should longer have lived he would leave the Court, and be a Capuchin. Time is precious. Repent, Repent, and mind the manifestation of the Spirit, which is given to every one to profit with all, and knocks at the door of thy Heart, for entrance, which being rejected will be thy Condemnation. If thou rejected this my faithful witness for the Lord, I then say with John in the Revelation, let him that is filthy be filthy still, and so remains thy friend and Neighbour, J. T."

(J. T. his second letter to me)

Providence 23. 5. 75.

Ancient Friend and Acquaintance,

I read thy Note four days after thee subscribing it, that so thy Councellors might thoroughly be informed of thy continued Zeal in a dangerous Case. What I write to thee in love hath a contrary effect in thy Spirit, being so prejudiced against us; according to the Proverb, Nothing is well spoken, that is not well taken. Upon Discourse thou didst say the Quakers could not be believed on their Words or Writings, having a secret Reservation within them, which gives me to conclude that wee are Judged before wee speak. For my charging upon thee Slanders and Lyes, Examine but thy Positions, which will make manifest what I say. . . . Thou findest fault with my rash Judging thee and abusing Scripture: Take it to thyself, for the word Damning, thou foistest in thy self, neither dare I pass sentence of Damnation upon any. For Judgment belongeth to the Lord. . . . As for my Fickleness and Inconstancy:[1] Lay thy hand upon thy mouth and consider thy windings and Turnings and thy Judgment and Practice, how thankful thou wast to J. Burnet, whom thou highly commendest after thou camest home, and now reproachest the Truth, which then thou assentest to; and in thy 14 Positions thou hintest . . . what the sudden Spirit of the Quakers is, to take away the Lives of Kings, &c, but I told thee in my first letter, thou art a stranger to that holy Spirit we act by.

But further thy malice appeareth in going to one thou saidst (11), that if the Spirit of the Governour were to cut of his head, we must doe it. Call to mind what thou didst to thy peaceable Neighbours seeking their Blood, crying out Treason, when the Court discovered thy Blood thirsty spirit, which thy friends at Newport were ashamed of, and thy Accusations proved Invalid, How childish didst thou act to swear against One when another told thee of something spoken to allay thy fury against William[2] Harris? Call to mind thy Books written, and see thy Fickleness, wanting a guide to thy mind, being for and against Persecution. Thou chargest me to have gotten into the Chair of Judging: Thy two Scripts I return unto thyself, Physitian heal thy self. The wisdom of man puffeth up; but the Wisdom of God humbleth, that God may be all in all. . . . I know thou hast undertaken a great Burthen in challenging G. Fox to answer thy Positions, I wish thee to provide thy Armour of Proof, as Goliah that defied the Army of Israel. G. Fox is furnished with that Armour that thou hast no skill to make use of; having also the Sword of the Spirit to cut down thy airy Imaginations; Therefore cease from further troubling thee: A Word to the Wise is Sufficient, if thou hast a heart to make use of it.

thy friend and Neighbour J. T."

(J. T. His third and last letter)

Neighbour,

Concerning thee mistaking the Date of my Letter as thou writest, which could not be seeing I sent it thee the same day I writ it, but thine, I heard of it some days before I received it. . . . How darest thou find fault with me in not alleadging scripture, nor reason in declaring against thy impious Charges mentioned in thy railing & impious positions? Oh what Serpent-like spirit dost thou act by, that dost not own my plain dealing with thee in owning the scripture and wrestest & foistest in, as I meant not, nor writ: If thy spirit were reall (as before men thy words seem to import) thou wouldst not then shew a smiling Countenance when War is in thine heart, in witnessing against thy Neighbours secretly, against that Golden rule, Doe as thou would'st be done by.

Thou chargest me in making a great Out-cry against thy Blood-thirsty spirit, concerning W. Harris, as though thou didst at no time cry out treason, treason. Anfu. how dost thou shift as one that is guilty, and dare not mention the case I write upon, shufling it to be his last imprisonment, which I know not the ground of, but as I had it related by thee. But the circumstances considered, it cannot possibly be paraleld (as my Letter declareth) with this last case of W. Harris. First, thy taking Oath against my wife[1] upon another man's word on purpose to allay thy furious spirit against W. Harris, be not thinking thou wouldst have prosecuted against her, as also against sixteen of thy peaceable neighbours. Can thou deny at that Court thou cryed not out Treason, Treason, making all as guilty as W. Harris?[2] Thou sayest I bid thee, mind thy Book written against Persecution, and yet thyself a Persecutor of thy peaceable Neighbours even unto death. . . .

Also what I have spoken against W. Harris touching his firing the Town and Colony. I thought so, and therefore contended against him, but I never sought his life, note that R. W. . . . In the last place thou writest how highly I esteem G. Fox and thou desirest to think as low of thy self: How will this agree with thy boasting of great Education, great Experience, great strugglings and strivings within to bring out thy Positions and conclusions, which all my loving Testimonyes against did no more take place with, than a Feather against a Rock. Call to mind the preaching of Jonah to Ninive, yet forty days and Ninive shall be destroyed (a short speech yet they repented and the Lord pardoned): And so I desire thou mayest repent and find mercy with the God of mercy.

Thy Neighbour. J. T."[3]

At a Town Meeting, Jan. 27, 1674-5 Throckmorton and Daniel Abbott were empowered to exchange lands, and at a meeting in March following, an elaborate and minute report was made concerning the "two fifty Akers shares Layd out unto Mr. Throckmorton":

I dare Confidently deny that simple Charge viz. that I should cry out treason against your wife and others, laboring to bring them into the Same guilt with W. Harris."

Probably the best contemporary judgment concerning R. Williams is that of Bradford, Gov. of Plymouth: "A man godly and zealous having many precious parts, but very unsettled in judgment." (Hist. Plymouth Plantation, p. 299).

John Throckmorton, L.S.

He deeded 140 acres of land to Daniel Abbott, June 15, 1675; draws No. 2 in the dividing of "Land beyeand or on the west side of the Seaven Mile Line, April 1675; draws No. 64," in 2d "Dividing of the Land between the seauen mile Line and the foure mile Line on the East side of the seauen mile Line, May 1675."[1] Sept. 27, 1675, chosen Deputy to the General Court,[2] this is the last time he is mentioned as Deputy. He contributed "for the use of the Townes 46 shillings 1676," during King Phillip's War,—the defenses being entirely at private expense. The General Assembly advised all to seek safety on the Island; Throckmorton may have gone there or been in New Jersey with his children, as his name does not appear on the list of 27 who "Staid and went not away." July 1679, taxed on land: 6*s*.-3*d*.; Sept. 1: 7*s*.-6*d*; July 16, 1680, a list of "Two Rates Levied on this Town of providence: To the 4pd Rate, John Throckmorton's Right,—10*d*; To the 7pd Rate,—1*s*.-4*d*; July 16, 1680: Jo^{n} Throckmorton's Right: 2*s*.-1*d*."

April 8, 1665, John Throckmorton had joined, with residents of Gravesend, L. I., in the Middletown Purchase of land, Monmouth Co., N. J., and was the owner of two shares, but he did not become an actual settler there, but several of his children did, and many of their descendants are yet to be found residing within the boundary of the patent. In March 1682-3, he made a "deed of gift" to his eldest son, John:

"John Throckmorton of Providence in the Collony of Rhode Island and Providence plantations (the father) and John Throck.: of Middletown in the province of new Jearsey (the son) came this day: declaring there consent to have a deed of gift recorded wch is as ffol—

John Throckmorton.

Per mee Edward Tartt, Town Clerk."[1]

The affixing of his signature to this deed (March 3, 1682-3), was the last public act of John Throckmorton of which we have record. The precise time of his death is not known. "In the list of ye Draught which was made the 17th of March, 1683-4 for ye devision of ye lands on ye west side of ye seven miles line,"—lot 81 was drawn to John Throckmorton. Thus he was living March 17, 1683-4, but died before April 25, of the same year, if William Carpenter told the truth in a deed[2] he made bearing the latter date:

"Whereas Certain land Called the lands of Pawtuxett lieing in the Townshipp of Proudence in the Colloney of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations in New England were held joyntly by thirteene persons (viz) Roger Williams, William Arnold, John Green, John Throckmorton, William Carpenter, etc. And whereas twelve of the said Persons are deceased; and I the said William Carpenter only surviving; Be it known unto all persons to whom these presents come; etc." Signed William Carpenter.

Dated Aprill ye 25th, 1683.

Mr. Throckmorton had probably gone on a visit to his children in Middletown, N. J., and there died and was buried in the ancient Throckmorton-Lippit-Taylor Burying-Ground. His son John Jr. in his will refers to "The lot where my father is buried in Middletown." To-day the grave is unmarked and the exact spot unknown, but it is probably near where his son Job's stone stands. Mrs. Throckmorton presumably died before her husband, in Providence. The early records of R. I. note the failure of "Rebecca Throckmorton to go to church," and the Middlesex Court Records show that she acted as midwife in Providence. "March 1665, A presentment by Mr. Roger Williams against Rebecca Throckmorton (and four others), as common opposers of all authority, the Sd persons apeareinge to Traverce, and none apeared to make good the charge agst them and soe doth acquit them."[3] (See J. T.'s letter to R. W.)

All the surviving children of John Throckmorton (sons and Deliverance Ashton) were living in N. J. at time of his death. In settling the estate much of the land he owned in R. I. was sold to various persons. These sales frequently were not entered in the Providence Records and the number of acres were not always clearly designated. Hence confusion arose and a quarter of a century after his death the Town Clerk was ordered to search the records to find what account they could give concerning the lands of John Throckmorton formerly of Providence. After "haveing bestowed a great deale of time in searching . . . as to the matter premissed," Thomas Olney, Town Clerk, gave the result of his investigations thus:[4]

Early Records of Town of Prov., Oct. 29, 1684: "The Heires of John Throckmorton taxed 04-02; estate of ye deceased John Throckmorton spoken of Oct. 31, 1687. Ratable estate in Providence, 1687: two house lots and 4 shares of meadow; estate taxed 3*s*. 1685, Aprill 27th, John Whipple desired that "Y^e^ Towne Mett wovle Grant" him liberty as others have had, that "y^e^ Bovnds of y^e^ six Acres of land belonging to y^e^ heirs of John Throckmorton Deceased, may be revised by y^e^ Towne Surveior: paying y^e^ Charge: John Whipple in: behalfe of John Throckmorton and them Concerned."[1] 1708, Providence Plantation, Land now in PoSseSsion of John Throckmorton Sen^r^: (formerly Jr.)

John Throckmorton was one of the leading representative men of "the good old Colony times," and was most actively identified with its business and political interests. He must have been a man of wealth, also, as he made large purchases of real property in Mass., R. I., N. Y., and N. J. His education and position in society may be judged from his letters and the circle of friends he drew about him (Roger Williams, Anne Hutchinson, Gov. Winthrop, etc.) and the many positions of honor and trust imposed upon him: moderator, deputy, treasurer, committee man, etc. He was one of the original Proprietors of Providence Plantations,[2] one of the 13 Proprietors of Pawtucket,[3] one of the original patentees of Monmouth Co., N. J.,[4] and made the first infant settlement in Westchester Co., N. Y.[5] The numerous events chronicled in his long and versatile history would fill many more pages than are here given.

The Ancient Throckmorton, Lippit, or Taylor Burying Ground

The plot of ground on which John Throckmorton 1st, and his son John, were buried at old Middletown, N. J., known as the ancient Lippit or Taylor Burying Ground, is situated on the farm of Mr. Charles Morford on the North side of the village of Middletown a few rods back from the road, directly behind the residence of his sister, Mrs. Blanc. At the death of John Throckmorton Jr., the property passed to his eldest daughter, Sarah, wife of Moses Lippit, and from their son, John Lippit, it was conveyed in the year 1754, to Edward Taylor, always, however, "reserving and excepting a small piece of ground being inclosed in the burying yard, being in length about 84 feet and in breadth about 30 feet." From and after this date it became also known as the Taylor burying ground, which name it now bears to the exclusion of all other. In it are interred: John Throckmorton the first, and his two sons, John and Job; Sarah, dau. of John Throckmorton Jr., and her husband, Moses Lippit, as also several of her children; Alice, dau. of John Throckmorton Jr., and her husband, Thomas Stillwell, and their son, John Stillwell and his wife, Mercy Burrows; John Powell, 1st husband of Sarah Throckmorton (dau. of Job and Sarah Leonard Throckmorton) and her only child, William Powell.

[1] John Whipple and wife, Rebecca, bought land of the heirs of John Throckmorton; as did also Alexander Bryan of Milford, Conn., who quit-claimed his interest to John Whipple, April 17, 1699. Caleb Carr and Peleg Sanford, in behalf of their clients (Wm. Brenton and Mr. Bryant), 1685, claimed "Rights and positions of land formerly belonging to John Throckmorton."

How many others may lie here it is impossible to state. The graves of many of those enumerated have been unmarked, and time has altogether effaced the mounds, and no trace exists of where they were interred. Some of the stones have fallen and others are fast losing their epitaphs by reason of their age, but are still decipherable. (Stillwell: Hist. & Gen. Misc.)

When the compiler visited this hallowed spot in Sept. 1909, but one Throckmorton stone remained, that of Job, son of John 1st.

2. I. FREEGIFT, b. 163–; d. unm., 1669. The only reference found concerning him is this: "Nov. 6, 1669; Middletown, N. J. John Throckmorton Jr. gave a power of attorney at this date to his father, John Throckmorton Sr., of Providence, R. I., and called himself lawful heir of his late deceased brother, Freegift."

3. II. DAUGHTER, b. 163–; m. —— Taylor; d. before Oct. 30, 1666. Reference is made to her at this date when her father sent a "petition to the Assembly concerning the estate of his daughter (Taylor), which was referred to the Towne Council." Her husband evidently predeceased her.

4. III. PATIENCE, b. 1640, Providence, R. I.; m. Major John Coggeshall, Jr., Dec. 1655; d. Newport, R. I., 7 Dec., 1676, aged 36 years. He b. England about 1620, son of John and Mary (Holmes). His parents migrated to New England in 1632. His father was the 1st president of the Colony of R. I. & Providence Plantation under the first patent, and at his death left his son John a portion of his farm at the southeast of Newport, where he continued to reside until his death. His house with its stone chimney was standing early in the past century, but was pulled down to give place to a modern villa. He first m. 17 June, 1647, Elizabeth Baulstone, dau. of William and Elizabeth. Three children were the result of this union, but for some unknown reason, the marriage proved an unhappy one; for Sept. 16, 1654, he petitioned for a divorce, and the privilege to marry again was granted him 25 of 3mo., 1655. The following June she was granted the same privilege, and m. Thomas Gould of North Kingstone. Major John during his long life filled many positions of importance and trust. He was Treasurer of the Colony 1652, and held the same office several times afterwards. He was General Assistant in May 1656; one of the petitioners to the new Charter granted the Government by Charles II in 1663, and one of the incorporators of the new government. Feb. 1664 he was directed to receive the King's commissioners at Seekonk, with authority to contract for their means of conveyance. May 6, 1673, chosen Deputy Governor, but refused to accept the office. He was also elected the following year and again refused. 1677 he was one of the Commissioners to settle the boundary dispute between Providence and Pawtuxet. May 1684 appointed Major for the Island,—from this he derived his title. In 1686 Sir Edmund Andros was commissioned Gov. of all the New England Colonies, overthrowing the Colonial Govs. Rhode Island was determined to resume its former charter. Gov. Walter Clark did not dare assume the risk and responsibility of the situation, and refused to act. John Coggeshall, Deputy Gov., boldly took charge of the government till the election in Feb. 1690, when the assembly convened for the first time in four years. He was again made Deputy Governor. In May 1701 he was Deputy from Newport and this was his last appearance in public life. He d. 7 Oct., 1708 in his 90th year (sic), and was int. in the family burying ground. In his will he requested that he should be buried by the side of his wife Patience, and his request was complied with, as is seen by the gravestones, the inscriptions upon each being still legible. His 3rd wife was Mary (Hedge) Sturgis, whom he m. 1 Oct., 1679; b. 1648, living at date of his will; she was also buried in these grounds which was on his own land. He had four children by his 3rd wife. At the time of his death he was possessed of a large amount of real estate, a portion of which was left by his father, and the balance made up by purchases at different times. His will, dated 22 June, 1708, a long and curious document, shows him to have been a very eccentric person. James, son by his wife Patience, he cuts off with a small legacy, and gives his reason for so doing. The three children by his first wife (John, William, Elizabeth) he disinherits altogether, but they had already been provided for by their grandfather Baulstone, who bequeathed them his farm of 240 acres, a portion of which embraced the well known Portsmouth Grove, the point at the northern part of it is known as Coggeshall's Point to-day. 5. IV. DELIVERANCE, b. not far from 1642; m. Rev. James Ashton, 1667. He drew lot No. 23 in the original division of land at Middletown, N. J., 1665. In 1668 he recorded his cattle-mark; 1669, May 25, chosen Deputy to the General Assembly at Portland Point, N. J.; Nov. 26, 1669, constable to the Court held at Portland Point, which suggests that his first place of res. may have been upon the shore rather than inland, as it subsequently was; 1669, foreman of the Grand Jury; 1670, received a patent for 347 acres of land. This was doubtless in the vicinity of Freehold, to which he withdrew; 1677, overseer; 1679, constable; 1698, executed a deed of gift to his son James of 400 acres of land at Crosswicks. He is frequently alluded to in the old records as "the Rev. James Ashton," but no proof of his ordination is at hand. He was, however, the first to minister to the religious community in Monmouth County of the Baptist persuasion. If ordained, it was probably in 1686. He was held in high esteem by his associates and filled many honorable and responsible positions. He d. about 1705, for administration was granted his wife upon his estate May 19, that year. 6. JUDGE JOHN THROCKMORTON (John 1), b. Providence, R. I., 1645. His father was a patentee of land in Monmouth Co., N. J., April 8, 1665; this land he transferred to his sons: John, Job and Joseph, the former two of whom soon settled there. The First Town Book of Middletown in its first entry, 30 Dec., 1667, shows that the home lots laid out in Middletown were thirty-six in number. Of these allotments John Throckmorton, Jr., was number 24. The same book records the following:

"1669, Nov. 6. John Throckmorton, Jr., of Middletown, N. J., gave a power of attorney to his father, John, Sr., of Providence and calls himself lawful heir to his deceased brother Freegift."

"1670, Dec. 12. John Throckmorton and Alice his wife (after legall publication) were this Day Coupled together in marriage by Edward Smith Constable." P. 13.

Alice Stout, his wife, was born by deduction at Gravesend, L. I., about 1652, dau. of Richard and Penelope (Van Princess). John Throckmorton Jr., was a man of distinguished ability and evidently a leader in his community. The First Town Book of Middletown and the New Jersey Archives are voluminous in records concerning him:

Chosen "ffence viewer," Aug. 31, 1670; Deputy 1671, 1675, 1686, 1688; "chosen to the place of Ensign to be presented to the Governour, June 5, 1672"; constable, July 1, 1673, and Aug. 26 same year was made Magistrate; Jan. 1, 1675, "chosen by maior votes grand Jurey man"; Nov. 1675, as Deputy of Middletown, he subscribed to the oath of allegiance; June 1668, he again swore allegiance; member of first Assembly at Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 1675; also representative in this and later years (N. J. Arch.; Rec. Gov. & Council of E. Jersey, 1682-1703, p. 146). "Jan. 1, 1679: At a Legall Towne meting John Throckmorton was one of three chosen to call ye former constables to account about the Towne Rates. It was farder voted by the Inhabitants that the woulves that are killed in the boundes of midelltowne thay will ad five shillings to Each heed out of the towne Rate for the time to com."

"1679. Will of Edward Covill of Bradwell, Essex, gent., bequeaths a legacy of £6 to his kinsman, John Throckmorton, of Midle-towne in New England. Dated 1 Aug., 1679. (Proven in P. C. C., 9 Feby. 1679-80. 16 Bath.) London."

1675, received a grant of 240 acres of land, and warrants of tracts of land to be subsequently located and surveyed issued to him, 240 acres; Oct. 6, 1676, received a grant of 240 acres; Nov. 1676, 240 acres as one of the purchasers of Nevesinks; Nov. 18, 254 acres; all at Middletown. 1682/3, he received a "deed of gift of land from his father." Between the years 1684 and 1690 he bought and sold many large tracts of land, among others this: "1685, July 19-20. Robert Turner, one of the Proprietors of East Jersey, late of Dublin, Ireland, now of Phila., Pa., merchant, to John Throckmorton of Middletown, gentleman, for 1-48 of ½ of 1/12 share of East N. J., conveyed to him by Thomas Rudyard." This land he subsequently sold to different people, 1686-88. (Trenton Deeds. Lib. 3, p. 348.) Between the years 1688-1695, a strip of land reaching nearly across Monmouth Co., was taken by men from Middletown and was known as "Middletown Mens Lots"; it extended along the northwest side of Burlington Path to the Pines. The tract below the path containing 480 acres belonged to John Throckmorton.

He was Justice of the Peace in Monmouth Co., 1682/3. In March 1683 he was commissioned Judge to hear and determine cases in Court, and served in that capacity until his death. His youngest brother, Joseph, died during the winter of 1689/90, making John his executor, but before Joseph's will went to probate, John himself died sometime between July 17 and Aug. 22, 1690; int. Middletown, by the side of his father, on ground appropriated for this purpose by his will: Rec. E. Jersey, Aug. 23, 1690; Liber D, folio 221, Per Jas. Emott, Clk.

There are many other records concerning John Throckmorton and his "widow Alice," but they possess no special interest except the following concerning her:

"Marriage Licences State of New York, Alse Throgmartin and Robert* Skelton, 30 Oct., 1691."

"With the consent of Alice, Late Throckmorton, now Skelton, as relict and ex'rix of the Estate of John Throck. of Middletown in East J., Deceased, and of Robert Skelton, now of Middletown, aforesaid, yeoman, now husband of the said Alice, adm'ers on the Estate of Joseph Throck., Mariner, also deceased, of the second part . . . . Robert Skelton was a witness to a will, 7 July, 1701, and was dead before April 1704; the list of his goods and chattles is quite lengthy. Alice, evidently disliking to be any man's "relict," and capable of being quickly consoled for loss of husbands, m. 3rd, Mr. Jones, before April 1704, as is evidenced by "Letters of Adm'tration granted Alice Jones, mother of Joseph Throckmorton,

* By this marriage there was at least one child,—Susannah Skelton, who m. Barnes Johnson. She is spoken of as "the sister of the half blood of Joseph Throckmorton, her brother." She was living in Monmouth Co., in 1726, but deceased in 1750, leaving a son Skelton Johnson.

lately deceased, intestate, April 13, 1704; also upon the estate of Robert Skelton, of New York, lately deceased, granted his widow Alice Jones." Date of her death not known. The children of John Throckmorton were all born between 1671 and 1690, but the order of births is uncertain. Joseph is mentioned first in his father's will, but this was, and still is, the English custom of naming the sons first even though the daughters were older. (See English Pedigrees.)

9. I. REBECCA, b. 1671/2. The first mention found of her is this: "The Friends Record of Shrewsbury, N. J., 1689, 9th of 11th mo. (in margin 10th of 2d mo., 1690) A Record of Marriages off the People off God in Scorn Called Quakers. Rebekah Throckmorton witness to marriage of Robert Ray and Jenett Hamton, both of Shrewsbury, at home of John Hamton." Rebecca m. about 1692, as 2d wife,† John Stillwell, eldest son of Capt. Richard;‡ b. 18 May, 1660. Freehold deeds, Books E & F show that five daus. of John Throckmorton Jr., join in conveying property to Job Throckmorton (their uncle), 19 and 20 Nov., 1705. In this conveyance they speak of themselves as, "Rebecca, wife of John Stillwell, of Staten Island, farmer; Sarah, wife of Moses Lipit, of Middletown, carpenter; Alice, wife of Thomas Stillwell, of Middletown, farmer; Patience, wife of Hugh Coward, of N. Y. City, Mariner; and Deliverance Throckmorton of Middletown." John Stillwell left Gravesend and settled on Staten Island, 8 April, 1693, having received a patent for 160 a. of land there which was previously taken up by his grandfather, Nicholas Stillwell (Liber 2 of Patents, p. 1). In 1693 he was High Sheriff of Richmond Co.; member of the Colonial Assembly, 1702 to 1716 (III of N. Y. Civil List); in 1701 an opponent of the Leislerian faction. He d. 1724, survived by widow and eight children. Will dated 19 Feb., 1724/5; rec. N. Y., Liber 10 of Wills, p. 140. In 1757 he was probably dead and she was living. The petition of John Corson concerning the estate of John Stillwell recites that Rebecca "resided the best part of the time in the western part of Monmouth Co." She m. 2d, James Cox of Monmouth Co., son of Thomas; he d. 1750. Place of her interment unknown as she outlived her last husband. She probably withdrew to her Stillwell or Salter kindred. Ch.: Manasseh, Daniel, Alice, Thomas. (2) Mary, b. 1696; m. Daniel Seabrook. In 1743 was a widow living with her brother Richard, per his will. She was the wife of Daniel Corsen, Nov. 1757, who was b. about 1714 and d. 26 Jan., 1761. She was living as late as 1766, when she was Exx. of will of Christian Corsen, her father-in-law. No ch. 10. II. SARAH, b. about 1674/5; m. Moses Lippit, by mar. lic. dated 8 Dec., 1697; supposed son of Nathaniel; b.. 17 Feb., 1668. His name frequently occurs in the records at Middletown, where he was a carpenter: "Aprill the 13: 1691 Moses Lipit his Eare Marke is a hole in the Left Eare" (Town Book); 1692, bought land of William Eastman in Middletown; 1696, bought land of Francis Usselton; Juror 1692. Jan. 22, 1700/1: Confirmation to Sarah, wife of Moses Lipet, Patience Throckmorton, Else Throckmorton and Deliverance, all daus. of John Throckmorton dec'd, who held 1-20 share of 1-24 share of the Province, in full of second dividend, of 250 a. as follows: 230 a. near Wakake; 17 a. Marsh at Shaoll Harbour; 60 a. at Barnagate. "In 1714 Moses Lippit and wife Sarah, John and Rebecca Stillwell, Thomas Stillwell and wife Alice, and Hugh Coward and wife Patience, deeded land to Job Throckmorton (uncle), land surveyed for John Throckmorton, son and heir of Job." was living, as per deed above; in 1717 he failed to appear at his dau. Patience's wedding, which was held "at the house of Sarah Lippit, in Middletown," from which it is fair to presume that he was dead. 1727, "The Widow Lippitt" and dau. Anne, appeared on a Middletown Account Book. 1728, March 29, she again appeared on a map of land, as "Widdow Lippitt." In addition to the last mentioned lands, the Lippits occupied a home-lot on the North side of Middletown Highway. This property was owned by John Throckmorton, Jr., at time of his death and upon it he interred the remains of his father, John Throckmorton, 1st, and thereafter set aside this ground as a burial site, to be reserved for all time for that purpose. Subject to this reservation, the property passed to his dau., Sarah Lippit, and later to her heirs. During their ownership this burial site was called Lippit burying-ground. From the Lippits the property passed to Edward Taylor, and thenceforth was known as Taylor burying-ground. Moses and Sarah Lippit and some of their children were buried here. Two silver tablespoons, once owned by Moses and Sarah Lippit and marked with their initials, "M. L. S.," are in the possession of Dr. J. E. Stillwell, New York City. "The Lippits were good-natured and good-mannered." Ch.: (1) Patience, b. about 1698/9; m. John Woolley of Shrewsbury, 11 mo. 17, 1717. Among the witnesses were the bride's sisters, Alce and Ann Lippit, and her brother John. In an old Bible is the following: "Patience Lippit 1717.

Patience Lippit is my name

11. III. PATIENCE, b. about 1679/80; m. Capt. Hugh Coward, by lic. dated 6 July, 1703. Stillwell's Misc. says of him: "From somewhat untrustworthy sources, it is stated that Hugh Coward was of Bristol, England, and later a resident near the city of Manchester, in the same country. Further that he was a sea Captain in the Royal Navy. The Cowards tried for an English estate, sent Wyckoff Henderson, Esq., dec'd, to England. They say he got rich and they got nothing. He kept all the papers. They were gotten together by a descendant and are now all destroyed."* Capt. Coward's children are reported born in England, which is quite possible, since he may have taken his wife with him on his voyages. In 1705 and again in 1714, "Hugh Coward of New York City, Mariner, and Patience his wife," deeded land to Job Throckmorton, etc. This is the last definite mention found concerning Hugh Coward. He evidently died early and his widow m. 2d, Mr. Lake, and was deceased herself before 1726, as the following attests: "A quitclaim deed from Rebecca Stillwell and John Coward, son of Patience Lake, deceased, heirs of Joseph Throckmorton, deceased, to Susannah, wife of Barnes Johnson, of Middletown, N. J.; dated 8 Oct., 1726." Ch.: (1) Sarah, b. England; m. Joseph Lake, perhaps of the same family as her step-father. (2) Rev. John, b. England; m. 12. IV. ALICE, b. about 1682(?); m. Thomas Stillwell* of Gravesend, L. I., by lic. dated 9 April, 1703. He was a farmer at Middletown, N. J., when he and Alice, his wife, signed deeds as heirs of John Throckmorton (father). He and his wife settled on 93 acres of land at Yellow Hook, New Utrecht, fronting on the bay. He was granted a license to maintain a ferry to Staten Island; d. 1758. His children joined in a power of attorney, upon which letters of administration were granted at Trenton, N. J., 20 Oct., 1759. He and his wife and their son John and his wife are buried in "The Old Lipit or Taylor Burying-Ground," Middletown, N. J. Ch.: (1) Nicholas. (2) Thomas. (3) John, b. 1709; d. 1794; m. Mercy Burrows. 14. VI. DELIVERANCE, b. 16—; united with her married sisters and their husbands in conveying property to Job Throckmorton (uncle), 19 & 20 Nov., 1705. Her home at that date was Middletown, N. J. In 1714, her four sisters and their husbands again deeded land to Job Throckmorton, but her name does not appear on the deed, from which it is fair to presume she was dead. Never married.

7. JOB THROCKMORTON (John 1), b. Providence, R. I., 30 Sept., 1650. At the age of sixteen he accompanied his elder brother, John, to Monmouth Co., N. J., and drew Lot No. 22 in the division of land at Middletown, 30 Dec., 1667; m. Sarah Leonard, 2 Feb., 1683/4; b. Lynn, Mass., 29 May, 1660, dau. of Henry and Mary. He was one of the Proprietors of East Jersey and a man of prominence and property. His name appears frequently upon the public records in the buying and selling of lands. 1675. Job Throckmorton purchased 120 acres; warrants of tracts of land to be subsequently located and surveyed, 120 acres; Oct. 6, 1675—120 acres and meadows, Middletown; 1688, March 28, Deed: John Throckmorton to Job for 1-10 of 1-48 shares, ut supra. This was confirmed June 25, 474 acres in Monmouth Co., 1688-1695. Job Throckmorton took 274 acres in what was known as "Middletown Mens Lots." 1699, Mch. 30, he sold for 120 pounds, to Benj. Borden of Middletown, 474 acres, which had been granted him 21 June, 1688; do. 29 Mch. he bought 15 acres, more or less, of meadow for y^e sum of nine pounds. "1700, Jan 20, Job Throckmorton, of Shrewsbury, gent., purchased from Nath: Leonard of Middletown, all those Tracts of Land and Meadow Situated . . . at Colts Neck beginning at a white oak marked on four sides, &c., 220 acres . . . Together with all manner of Houses, Edifices, buildings, fences, fields, improvements, Trees, wood, water, etc." 1701, June 7: Quit Rent, 610 acres."

Jan. 1, 1678, he was "chosen to receve the tobaco for the survaying of the Towne boundes."

When Freegift Throckmorton, eldest son of John 1st, died unm. in 1666, his brother John being the next in male succession, inherited Freegift's share of the estate according to the English law; later Joseph, "Mariner," youngest son of John 1st, likewise died (unm.) and left his real estate to Joseph Throckmorton Jr.,* his brother John's only son. When Joseph Throckmorton, "Mariner," made his will in Philadelphia, 2 Dec., 1689, in "haste" his "ship under sail" and he "must be gone that tide," it would have been well for those who came after had he heeded his lawyer's advice and been "more speciall And particular in the disposal of his personall Estate to avoid Strife among his relatives," instead of disposing of it "as the Laws of the respective places where it lyes shall order," being so sure that his "relatives would well enough agree one with an other about it!" Had his brother John lived to settle the estate as "Executor" it would probably have so turned out. But John's death followed so quickly on the heels of Joseph's that nothing had been done. Hence trouble immediately sprang up between Job Throckmorton and his brother John's widow, Alice (nee Stout), over the estate of Joseph, as witness the following from the Burlington Court Records:

* Joseph Throckmorton Jr., also soon died without issue. And thus it will be seen that much of the property of three sons of John 1st: Freegift, Joseph and John, came into the possession of Alice Stout Throckmorton and her daughters. While Job Throckmorton, the only son to perpetuate the Throckmorton name received a younger son's portion.

"1690 August 18, Job Throckmorton gave power of attorney to his brother (i.e. brother-in-law) Samuel Leonard, to collect debts due to his deceased brother Joseph." —N. J. Arch., I. XXI, 430.

The same records two months later show the result:

"October 3, 1690. Alice Throckmorton, Relict of Jn° Throckmorton, Late of Middletown, in East Jersey, deced., had Lrs. of Admistracon granted of ye goods of Joseph Throckmorton, Marriner, deced. 1693 Oct. 11, Job Throckmorton testified as witness to his brother John's will. 1693 he represented Middletown in the General Assembly (N. J. Arch., 1. XXI, 160); 1694, "Messenger at Council at Perth Amboy"; 1708, May 22, "Jobe Throckmorton's affedavitt, aged 57 years."—Leeds Papers. He d. intestate 20 Aug., 1709; int. in the family burial ground, Middletown, beside his father and brother John. His tombstone which still stands (the next oldest in Monmouth Co.) is a low arched reddish brown slab of pre-Revolutionary days, the top curving to outline head and wings of the moon-faced angel who presided there. A neat wire fence surrounds the well kept "God's Acre" and a great tree throws its shadow over the ancient tomb.

The Leonard (Lennard) Family.

The Leonard family is said to have descended through the Dacre family from Edward III (Gen. Hist. of Manning Leonard; Edmonds Work, 1764, Vol. 4, P. 356-8; Koster: Annals of the Leonard Family).

Henry Leonard, b. about 1618, Pontypool, Wales. He and his younger brother, James Leonard, were skilled workmen in iron. They emigrated to Mass., where they were connected for several years with iron works in Lynn and Braintree. In 1652, they established a furnace and forge at Taunton, Mass., now Raynham,—the first successful iron works in America. The old forge remained in constant use for more than 200 years; now nothing remains but the old trip-hammers, the dam and foundation walls. The observation, "Where you find good iron works there you will find a Leonard," has been almost literally verified in New England. Henry Leonard later removed to Monmouth Co., N. J. (about 1674), and was the first to set up iron works at Tinton, Falls. He and his brother were among the original purchasers of land in Monmouth Co. The Leonard family possessed great wealth, and from generation to generation held various offices of trust, honor, and profit. In later Colonial days some of them maintained almost baronial state. James, younger brother, m. Margaret Martin; 2d Margaret, who d. s.p., about 1701. He d. before 1691, aged 70. His son, Capt. James Leonard, was the owner and builder of the quaint, many gabled house at Raynham,—part of it probably built as early as 1670, altho' the vane bore the date 1700. Henry m. Mary ——, at Lynn, Mass. Whose Industry and Frugality, whose Honesty and Piety were long an example to the public. Rev. 14:13." (5) Daniel.

8. JOSEPH THROCKMORTON (John 1), b. Providence, R. I., 165–; never married. He was a mariner, one of those "who go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters." He was also an extensive land owner in both East and West Jersey, as well as in New York and Penna. He probably made his home when on land with his brothers in Middletown, N. J., for in the Book of Patents, 1688, he is called "Joseph Throckmorton of Middletown, gentleman."

"1685, Dec. 25, he had license to purchase Indian land, 1200 acres at Crosswicks (N. J. Coast in Three Centuries, Vol. II, p. 294). 1687/8, Jan. 20, purchased of his brother John 474 acres in East Jersey; Feb. 20, same year, purchased from Samuel Spicer the following tracts: 1, 450 a.; 2, 9 a. at Waycack; 3, a houselot of 8 a.; 4, another lot of 8 a.; 5, six a. at Poplar Hill; 6, 12 a. on Poplar Field; 7, 120 a.; 8, six a. of meadow at Sholl Harbour Creek; also 1688, March 29, his brother John deeded him 1-10 of 1-48 share E. J., purchased from Robt. Turner (N. J. Deeds).

Affidavit of Joseph Throckmorton. As to rough treatment of his vessel by Captain Crofts, of H.M.S. Deptford. Sworn before N. Barnard, Mayor, 4 March, 1687 (Calendar of State Papers, Colonial; America & West Indies. Vol. IX).

Joseph Throckmorton d. between Dec. 2, 1689 and May 1690, probably at the Barbados. Before setting sail on his last voyage from Philadelphia he made his will, 2 Dec., 1689. He "being about to go to sea" devised "all real estate anywhere in the world to the male of John Throckmorton of East Jersey, named Joseph Throckmorton, and his heirs forever." The personal estate "to be disposed of as laws of respective places where it lies shall order. . . . My brother John shall be guardian for said Joseph." Exr. John Throckmorton. Proven 19 Sept., 1690. (Rec. of Wills, Surrogate's Office, N. Y., Liber 3-4, p. 189.)

"These are to certify to all whom it may concern that upon the second day of December 1689 att the house of George Emblem In the towne of Philadelphia I Patrick Robinson by direction of Joseph Throgmorton (since deceased) did write his will, and I was desirous that hee might bee more speciall And particular in the disposall of his personal Estate to avoid Strife among his relations, he answered hee was In haste, and the ship undersail, And that he must be gone that tide, And I having searously askt him what he meant by the disposall of his personall estate as the Laws of the respective places whereof it lies shall order. And whither he meant not that his relatives should enjoy theire proportions thereof, hee answered that hee knew they would well enough agree one with another about it, And that it was not his designe that any one of them should carrie away the whole. And thereafter after his decease, John Throgmorton sent for me to the house of William Biddle, and after I had delivered him severall papers which I had for trust from Joseph Throgmorton, hee in the presance of William Biddle And John Stout, askt what I thought hee meant by this disposall of his personall Estate, I told him as is above related, And I also told him the answere that his brother gave me as is above recited whereupon the said John Throgmorton answered that it should be soe. And that hee would go home And Compound with them, And that hee designed the monie due (and as then hee understood ready to be paid) from William Solway to help pay off the composure with them, to all which I am ready to sweare If thereto required by all persons therein concerned, Patrick Robinson Burlington the 4th 8ber 1690 personally appeared before me one of the Justices of the peace for west New Jersey the above Patrick robinson who did according to the Law of the said Province Solemnlie attest In the presence of God to the truth of what is above written.

Richard Basnett."

William Biles, who was with Joseph Throckmorton in Phila. when he made his will, gave evidence at Burlington 3rd Oct., 1690, that Joseph Throckmorton told him "he would dispose of his Land as hee saw good, which he did unto his brother John's Eldest sone . . . but that he made his will only for the disposure of his Lands, and that he said for his other Estate Lett them take it to whom it shall appertain by the Laws of the Province where the same Lyes" (Liber E Deeds, p. 257).

16. JUDGE JOHN THROCKMORTON (Job 7, John 1), b. Middletown, N. J., 10 Aug., 1688; m. about 1712, Mary Stillwell; b. about 1690, dau. of Capt. Jeremiah and granddau. of Nicholas Stillwell, 1st. Res. Shrewsbury, N. J., where he was quite prominent in the early history of Monmouth County as indicated by public records:

"April 9, 1716, John, Joseph and Rebecca Throckmorton were mortgagors of the personal estate of John Bowne. Jan. 21, 1718, John Throckmorton bought 100 a. of land in the Eastern Division of N. J., for 10 lb. current silver money. Aug. 9, 1732, he paid William Bradford 280 lbs. current money of the Province of N. J. for several tracts or parcels of land lying in the Co. of Middletown & Province of N. J., over 500 acres. He was Colonel of the Militia of the Province of Monmouth Co., 1735, 1739*; April 18, 1740, he was Appointed to take names of persons willing to enlist in His Majestie's name to take service.* 1738 he was vestry-man at Christ Church, Shrewsbury, and is named in the Charter granted 3 June of that year by Gov. Burnet for King George II: "Christ Church, Shrewsbury, Patent of incorporation to Henry Leonard, John Throckmorton, Thomas Morford, Jeremiah Stillwell . . . and the rest of the inhabitants of the town of Shrewsbury & Middletown in communion with the Church of England, as the Minister, Church Wardens and Vestry of Christ Church, etc." (Liber C 2 of Commissions, pp. 150-154, Trenton).

In Europe at this time the lot of the poor was extremely hard, and many persons came across the Atlantic solely to escape the inevitable misery at home. The captain of a ship that brought over a penniless man of this class was allowed to sell him for four years to pay his passage. It was also customary to transport men who had been convicted of small crimes and sell them for a period of greater or less length. Not infrequently they were coarse and degraded, and they did not always stay their time out as is witnessed by advertisements in "The American Weekly Mercury" (N. J. Col. Doc.):

"Run away from John Throckmorton, Esq: of Shrewsbury, in the County of Monmouth, New Jersey, on the 12th of this Instance a servant boy about 17 years of Age, named Joshua Sted, a middling well set Lad somewhat bowleg'd, a Leering down Look and a small Lisping in his Speech, he had on an old black Hat, A moss couler'd Homespun vest, a Flannel shirt, and a pair of old Stockings. Whosoever takes up the Runaway and Secures him so his Master may have him again, shall have 20 Shillings Reward and all reasonable Charges.—June 11-18, 1724."

John Throckmorton

Will proved 11 Nov., 1741.

The Stillwell Family.

Lieu. Nicholas Stillwell, b. about 1603, came from the County of Surrey, England (where the family dates back to 1324), to Virginia, about 1638. He was a famous Indian fighter and in the Virginian uprising of 1644 he had command of a troop of horse and was called the "valient Stillwell." Upon the termination of this war he joined the forces of Claybourne in Maryland, who was in rebellion against the Royalist Gov. Calvert who naturally had the support of the neighboring Royalist, Sir William Berkeley, Gov. of Virginia. The espousal of Claybourne's cause by Nicholas Stillwell made him persona non grata with the two governors, and he found it expedient to move to Manhattan Island about 1645/6. Here he bought a house and lot and settled near the fort, but soon purchased an out-lying plantation at Deutil Baynon foot of 47th street and East River. He soon, however, joined the English Colony of Gravesend, but finally moved to Dover, Staten Island, where he d. 28 Dec., 1671. Nicholas Stillwell was a man of great natural force and dominated his fellow citizens. He was one of the three officers in command of the troops in the Indian War (Esopus War) in 1663; was sheriff of Long Island under Stuyvesant; magistrate of Gravesend from 1649 to 1663; president of the Court-Martial for the Trial of Freebooters and Pirates in 1654, and following his removal from Gravesend to Staten Island about 1664, he was elected, in 1667, by the inhabitants of the Island, constable, which carried with it power to choose two overseers who, jointly with himself, constituted a court of jurisdiction in cases not exceeding five pounds. By his wife Ann Van Dyke, who survived him and married twice more, he had many children. Among them: (1) Capt. Richard Stillwell, b. 1636, d. 1688; m. Mary Holmes, dau. of Rev. Obediah; m. 2d, Freelove Cooke who, being bap., took the name of Mercy. Among his ch: Capt. John, who m. Rebecca Throckmorton, and Thomas, who m. Alice Throckmorton: two brothers marrying two sisters. (2) Capt. Jeremiah Stillwell, youngest son, b. 1663; d. after 1749; m. ——. Among his ch.: Mary, b. about 1690, m. Judge John Throckmorton, as given. Jeremiah Jr., of Freehold, N. J., m. Rebecca Ashton, dau. of John, and granddau. of Rev. James and Deliverance (Throckmorton) Ashton. Sarah, m. Made inventory of goods, chattles, etc., of Edward Taylor, 16 Feb., 1744/5; also "fellow bondsman" on his will (N. J. Arch., Vol. XXX). Witness to will of Samuel Cook of Shrewsbury, 2 May, 1745 (Ibid). His brother Job Throckmorton deeded him a piece of Bogg meadow on the east side of Mine Brook, 22 April, 1748, that had been granted Job in his father's will (Proceedings of Inhabitants of Shrewsbury, N. J.). Jerret Morford deeded to him a tract of land lying & being at Horseneck in Middletown containing 120 a.; also 3 a. of fresh meadow; also 8 a. of meadow; &c., 27 March, 1755. Bequeathed 20 pounds in will of his sister, Mrs. Sarah Nichols, 1756.

"At a council held at Elizabeth Town Tuesday March 16, 1756, His Excellency nominated Joseph Throck Morton to be appointed Justice of the Peace in Monmouth Co." (Pro. of Inh. of Shrewsbury; N. J. Arch., Vol. XVII, p. 4).

"Record of Ear Marks of Middletown, N. J., June 18th, 1757. Then Jofeph Throck Morton gaue in his Ear Mark for his Cattle to be Recorded as followeth viz that is A crap out of Each Ear and a halfpenney on the Under Side of the Left Ear the Ear Mark that formerly belonged to Addom Dobs Entred p[r] John Wall Towne Clk." (Stillwell: Hist. & Gen. Misc., Vol. II).

Joseph Throckmorton d. 6 Aug., 1759; int. Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury, where still stands his red sandstone tombstone, with its winged death's head of pre-Revolutionary times. His wife survived, but date and place of her death and burial unknown.

At the E. Reed Throckmorton home near Waynesburg, Pa., may be seen an old Throckmorton Family Bible, printed in London, 1740, which, notwithstanding its great age, is in a very good state of preservation. The earlier dates antedate the Bible by half a century, the first being that of the birth of Joseph Throckmorton as given above, followed by that of his wife and their children, and their "children's children even unto the third and fourth generation,"—for 200 years. It probably belonged to Joseph's eldest son, Job Throckmorton, who most likely copied the earlier dates from some source now unknown. The cuts here shown are reproductions from photographs.

Will made Feb. 21, 1772. Stephen Heviland.

Ch.: (1) Hannah, b. 14 Oct., 1749; d. 24 Nov., 1753. (2) Stephen, b. Monday, 16 July, 1753. (3) Patience, b. 8 March, 1756; d. 10 Aug., 1758. (4) Job, b. 30 April, 1759.

* By a previous marriage (wife's name unknown) he had ch.: Benjamin, m. Rebecca Stillwell, 9 April, 1764; Joseph, m. Hannah; Mary, m. Hendrick Johnson; Eleanor and Catherine. All these are mentioned in his will. His children by 2d marriage all found in the old Throckmorton Bible.

32. II. JOB, b. Saturday, 10 Dec., 1720.

33. III. ANN, b. 31 Jan., 1722/3; bp. Freehold, public, 14 April, 1754. She was married when her father made his will, 1759, but he does not mention her married name; she is probably the "Anna Throckmorton" who had license to marry Josiah Halstead, of Monmouth Co., N. J., 20 May, 1755,—ceremony June 1st (Parish Rec.) She d. 14 Nov., 1760, aged 28(?) yrs., 1 mo., 23 ds., per tombstone at Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury. The discrepancy in the age may have been a mistake of the stone cutter or the one who copied the record of birth in the Bible. Josiah Halstead was son of Timothy and Margery; m. 1st, Zilpha West, who d. 7 Jan., 1754, aged 30 yrs.* Ch.: (1) Zilpha, bp. Shrewsbury, 8 Aug., 1756, public. (2) Sarah, bp. Shrewsbury, 25 Dec., 1757, public (3) Marcelia, bp. 30 Sept., 1759, public; d. 13 March, 1760, aged 6 mos., 19 ds.

34. IV. JOSEPH, b. 24 Oct., 1724; d. 21 Feb., 1725.

35. V. JOSEPH (2nd), b. Saturday, 18 Dec., 1725; d. Wednesday, 8 April, 1752; int. Old Topanemus.

36. VI. REBECKAH, b. "Fryday," 5 May, 1727; men. in father's will. No further record concerning her.

37. VII. PATIENCE, b. Sabbath day, 8 Dec., 1728; m. by license dated 8 May, 1758, Daniel Woolley, of Shrewsbury, N. J. Her father's will speaks of "ye children of my Dau. Patience." No further record.

38. VIII. ALICE, b. 25 June, 1731; unm. when her father made his will, 1759.

39. IX. CATHERINE, b. Monday, 6 March, 1732/3; m. Richard Norris, son of William and Mary (Burrows),‡ of Shrewsbury, by license dated 19 Oct., 1765, she of Middletown. No further record.

40. X. JAMES, b. 26 Nov., 1734; bp. 3 Aug., 1735, Freehold. Probably d. young; not mentioned in his father's will.

41. XI. MARY, b. Thursday, 20 July, 1738; bp. with her younger brother, John, 9 Feb., 1746 (Parish Rec.); m. Eaton Norris, of Shrewsbury, by license dated 3 Sept., 1767, she of Freehold. He son of William and Mary (Burrows).‡ Ch.: (1) William, b. Wednesday, 8 Feb., 1769. (2) Joseph, b. Saturday, 21 July, 1770. (3) Rebecka, b. Tuesday, 18 Feb., 1772. (4) John, b. Monday, 4 April, 1774 (Bible).

42. XII. JOHN, b. Wednesday, 24 Feb., 1741/2. His bequest in his father's will is £30, a gun, wearing apparel, etc. The compiler has a hazy recollection of hearing her grandfather, Morford Throckmorton, say that one of his "grandfather's brothers was never heard from after the Revolutionary War." That would necessarily mean this John. The Revolutionary records of N. J., Adj. Gen.'s office, Trenton, show that one "John Throckmorton served as Corporal, Capt. Henry Waddell's Company, 1st Regt., Monmouth Co., N. J. Militia,—during the Revolutionary War." Whether "Corporal John Throckmorton" is the same as John Throckmorton b. 1741/2, the compiler is unable to say, but it seems plausible. (See John Throckmorton 3050, under "Unconnected Lines").

The Cox Family in New Jersey

The first of this family in Monmouth Co., N. J., was Thomas Cox. He was among those who bought land of the Indians. He was originally from Hertfordshire, England; b. 16—; moved first to Marshpath Kill, at the head of Newton Creek, L. I. He was one of the original proprietors of East Jersey. Settled at Middletown, N. J., 1665. In the first division of Town Lots, recorded Dec., 1667, he was allotted lot No. 8; subsequently he was awarded other tracts. In 1668 he was appointed with three others to make "prudential laws." He was Overseer of Fences and Constable and later Deputy of the town to meet the Governor and his Council at Woodbridge. He m. Elizabeth Blashford of Marshpath Kill, by license dated 22 April, 1665; d. 1681. Children:

I. Thomas Jr., b. 1668; d. 1723; m. Mary ——.

II. John, b. 16—; d. 1729; m. Mary ——. He was one of the founders of the noted Baptist Church at Middletown.

* Stillwell gives these two children as follows: "V. ———, who probably m. Nathaniel Robbins. VI. ———, who may have been wife of Ebenezer Cook, who d. 1711."

† "Presumably a granddau. of Richard Jr. and Frances Stout. This assumption, for such it is, rests upon the fact that there was a Frances ——, who became the wife of Job Throckmorton of Shrewsbury, which given name, Frances, was apparently confined to the Stouts of Shrewsbury. She was born too late to have been the dau. of Richard Jr. and Frances Stout of Shrewsbury, but would have been the issue of one of their sons."—Stillwell: Miscellany, Vol. 4, p. 320.

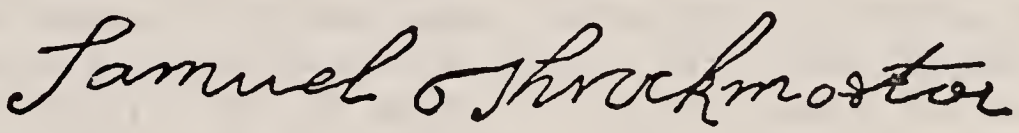
* "1746. Feb. 9. Job, Lewis, Rebecca, sons and daughter of Mr. Job Throckmorton, Sr., and Frances, his wife, baptized at Christ Church, Shrewsbury, by Rev. Thomas Thompson, Missionary in charge of Shrewsbury P. E. Church."—Parish Reg.

21. SAMUEL THROCKMORTON (Job 7, John 1), b. Middletown, N. J., 4 July, 1706; m. Mary, dau. of Mary West, before 1729; res. at Freehold, N. J. "The American Weekly Mercury," April 16-17, 1730, bears this advertisement:

"Run away from Samuel Throgmorton of Freehold, in the County of Monmouth & Province of N. J., a Servant Man named Edward Holland, of middle Stature, sandy strait Hair, an Old Felt Hat, a lightish Gray Kersey Coat with close Sleeves, a Cinnamon coloured Duroy Jacket, an Ozenbrigs shirt, and Leather breeches. Whosoever shall take up said Servant, and bring him to his Master, or give Notice thereof, or to the Work-house in Philadelphia, shall have Forty Shillings Reward and reasonable Charges.

N. B. He lived formerly with John Maltsbury at High-street Ferry."

Mary, wife of Samuel Throckmorton, was baptized 28 Aug., 1747 (Parish Reg. of Christ Church). He was one of the executors named in the will of his sister, Sarah Nichols, 1755. He d. intestate, 21 July, 1758; int. Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury, where his stone still stands. A facsimile of his signature is here given as it appears when he was a witness to the will of Aaron Forman, of Freehold, 31 Dec., 1741:



Daniel Grandin was granted papers of administration on his estate 15 Dec., 1758. His widow, Mary Throckmorton, was administratrix of her mother, Mary West, 17 April, 1759, Monmouth Co.:

"Know all men that we Mary Throckmorton Widow & John Williams are bound to His Excellency Francis Bernard Esq^{r} Gov. of New Jersey in the Sum of two hundred pounds to be paid to him or his survivors or assigns for which pay^{t} we bound ourselves our heirs Executors & administers jointly & severally Dated the 17 day April 1759.

The Condition is that if the above bound Mary Throckmorton (Daughter) ad^{mr} of the Goods Chattels &c of Mary West late of Shrewsbury Deceased shall truly adm^{r} the same & make & exhibit of a true & Perfect Inventory on or before the 17 of July next & render a Just and true ams^{t} on or before the 17 of April next and in all things perform according to the conditions in the Printed bond then the above obligation to be void."

Mary Throckmorton died and was buried at Shrewsbury, 21 Aug., 1766.*

Names of children taken from Christ Church Register and Sarah Nichols' will; there may have been others.

54. I. SARAH, b. 18 Feb., 1730; d. unm. 3 June, 1756, aged 26 years, 3 months, 15 days.; int. June 6th, at Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury (Stillwell's Miscellany). Her small tombstone of red sandstone stands beside that of her brother John's, but so scaled that not a letter was visible in 1909.

55. II. HARTNESS, b. 21 August, 1735; bp. "1735, 7^{bc} 28, of Freehold at Topanemus" (Parish Register, Christ Church). Mentioned in Sarah Nichols' will 1755. "Hartness Throckmorton of Freehold, yeoman, had license to marry Susanna Williams of Freehold, 21 April, 1757. John Williams Junr. voucher." His autograph as written on marriage license is hereto annexed:—

A stone that marks his grave in the cemetery at Christ Church, Shrewsbury, bears the following epigraph: "Hartness Throckmorton died August 22, 1760; aged 25 years, 1 day." The Parish Register states that he was buried August 27, 1760.

License was granted Robert Francis of Freehold to marry Susanna Throckmorton, do. (presumably widow of Hartness), 8 April, 1765; witness Samuel Leonard.

* Parish Register.

56. III. SAMUEL, b. ——; bp. 7 Oct., 1747, privately (Parish Register). Not mentioned in Sarah Nichols' will, 1755, probably dead before that time.

57. IV. JOHN, b. 1747; bp. privately, 7 Oct., 1747 (Parish Register). Died 20 August, 1749, aged 2 years, 3 months, 18 days. Buried Aug. 21 (do.). Tombstone still standing in Christ Churchyard.

58. V. MARTILLA, b. ——. Mentioned in Sarah Nichols' will thus: "I Give and Bequeath unto hartness Throckmorton & Martille Throckmorton Children of my brother Samuel Throckmorton to Each of them 17 pounds a peice."

One "Myrtilla Throckmorton buried at Shrewsbury Feb. 4 (?), 1763." (Parish Register.)

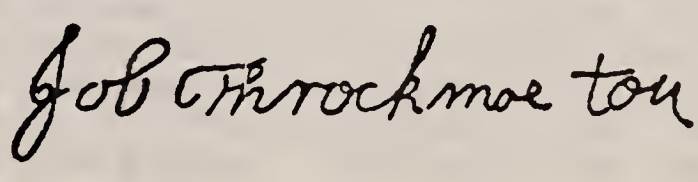
"The Van Winkle Records," p. 93, mentions an "Anne Throckmorton" who may have been a daughter of Samuel and Mary, as she names a son "Hartness T.", an unusual name in the Throckmorton family and occurring only in this one family. It reads as follows: "Abraham Van Winkle and Anne Throckmorton's issue: Hartness T., b. 21 Feb., 1792; m. Maria McMurtry, 1811, and Sarah W. King, 31 March, 1825. Mary B., b. ——; m. —— Stophen. Sarah, b. ——; m. Mr. Hayden." (This family found in Morris Co. N. J.)

23. JOB THROCKMORTON (John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Shrewsbury, N. J., 24 April, 1714; called "Job Throckmorton of Colts Neck" to distinguish him from his uncle and cousin of the same name. Inherited the homestead at Shrewsbury and several tracts of land near Colts Neck; m. his cousin, Hannah Ashton, dau. of John (see 5); "bp. 28 March, 1746, Mrs. Hannah Throckmorton, wife of Job of Colts Neck" (Parish Reg.). 1742 and 1746 he was voucher for mar. lics; 22 April, 1748, deeded land, granted him by his father's will, to his brother Joseph. The following day, April 23, he made his will and passed to that

"Undiscovered country, from whose bourn
No traveler returns."

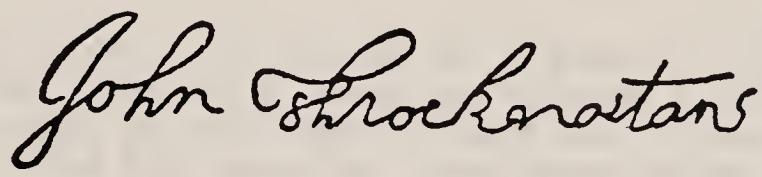
Int. Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury, where his antique, firm-grained, reddish-brown tombstone, adorned with the seraphic head so characteristic of that age, still stands. His widow, young, rich and probably comely, soon consoled herself for the loss of her Job, as is evidenced by the following mar. lic.: "1748. Dec. 18: Mrs. Hannah Throckmorton and Thomas Hankerson, Monmouth Co." The Parish Reg. shows they had "a son Joseph Hankerson, bp. public, 23 Aug., 1752."

Book E of Wills, p. 307, Trenton, N. J. Will of Job Throckmorton (Colts Neck), made 23 April, 1748, "I Job Throckmorton of Shrewsbury, being sick and weak in Body but of perfect and sound mind and memory . . . considering the frailty and uncertainty of my Life, do make, constitute, ordain and declare this my last Will and Testament." . . . All debts and duties to be paid out of movable estate/for I would not have my Negro wench Hannah and her two youngest children, nor my negro man Oliver, to be sold/, if movable estate should fall short to discharge and pay off just debts, then my Exs. should dispose of and sell the Easterly part of that Tract of Land formerly John Williams's to enable them to perform the same . . . Unto dearly beloved wife Hannah: Negro man Oliver, also her Riding mare and side saddle, the Moiety or one half part of all my Lands and real and personal Estate whatsoever that shall be left and remaining after payment of Just Debts. To well loved Dau. Elizabeth the other Moiety or half part of all my Lands and real and personal Estate . . . But in case my dau. Elizabeth shall die without lawful issue, then my mind and will is, that out of the Bequest made to her, the sum of Thirty Pounds shall be first paid to my brother John Throckmorton, which being done, I give and bequeath all the Remainder of said Bequest, to be equally parted and divided between all my Brothers and Sisters share and share alike, and in the case of the Death of any of them, their heirs to possess and enjoy the parent's share. . . My loving Brothers John and Joseph Throckmorton, and my loving uncle Jeremiah Stillwell to be Exr. "Wit: Sam Leonard, John Throckmorton, Jr., Wm. Madoc. Proved 3 May, 1748. Signed:



59. I. ELIZABETH, bp. 9 Feb., 1746, by Rev. Thomas Thompson, Missionary in charge of Shrewsbury P. E. Church. Bequeathed 10 shillings in will of her aunt, Sarah Nichols. Had lic. to m. James Hankerson, 25 May, 1757, both of Monmouth Co., N. J.

25. JOHN THROCKMORTON (John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Shrewsbury, N. J., 20 Feb., 1718; had license to m. his cousin, Sarah Holmes, dau. of Jonathan and Rebecca (Throckmorton), 24 Dec., 1739; the marriage took place at Christ Church, 28th Dec., Rev. John Miln officiating. Signature from marriage license:



"John Throckmorton commissioned Lieutenant, Perth Amboy Company (Capt. Nevill), Middlesex Co., Militia, 1 July, 1746,—during the Colonial Period" (Adj. Gen., Trenton, N. J.). 10 Aug., 1747, his affidavit concerning the behaviour and threatenings of the Brainbridge brothers after the Riot of Amboy taken; 16 Oct., 1747, bondsman on will of T. Lloyd of Perth Amboy; 17 April, 1739, witness to Henry Leonard's will; 15 Jan., 1748, he and wife and Samuel Throckmorton, Jr., witnesses to will of Briget Lloyd of Middlesex Co., widow of Thomas; 11 Feb., 1749 deeded to Jonathan Ketcham 71 acres lying in the corporation of Amboy, for £59-8*s*. (Col. Doc.) "Rec'd the last day of Sept. 1749, of the Exrs. of the Last will and Testament of our brother Jonathan Holmes, Min^{r} dec., by the hands of Samuel Holmes one of the said Exr. the Sum of Seven Shillings and Six pence it being the Legacy and interest Due thereon. Given in Said Will unto my wife, we say Rec^{d} by us. John Throckmorton, Sarah Throckmorton" (Cherry Hall Papers).

In 1741 John Throckmorton came into possession of 600 acres of land in Middlesex Co., N. J., willed him by his father, and soon removed there, as per records above. He later removed to Hunterdon Co., and was keeping an Inn at Amwell, March 1767 (N. J. Arch., Vol. XXV, p. 327). The position of an innkeeper in olden times was a very respectable one, as they were chosen by the town (Col. Rec. Vol. I, p. 100) and later licensed by the county clerk. It was necessary, therefore, that an innkeeper should be a man of character and also possessed of a fair estate. Yet it seems that John Throckmorton fell upon hard times in 1768, and could not pay his debts as they fell due in the ordinary course of business, whereupon he, and a host of other men, suffered the penalty of the law as administered in those days (N. J. Arch., Vol. XXVI, p. 168). Later, 27 March, 1770, he and a fellow townsman filed a petition against one of the Justices of Peace and prayed relief from "Sundry Oppressions" they had suffered from his judgment, but their complaints were not supported by the Council in May (Do. Vol. XVIII, pp. 171, 176). He d. intestate, Amwell, N. J., 1776; administration granted to Jonathan Holmes, son-in-law, 22 Oct., 1776 (Trenton Wills). Sarah Holmes Throckmorton d. 24 Aug., 1805, and was buried on Joseph Holmes' farm, Holmdel, N. J.; b. 18 Aug., 1719. An abstract of her will:

"1804. June 20, Sarah Throckmorton, of the Tp. of Middletown, County of Monmouth, being infirm of body but of a Disposing mind and memory." . . . Item. I give and bequeath unto Rebecca Large all my wearing aperil and my Bed and Beding and my Chest and Trunk, etc. Item. I give and bequeath unto Polly Holmes, Dau. of John and Sarah, 100 pounds York Currency to her and her heirs forever. Item. I give and bequeath unto Polly fish my Grand Child 150 pounds York money. Unto Joseph Holmes of Upper Freehold My Grand Child 150 pounds York money. Unto Elizabeth Wikoff my granddaughter 150 pounds. Unto Elizabeth Bacholar 30 pounds. . . . The rest of my estate divided into three equal shares I give and bequeath unto my son Holmes Throckmorton two of the shares which will be 2/3 of all the remainder of my Estate. Unto my Daughter Rebecca Large the other one I have or 1/3 of all the remainder of my Estate. My loving Cousin (i.e. nephew) John S. Holmes to be Executor." Will filed 30 Aug., 1805. Inv.

of Movable Estate taken 31 Aug., 1805: £2715-1-10. In it are mentioned: "one Negro wench Named Grace and two Negro Boys, one caled Anthony & the other Sam."

John Holmes, brother of Mrs. Throckmorton, conveyed his estate by will (dated 25 Jan., 1791, proved 3 April, 1804) to his nieces and nephews,—children of Samuel Holmes, Rebecca Bacheldor (dau. of his sister Rebecca) and children of "Sarah Throckmorton, widow of John: "To James Throckmorton (eldest son), Holmes Throckmorton, Rebecca Large and Sarah Throckmorton."

Record of children from baptismal roll at Christ Church, and colonial records.

money of the Province of New York." He was sheriff of Middlesex Co., N. J., 1760-61 (N. J. Arch., Vol. XX), and probably at later date. Voucher on marriage license of Cornelius Clark and Mary Grandin, dau. of Daniel (cousin of Samuel), 12 Jan., 1769. A newspaper extract, from N. J. Arch., Vol. V, p. 321:

"An extraordinary ointment for corns, warts, tooth-ache and pain in the face, scald head, and breaking out in children, for burns or scalds, and when the fever has settled in any part of the human body; to be sold by Mary and Sarah Barnes of Trenton; by Thomas Bullman in Pennington, and Samuel Throckmorton in Amwell. Oct. 1781."

1785, April 11. Richard Franses made his will, appointing his daus.: Catherine Throckmorton and Laticia Taylor, and his son Richard Franses Jr., execs. The Franses Bible records this:

"Samuel Throckmorton died at Trenton the 29th Dec., 1786, in the 65th year of his age and was buried in the Episcopal Churchyard in that city. Catherine Throckmorton died at Bloombury, the home of her son Richard Throckmorton near the village of Freehold, in the county of Monmouth, on Monday the 24th of July, 1820, in the 87th year of her age, and was buried in the Episcopal churchyard at that place."

Flat against the outer wall of St. Michael's Church, Trenton, is a quaint little gravestone in memory of an infant granddaughter, Mary Throckmorton (76), who d. 1792. In the curve at the top of this stone is inscribed the only memorial found there of Samuel Throckmorton: "S:T 1786." The present church was probably built over his grave as it was over his grandchild's. A few years since all the stones were removed from old St. Peter's Episcopal Churchyard in Freehold to Maplewood Cemetery just outside the town, and Catherine Throckmorton's gravestone is there along with many of the kindred. She made her will in 1817, filed 11 Sept. 1820:

"Being at an advanced age but in usual health and sound mind, memory and understanding" . . . direct that her "body be buried in decent Christian like manner" . . . and that her executors "take care to have a decent gravestone procured and erected to be paid for out of the Estate of my late brother Richard Fransis, Dec., pursuant to his will."

Item. To son Richard Throckmorton brass & iron shovel & tongs & fire bellows, warming pan, carpet close stool chair & its apurtenances, candle stand & one silver tablespoon marked "R.F."; also my elbow chair & cushion.

Item. To dau. Abigail Throckmorton, my plum coloured silk gown & petticoat which she has now in her possession, all my medicines of every description & the vessels that contain them, also tea cadie & ironing stand.

Item. about 1763, he made a subscription toward paying a debt on St. Peter's Episcopal Church at Freehold, where he was a member and where his children were baptized. He d. 2 Feb., 1765 (Tombstone), but according to Bible "20 Feb."; the tombstone date is correct as his will was proved 11 Feb., 1765. His widow d. 19 April, 1790; both int. Old Topanemus, where their enduring red stones still stand. Just back of their graves and facing the other way are two smaller stones: one of James Throckmorton, their son, and the other of Joseph Throckmorton, brother of Job. Both bearing at the top the quaint design of a face with wings at either side. Trees surround these ancient tombs on every side, their extended branches shadowing the graves far around and roots amongst the dead. Wild flowers, thorny brambles, embracing bushes and ivy are everywhere disorderly, but these stones are singularly free from moss and lichen and none are defaced.

Inventory taken 24 April, 1790, of "Mary Throckmorton, widow, late of Freehold, Co. of Monmouth: £84-02-11."

Thomas Morford Sr. and his brother, John Morford, came from England and settled at Colts Neck, N. J. Earlier or later they were seated at the bridge crossing, between Red Bank and Middletown. Here in the orchard on the present Cooper farm, is a plowed over graveyard and, adjacent, a stone wall, against which are three tombstones, lifted from their original position, one leaning and two lying on the ground representing all that remains of the original Morford burying ground. The tombstone of Thomas Morford Jr., and his son Jarret Morford and an indecipherable one alone remain. Thomas Morford Sr.'s lands are referred to in Thomas Herbert's Proprietary deed, 1670; his cattle mark recorded in Middle Town Book, 4 Sept., 1672; he is granted 120 acres in 1676; in 1677 he receives 113 acres; he of Shoal Harbor, Monmouth Co., 1677; Grand Juror in 1695, March 27. Thomas Morford Sr. made his will 5 Dec., 1695; proved 24 March, 1696, between which dates he died. From this will we learn he had a wife Susannah (Susannah Leonard probably), whom he appoints his sole executrix, and the following ch.: Thomas, not 21 years of age; John, do; Catherine, not 18 years of age; Sarah, not 18 years of age; Johanna, do. Old Topanemus

About 1692 a Quaker Meeting House was built at Topanemus. The first title of the Parish was "St. Peter's at Topanemus"; charter granted by King George II, June 4, 1736. In 1738 the church was taken down, removed to Freehold, and erected on the site it now occupies.

Topanemus graveyard is about one mile west of Marlboro, N. J., and distant some little way from the road, on the farm of Rulif Voorhees (1909). It is on a high wooded knoll overlooking the surrounding country on every side. The Quaker Meeting House (which later became Episcopalian) stood on the northeast end. The burying ground is now a lonely, almost inaccessible, but very beautiful place. Some of the stones are moss covered, fallen and broken, and some unhappily lost, but the most of them are wonderfully preserved and very unique. The descendants of the Dutch, who now own all the lands around here, have carefully guarded and preserved from ruin this ancient burying place of the Quakers and Episcopalians. There is a wire fence about part of it, and the thicket is so dense about the rest that it is not likely soon to be molested. Of the origin of the name there is no certainty but from its peculiar sound it is presumably Indian. The oldest stone in Monmouth Co. is found here:—"Elizabeth Clark wife of William Clark, d. Dec. 25, 1697." The latest date is 1809, but the majority are from 1728 to 1740. In this graveyard are interred: Job and Joseph Throckmorton, sons of Joseph and Alice; Mary, wife of Job Throckmorton and their son James; Rebecca Throckmorton wife of Jonathan Holmes, he and some of their children; Sarah Throckmorton, wife of Wm. Nichols, and her husband; Rebecca Holmes, wife of Gilbert Tice (and dau. of Jonathan and Rebecca Throckmorton Holmes); Daniel Grandin, son of Daniel and Mary Throckmorton Grandin.

89. III. JEMIMA, b. 31 Jan., 1748; bp. 31 March, 1748, aged 2 mos, "Publicly"; m. Joseph Stillwell, 14 June, 1770; b. 12 March, 1747, son of Jeremiah Stillwell, "sheriff of Monmouth Co., under the King." Joseph Stillwell carried on an extensive farm about two miles west of Adelphia, N. J., and was quite well to do. He and his family were members of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Freehold. He furnished the lumber to build this church and a pew therein was always reserved for the Stillwell family. She d. 25 March, 1813; he d. 31 March, 1813; int. St. Peter's Churchyard. Later all the tombstones were removed from this churchyard and placed in Maplewood Cemetery, where their white marble stones and five brown sandstones of their children may yet be seen. On Jemima's stone is graved this verse:

"O may she in the Judge behold,
Her Saviour and her Friend,
And far beyond the reach of Death
With all His Saints ascend."

On his stone these lines:

"O ye! whose cheek the tear of pity stains
Draw near with pious reverence and attend,
Here lies the Husband's dear remains,
The tender Father and the generous friend."

Ch.: (1) Job, b. 24 May, 1772; d. 2 June, 1773; int. Freehold. (2) Rebecca b. 20 April, 1774; d. 31 Oct., 1791; int. Freehold; her stone bears the winged head at the top and the well-known epitaph so often quoted in days gone by:

"Both old and young as well as me
Must in due time all buried be.
Under this body of col'd clay
Just in my prime I am call'd away;
Although I am gone before its noon
Christ Jesus thought it none too soon."

90. IV. MARY, b. 25 May, 1751; bp. 14 June, 1751; m. before 1782, Richard Morris, son of William and Elizabeth (Brower).* They removed to Greene Co., Pa., probably about 1809, and settled east of Waynesburg, where Morrisville now stands. He was a generous hearted man and much loved by his wife's nephews, several of whom also migrated to Greene Co. To young Morford Throckmorton, who had just mastered the blacksmith trade, and came about 1812/3 from N. J. horseback to visit his elder brother and other relatives, he loaned, of his own free will, $50 to start a shop near the Morris home, and later borrowed money himself rather than ask the nephew for what he had loaned him, knowing it would be paid back as soon as possible.

"In memory of Mary Morris, wife of Richard Morris, who departed this life Jan. 9, A.D. 1817.

Farewell my friends I loved so dear,
I am not dead but sleeping here,
The debt is paid, but grace is free,
Prepare for death and follow me."

"In memory of Richard Morris, who departed this life March 16, A.D. 1825. Aged 81 yrs., 1 mo., 16 ds.

When I lie bury'd deep in dust,
My flesh shall be God..('s care)
These wither'd limbs with hi..(m I trust)
To raise them strong and f...(fair)."

Words obliterated. Ch.: (1) John, b. N. J., 1783; d. Morrisville, Greene Co., Pa., 27 Jan., 1872, aged 89 yrs.; m. Margaret Eagon, who d. 17 Oct., 1833, aged 34 yrs.; m. 2d, Jemima ——, who d. 3 May, 1875, aged 67 yrs. All int. Morrisville. A letter written to John Morris by his mother's brother, Job Throckmorton, was in possession of his grandson, Prof. James R. Reinhart, LL.D., Waynesburg, Pa., 1907, and thus it reads:

"Nov. 9th, 1834.

Dear Cousin (i.e. Nephew): I take this Opportunity to let you know that through the mercy of the Lord I am still living but feel myself shortly bound to the Invisible world from whence no traveler returns. I have passed the age alloted to man which is three Score years and ten, and now of many aches and pains I am looking out dayly to be called from time, but I sincerely

* Elizabeth Brower was a direct descendant of the celebrated Anneke Jans and her 2d husband, Evarhardus Bogardus; their son, William Bogardus, m. Wintje Sybrant; their dau. Annetje Bogardus, m. Jacobus Brower; their son Adam Brower, m. Deborah Allen; their dau. Elizabeth Brower, m. William Morris, etc.

thank my heavenly Father for his mercy to me in sparing me so long and giving me time to make my peace, calling, and Election sure. I hope my dear cousin, you are trying to Serve the Lord and save your Soul. O, it is the matter of the greatest consequence, you are a great deal younger than myself, if you haven't begun to prepare then set about it Immediately, for if we die in our Sins where Our God and his Christ is we never can come. Nothing Unholy or unclean can enter the kingdom of heaven. Dear Cousin, don't barter away your Soul for the follies of this vain world. Please write to me. I should be pleased to receive a letter from you, you must think I regard you as all the uncle you have. I sincerely respect you for my Sister's sake. Farewell, and if I never See you or hear from you Strive to meet me in Heaven, this is the Prayer of your affectionate uncle, Job Throckmorton."

(2) Joseph, d. aged about 15 years, according to tradition on his way to Greene Co., Pa., with his parents. Presumably it is his tombstone near his parents marked "In memory of J....Morris.." the rest obliterated.

91. V. ANN, b. 10 Nov., 1753; bp. 14 April, 1754, public; m. Capt. (later Major-Gen.) James Green, before 1774. He lived at Freehold, and his home seems to have been the principal place, for a time, for meetings to transact public business. A number of trials were held there, notably Courts of Admiralty to try claims for prizes captured by the Americans. He may have been a seafaring man previous to the Revolutionary War. At a Court of Admiralty he at one time had claim on the Betty, a captured prize (Salter: Hist. Monmouth & Ocean Cos.) He performed valient service in the patriot army during the Rev. War: served as 2d lieu. in Col. David Forman's Regt., N. J. Militia. His name appears on a return dated Oct. 5, 1776, which shows him "fit for duty in Camp." It is also shown by the records that he served as a Captain of the 1st Regt., Monmouth Co., N. J. Militia, commanded by Col. Asher Holmes. His name appears on a receipt roll dated Nov. 22, 1778, which shows that he received £111-16*s*-8*d*., pay due himself and company from March 22 to April 22, 1778; also a receipt roll dated Dec. 26, 1779, which shows that he received £308-18*s*-4*d*., in full for pay, bounty and subsistance due himself and the company under his command." (War Dept., Washington, D. C.; Adj. Gen., Trenton, N. J.) The records of the State of N. J. show that "James Green was in commission as Captain, Company of Light Horse, Monmouth Co., N. J. Militia, 1778; captured by refugees near Shrewsbury, N. J., April 30, 1780, and carried off to New York, during the Rev. War. The records further show that he was in commission as Lieutenant Colonel of the Monmouth Co. Militia, June 5, 1793, and Brigadier General Oct. 30, 1799." The Minutes of the Joint Meeting, copy of which is in possession of State Librarian, Trenton, N. J., show that "Brigadier General James Green was elected Major-General, Third Division of Militia of N. J., in Joint Meeting, Nov. 29, 1804." His tombstone at Christ Church, Shrewsbury, is thus inscribed: "General James Green, died 14 Sep., 1811, aged 61 yrs. 4 mos. 23 ds.

'Behold dear friends when in this path you tread,
My dear and only joy lies numbered with the dead.
His aches and pains, they ne'er shall grieve him more,
For now he rests on Zion's peaceful shore.'

"Ann Green, his wife, died 21 Sep., 1831, aged 77-10-11."

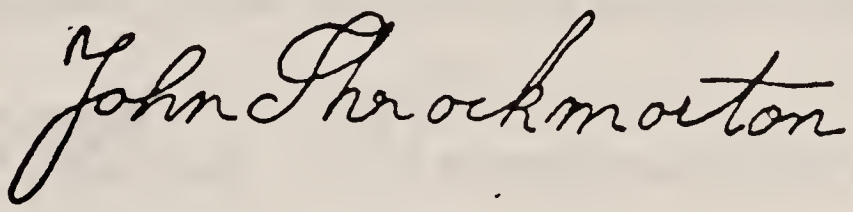
The record of only two children found, there may have been others. Ch.: (1) William, d. 7 Sept., 1812, aged 37 yrs.; int. Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury. (2) John, m. Mary Morris; removed to Greene Co., Pa., probably during the first decade of 1800. In the old cemetery at Morrisville are found many monuments marking the last resting places of the Green and Morris families; one, the tallest and finest of all, stands near the iron fence by the street. It is of sandstone, more elaborately carved than the surrounding ones, but the inscription is almost entirely obliterated, all that can be deciphered is this: "John Green, who departed this life June .., 18..; aged .. yrs., 6(?) mo....da." and below the inevitable poetry, so defaced by time and weather that only a word here and there can be read, but it is the same as that on the stone of Mary Morris above. His wife's stone is hard by: "In memory of Mary Green, wife of John Green, who departed this life, 24 May, 1829, aged 53 yrs."

92. VI. SUSANNA, b. 28 May, 1756; bp. 18 July, 1756, Freehold, public; d. unm., 20 April, 1792; int. Shrewsbury, N. J.

93. VII. HANNAH, b. 1 Nov., 1758; bp. 25 Dec., 1758; m. William West before 1784. Nothing further known.

94. VIII. JOB, b. 27 May, 1761; bp. 23 (?) Aug., 1761, public.

45. JOHN THROCKMORTON (Job 20, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., about 1724; called "eldest son"; admr. of his father's estate, 1748; m. Lydia West, dau. of Joseph of Shrewsbury, N. J., by license dated 3 Oct., 1752; his brother, William Throckmorton, yeoman, voucher; both of Freehold, where he was a carpenter. He removed to Morris Co., N. J., where in 1763, he was a witness of his brother Thomas Throckmorton's will. His signature from that document:



Sussex County was taken from the upper part of Morris Co., N. J., 8 June, 1753, and he is probably the "John Throckmorton who hailed from Sussex Co., N. J., 1765," known to have been the father of Joseph (b. 1765—see below), and of whom tradition, that unreliable jade, avers "was in the French and Indian War under Gen. Wolfe in 1759, and married a Miss Miller(?), whose people were in sympathy with the British during the Revolutionary War, some of them fighting on that side. Several of John's brothers went to Virginia to keep the British from getting their money. John Throckmorton died on his way home from Philadelphia, just before or at the beginning of the Revolution." This hazy tradition is from a somewhat uncertain source and cannot be accepted as wholly trustworthy. He may have been in some of the Colonial Wars, but if he m. "a Miss Miller" it must have been a second marriage, as his license to m. Lydia West is recorded at Trenton. Some of his brothers and sisters did migrate to Virginia and John probably died at the time stated, as his son Joseph enlisted as a volunteer from Shrewsbury, 1780, at the age of fifteen,—probably an orphan at that time and living with relatives at Shrewsbury. It is further stated that "John Throckmorton had only one son, but there were some daughters whose names are forgotten."

95. I. JOSEPH, b. Sussex Co., N. J., 14 June, 1765 (Pension Application).

46. WILLIAM THROCKMORTON (Job 20, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 27 June, 1730;* voucher for marriage license of his brother John, 1752, both of Freehold. In 1754 he located land in Morris Co., where Succasunna and McCainville stand, and later sold the same to Cornelius Slaight—Roxbury tp.—same county (Hist. Morris Co., p. 365). He probably moved to Morris Co. soon afterwards, and was a merchant at Roxbury; granted license to m. Sarah Gillet (Gillette, Gilletine*?) 15 Dec., 1759, both of Morris Co., N. J. The wedding took place 26 Dec.; she b. 2 April, 1742. In 1760 the admr. of estate of John Lafollet of Newtown, Sussex Co., N. J., mentions "John Throckmorton as one of the largest creditors, resident of Roxbury, Morris Co., Merchant." (Lib. G, p. 276, N. J. Arch.). Throckmorton evidently gave credit to many others, which brought him later into serious monetary difficulties. In 1772, adverse fortune befell many men in the county and Throckmorton petitioned the judges of the inferior court of common pleas for permission to make an assignment of his estate for the benefit of debtors (N. J. Arch., Vol. XXVII, p. 265). Two years later, 4 July, 1774, the following advertisement appeared in the "New York Gazette and Weekly Mercury":

* Dates of births and marriage of William and wife, Sarah, and the name 'Gilletine' gleaned from an old letter in possession of a descendant (through dau. Jane),—Mrs. Sarah Gearhart, Princeton, Mo., 1916.

"To Be Sold. Three improved farms (being part of the estate of the Rev'd William Mills late deceased), one situated at a place called Little Pond, in the township of Roxbury, County of Morris, and province of New-Jersey; this farm has on it two tenements; it contains 600 acres, and is in the tenure of William Throckmorton and Martin Gates" (N. J. Arch., Vol. XXIX, p. 412).

Later William Throckmorton probably migrated to Virginia with some of his brothers, as no further record is found concerning him in N. J., and his children are discovered in Hampshire Co., Va., about a decade later. He d. presumably soon after 1780, as his name is not in the Va. Census, 1782-90, and his son Thomas was "surety on bond" for his daughter Mary at the granting of her marriage license, 1797. His signature is from the mar. lic. of his brother John, 1752, when he was "voucher":

49. DANIEL THROCKMORTON (Job 20, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., about 1734/36. By will of aunt, Sarah T. Nichols, he gets, 1755, money and a bay mare. Named in will of his brother Thomas Throckmorton, 1763, as owning half interest in "moveable estate," at Roxbury, Morris Co., N. J. No other mention discoverable of him. Probably married and went to Hampshire Co., Va., with his brothers: William and Lewis, and there died soon afterwards as his name is not found in "Heads of Families, Va., 1782 & 1784" (Census). He was presumably the father of the children given below, who were born in Hampshire Co., Va., and early left orphans.

* The parents of Daniel and Rachel are conjectural. They may have been children of Lewis Throckmorton, brother of Daniel Sr. But whatever their father's name, Job and Frances (Stout) Throckmorton were surely their grandparents. The name "Daniel" has not been found in the Virginia branch of the family in the early generations. And in the New Jersey line it first appears in the family of Job and Frances (Stout) Throckmorton and was apparently confined to this one branch of Throckmortons for nearly a century. This, in connection with the fact that several of the sons of Job and Frances migrated to Virginia, leads to the assumption, for such it is, that their son Daniel, Sr., also "went into Va." and was the father of the above children.

† Letter, 1912, from great-granddau., Miss Cornelia M. Woolley, Matawan, N. J., R. D. 2. She also furnished the record of children of Job Throckmorton, from the Bible of his dau., Hannah Maps.

114. VII. HANNAH, b. 13 April, 1787; m. Michael Maps, 11 Feb., 1806; d. 30 March, 1864; he b. near Long Branch, N. J., 31 March, 1784, son of Frederick and Sibyl (Rex). Learned the carpenter trade; started a general store at Long Branch, which he soon relinquished to engage in the fish business with New Brunswick, Bound Brook, Somerville, Schooleys Mountain, N. J., Easton, Pa., and other points, and continued in this business thirty years. Then purchased a large farm near the sea, at Long Branch, where he lived many years; later removed to the city, where he d. 14 Nov., 1860. He was a Whig and an active Christian gentleman, and procured the ground for and materially assisted in the erection of the first M. E. church, Long Branch, 1809. His grandfather, Michael Maps (Mapes) was a native of Germany, and came to America and settled at Long Branch, N. J. His father, Frederick Maps, served for seven years in the Revolutionary War. Ch.: (1) Mary, b. 27 Nov., 1806; m. John Woolley. (2) Sibyl, d. 2 Sept., 1809, aged 15 mos.; int. Long Branch, M. E. churchyard. (3) William Russell, b. 14 Sept., 1809; followed surveying at Long Branch for a number of years. In 1829 started a general store which he continued for many years; also dealt in lumber and coal. His life is the history of Long Branch enterprise and development. He was instrumental in organizing the first banking-house, 1871, under the name of Long Branch Banking Co., of which he was the first and only president for twenty-five years; pres. of Long Branch Building and Loan Association; Master in Chancery and notary public. A long record of threescore years and more of service as a member of the M. E. church stand to his credit, during which he filled the office of corresponding and recording sec. of the church for 40 years. He was actively interested in educational affairs of his town and county, and did more to develop and build up the public-school system of Long Branch and Shrewsbury tp. than any other man, serving as Supt. at one time. He m. Mary Ann Tucker, dau. of Samuel and Sarah (Throckmorton), 15 Nov., 1832; b. 21 Dec., 1807; d. 17 Sept., 1838; left three children. 52. LEWIS THROCKMORTON (Job 20, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., about 1745/6; bp. Christ Church, Shrewsbury, 9 Feb., 1746; mentioned in wills of Sarah Nichols and Thomas Throckmorton. Went to Virginia about the time of the Revolutionary War. Name of wife uncertain, but there is a family tradition that "he m. a French lady named Dumas (Demoss)." In 1782 he was listed in the Census as a resident of Hampshire Co., Va., having 10 whites and no blacks in his household; again in 1784, listed in same county with 10 whites, one dwelling and one other building (not a barn or shed). The names of some of his children are in doubt. As we have but two sources of knowledge in establishing the fact of one's ancestry: record and tradition, and the first is wholly lacking in this case, and the second hesitated over by the two aged descendants* (both b. 1834) who submitted the lists in 1915, it is thought best to give both.

Her grandson, William Spriggs, sitting by her side glancing over a newspaper, thought she had become drowsy and fallen asleep. She was a very fleshy woman. Her husband d. before 12 Sept., 1850, as the Census of that date, states that she was living with her son Daniel in Franklin Tp. Her age given as "72 yrs." and place of birth "Ohio,"—a mistake made by the enumerator who placed her name at the end of a long list of grandchildren, all of whom were b. in "Ohio." She was b. in N. J. or Va. Some of her children were born in Ky.; order of births unknown. (1) Daniel, b. Pa., 1805; m. Mariah Fipps, who was two years his junior. 70. LIEU. JOHN THROCKMORTON (Joseph 26, John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Shrewsbury, N. J., 4 March, 1752; bp. Freehold, 14 June, 1752;

m. Margaret White about 1776, dau. of Hartshorne* and Phebe (Forman); d. after 1812. He was settled as a storekeeper at Freehold, N. J., before the Revolution. The Throckmorton family, like many others in N. J., had representatives on both sides of the contest: on the American side in this one family were John's brothers, James and Samuel, while John was an out and out Tory and adhered to the Crown. The evidence† shows that John Throckmorton seemed disposed at first to support the measures of Congress, but as soon as he discovered that a separation between the Colonies and Great Britain was aimed at, he left the Americans (Ontario Archives, p. 152). He bore arms in the militia of Monmouth Co., called a "Tory Company" and afterwards recruited men, which entitled him to a commission in the N. J. Volunteers. Sometime later he was transferred as Lieu. to Col. Robert Roger's King's Rangers, and served until the Peace. He was taken prisoner on Staten Island in 1777 and was confined in Trenton jail. In 1779 his estate in N. J. was confiscated. In 1786 he was settled on half-pay in Prince Edward Island, where were other Loyalist refugees from N. J. and elsewhere. He was awarded £395 from his claim of £568, 12*s.*‡ The following shows the customs of war in "The Good Old Colony Days":

"Tories from Trenton, ordered into custody, Jan. 21, 1777. Committed to Goal, Lieu. John Throgmorton of Col. Morris's Reg't of Monmouth Vols." (Pa. Archives, Vol. 1. 2d Ser. p. 296). Also: "Whereas inquisitions have been found and final judgment entered thereon in favour of the State of New Jersey, against the persons herein mentioned.—NOTICE is hereby given that the real and personal estates belonging to John Throckmorton (and many others), of the tp. of Freehold, will be sold at Freehold court-house, beginning on Wednesday the 17th day of March next and continue from day to day until all are sold. Feb. 17, 1778" (N. J. in the Rev., Newspaper Extracts, Vol. III).

"Public notice is hereby given to all persons having any claims, interest or demand in or upon the estates of the following fugitives and offenders (against whom inquisitions have been found and final judgment entered in favour of the State) viz.: John Throckmorton (& 67 others), of Freehold, to exhibit their respective accounts fairly stated in writing to the Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in the Co. of Monmouth, who will give their attendance at the Court house in Freehold on the 20th day of May, who are empowered and directed by a late law of the State of N. J., to receive and adjust the same within twelve months from the date hereof: And also all persons who have in their power and custody any goods or chattles, bonds, bills, deeds of conveyances, or any writings or effects whatsoever, or are in anywise indebted to the said offenders, and neglect to make discovery thereof immediately to the subscribers, or any or either of them, may depend upon being dealt with according to law." Dr. Allen attended the Univ. of Pa., received his license 11 April, 1810, and commenced the practice of his profession at Shrewsbury, where he acquired, in the year of his marriage, the quaint, old-fashioned shingled house on the corner of Sycamore Ave., and Broad St., which remained the residence of the family during his life and is still occupied by his granddaughter. The house was built before the Revolution and was at one time used as an Inn, the great living room being the bar-room. This house, like Christ Church which is diagonally across the street, figures in history. One story told is that an English spy was killed in the kitchen and the blood stains remained on the floor for many, many years. The immense kitchen has great uncovered rafters, Dutch doors, numerous windows, and a big fireplace with a Dutch oven (now fitted in with a range). As the residence has been in possession of the Allen family for over a century, many valuable heirlooms have been preserved with remarkable care. His widow became the wife of Joseph Phillips of Freehold, 10 March, 1810,—a man many years her junior, per tombstones at Shrewsbury: "Joseph Phillips, Esq., Counsellor at Law, died 1 Aug., 1820, aged 34 yrs, 9 mos." "Ursula, Consort of Joseph Phillips, Esq., departed this life 15 Sept., 1824, in 62nd year of her age."

74. WILLIAM THROCKMORTON (Joseph 26, John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Shrewsbury, N. J., 31 Jan., 1761; bp. 5 April, 1761, public. He was educated at the University of Virginia and was a scholarly gentleman. On one occasion during the meeting of the N. Y. Legislature he went to Albany, where he met Miss Catherine Reading, granddaughter of Gov. John Reading, whom he later married. She b. in the beautiful Mohawk Valley, N. Y.; d. at her home in New York City, 11 April, 1816; int. Trinity Church Vault; later the nave of the church was extended, and the vault (and those entombed therein) is now under the altar. She was witness of a marriage at Shrewsbury, 12 May, 1791. He d. in Sept., 1830, at the home of his cousin, Sarah T. Allen, Shrewsbury, where he had probably gone on a visit. The yellow fever was raging in New York at the time, and he was buried in Christ Churchyard, later to be removed to Old Trinity, but it was never done. Res. Spotswood, N. J.; after 1811, New York City.

(Corlies), of Red Valley, N. J.; b. 1752 (sic); d. 13 March, 1832. She d. 14 Sept., 1871, aged 78 yrs.; int. Freehold, N. J. He was a Judge there; built the Squancum Mills and House; Episcopalians. Res. Freehold. Ch.: (1) Catherine, b. about 1829/30; taught school and music in Freehold; d. unm., in young womanhood, probably late in 1853, as she is mentioned in a letter, Oct. 14, of that year as being "ill." "She was very delicate," writes one correspondent, "and very imprudent, and early contracted consumption, of which she died very suddenly at last."

154. II. CATHERINE, b. 20 May, 1795; m. William Van Hook, a well known lawyer of New York City, about 1836; b. New York City, 1782, the son of a Dutch Reformed clergyman of the old Holland Dutch stock. Gen. George Washington was a friend of the family and a frequent visitor at the home, and on one occasion took the little William on his knee and gave him a silver dollar, which is still in possession of the kindred. He was twice m.,—his first wife and child dying of scarlet fever. It was rather late in life that he m. Catherine Throckmorton, sometime between Aug. 1835 and June 31, 1836. He was a man of high integrity and honor, holding funds in trust for widows and orphans, and settling up many estates. He was president of Phoenix Bank and held many offices. A staunch churchman and vestryman in Old Trinity for a number of years. Gulian Hook says of him in his journal: "My wife's uncle, William Van Hook, was rather a remarkable man, a most delightful companion, a great reader and a fine conversationalist. He had been acquainted personally with Hamilton and Burr, a friend of Commodore Perry and Decatur, Capt. Lawrence of 'Don't give up the ship' fame, and many others of historical prominence were his personal friends." William Van Hook amassed quite a fortune during his successful career and resided all the later years of his life at 5 Fifth Ave., New York. He d. 14 March, 1864, at the country home of his niece, Mrs. Gulian Hook, Stamford, Conn., aged 82 yrs. Funeral held in Old Trinity and burial in Greenwood Cem., later removed to Vale Cem., Schenectady, N. Y. Catherine d. 31 March, 1852, at her home in New York City; int. Christ Churchyard, Shrewsbury, N. J. "She was a very lovely woman of mild disposition and a great deal of character. They had no children. When her sister Jane T. Roach d. 1832, she gave Catherine, then unmarried, her baby daughter,—*Josephine Throckmorton Roach. This child was brought up by them, and when they found they were going to have no children they adopted her." (See under 158).

155. III. ELIZA, b. 1797; "member of Brick Presbyterian Church, New York City in Dec., 1824; admitted by confession of faith" (Church Records). She was always called "Pussy"; never married, made her home with her sister, Catherine Van Hook, and "took a hand at bringing up" her small niece, Josephine T. Roach (later Mrs. Gulian Hook), who remembers her as "a rather imperious person and not at all like her beloved sister Catherine." Miss Eliza made one or more visits to England and stayed with the Starr family. While there she was entertained by Sir Charles Throckmorton at Coughton Court and brought back an India china plate that he gave her (one of a very old set that had been in the family over 100 years) and a silver fork bearing the Throckmorton crest.† She long corresponded with the English family and they called each other "cousin." Among the letters still extant is one from Sir Charles answering some question Eliza had evidently asked him concerning his nephew Robert Throckmorton. Eliza and her sister, Fannie Starr, had a large English acquaintance and "many English people who came over to New York brought letters of introduction to their sister, Catherine Van Hook, who of course had to entertain them. Sometimes it was very pleasant and sometimes it was a bore." In possession of the Van Hook descendants is still an odd jet ring that Lady Georgiana Cathcart gave to Eliza. After a long and trying illness at the Van Hook home, Miss Eliza d. 29 Oct., 1855; int. Shrewsbury, N. J.

Named for her mother's favorite brother, Joseph Throckmorton. Owing to the early death of her mother and the remarriage of her father, she was adopted by her uncle, William Van Hook, and at his death became his sole heir. Her accomplishments in language and music made her young life a brilliant one in New York and Newport society. It was her custom to accompany her uncle on many of his legal business trips to the principal cities of the U. S. and Canada and in this way she had unusual opportunities for seeing and meeting many of the prominent persons of ante bellum days. Especially was this true in Washington where, by reason of having relatives in the Navy, she was able to take some part in the social life of both official and diplomatic circles. She m. 7 Oct., 1856, Gulian Hook, at 5 Fifth Ave., New York. The wedding was a large and fashionable one with 470 guests. Gulian Hook, b. Fishkill on the Hudson, N. Fredericktown, Md., 11 Dec., 1787, dau. of Baltzar and Mary Catherine (Barach). He was a carpenter and Episcopalian. Enlisted in the War of 1812 and "while acting as a Volunteer in an expedition against the British forces in Michigan Territory, was killed by the Indians at Gen. Winchester's defeat on Raisin River, 22 Jan., 1813" (Bible).

"The Americans capitulated under a pledge of protection given by Gen. Proctor. As soon as the surrender was made the British general set off at a rapid rate to Malden. The American wounded were left to the mercy of the savages, who at once began their work with tomahawk, scalping-knife and torch. The two houses into which the most of the wounded had been crowded were fired, while the painted barbarians stood around and hurled back into the flames whoever attempted to escape. The rest of the prisoners were dragged away in the depth of winter through untold sufferings to Detroit, where they were ransomed at an enormous price. Many of the men were from Kentucky and Ohio and these states were clothed in mourning over the inhuman deed which fixed on the name of Proctor the indelible stain of infamy." (U. S. Hist.)

McKinley to retain the Philippine Is. right after the battle of Manilla. This petition was signed by many leading N. Y. merchants at the time when it was not popular. He also engaged in getting up a petition signed by officials of Southern Cotton Mills, to the late John Hay on the matter of an "open door with China," which afterwards developed the most remarkable state papers which have emanated from Wash-

"Mrs. Throckmorton was brought up a Quaker and always wore the plain dress. She was a woman of strong principle and a strict disciplinarian. The story is still told that one day she came upon two of her small daughters making faces at her mother, who was old and blind and for whom they had to pick up dropped stitches until they were tired. Mrs. Throckmorton's medicine was so immediate and effective that the girls testified in later years that they never put out their tongues again! William Throckmorton was a Methodist and a farmer. He lived at Long Branch and was the first man at that place to omit toddy from the harvesters' wages—a thing unknown in those days. He always provided cloth from New York for best clothes for his family (linsey-woolsey was everyday material), and on certain days in the summertime when the stage coach came from Philadelphia with the city folk, the mother would let the children dress up in their best and watch for the "grandees," as they called them. In their home was a room with a fireplace set apart for the itinerant Methodist preachers, where they might study in quiet. And whereby the Throckmortons acquired three excellent husbands for as many daughters!

"Mr. Throckmorton began life as a poor man,—wheelwright by trade. He gradually added to his possessions until he owned at time of his death, land one field deep for a mile on both sides of a road leading south from his home, and more elsewhere. He had fishermen, boats and nets. For years he went Mondays with fish across the country to Easton, Pa., returning on Thursdays. An asthmatic cough roused him at 4 a.m. the year round, and the family as well. This instilled so wonderfully the habit that some members of the family could never outgrow it! The Throckmortons were most wonderfully loyal to their own, and the family feeling keener than many clans."

Mr. Throckmorton is mentioned in will of his cousin Richard Throckmorton, 1841; his residence then being Deal, N. J. He d. 14 June, 1861. Will dated 1 May, 1860; filed 27 June, 1861; mentions daus.: Mary Ann, Rachel, Jane, Letitia and Charity,—divides $4000 equally among them. To sons: Sidney and William he gives land. Exrs: his two sons and son-in-law, Samuel Parker. Rev. Thomas O'Hanlon, D.D., says of him:

"William Throckmorton maintained a prophet's home; three daughters married Methodist preachers:—that eloquent and eccentric Billy Barns took one; Samuel Jaquett another; and William Franklin a third. A son Samuel entered the ministry. At this home Bishop Asbury and many others whose names are illustrious in the pages of early Methodism found sympathy and refreshment. He passed to his reward in good old age. Int. old First M. E. Churchyard, Long Branch."

194. IV. RACHEL, b. 20 Oct., 1811; united with the M. E. church at the age of fourteen; m. at the age of fifteen, Rev. William Barns, 16 Aug., 1827, of Philadelphia Conf. In the bounds of this Conference she spent her itinerant life. Her dau. Mary wrote thus in 1913: "Mother's marriage was always the romance of the family, being the first of the young cousin company to be married. They had a large number of relatives and friends in the farm home. Mother was dressed in ashes of rose crape and wore a small head piece of lace, as was the style then for brides; her shoes were of white kid. Her cousin, Maria Parker, was bridesmaid and her brother, Samuel, groomsman. They left the next day for her new home in Phila. Father's parents were William and Ann Barns, of Cookstown, Tyrone Co., Ireland. He was born Easter Tuesday, 1794. Came to America with his uncle, Thomas Barns, and landed in Baltimore, 6 July, 1811, after a stormy voyage. He was an ornamental sign painter, and engaged in that work in Baltimore. He was converted Aug. 1812, and licensed to preach 1816 and admitted to the Baltimore Conf. the following year. After eight years the Conf. was divided and he fell to the Pittsburgh Conf., and traveled the circuit for several years in Ohio. His travels embraced the states of Ohio, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland. In 1852 he was sent as a delegate to General Conference in Boston. All of his appointments were attended with revivals, some of them remarkable. One Sabbath morning at Pottsville, Pa. (1842), 120 were admitted on probation and in the course of three weeks, 300 were received. He was associated in the earlier time of his travels with Methodism as it strove amid labors and opposition to plant itself where it now flourishes in vigor. Frequently in the Allegheny Mts. he would view on horseback the tracks of bears while on his way to the place of preaching; cross mountain paths through storms and snow; pick ice from his clothing; sleep in houses where, from his bed, he could view the stars through the chinks of the walls; often hunt the mountains for nuts and berries for food. On one occasion not discerning the path, he threw the reins on the horse's back, and the faithful animal brought him up in front of the humble meeting place: In every instance of his long ministry (over 49 years) he preached extemporaneously."

Rev. Barns d. 25 Nov., 1865, in Philadelphia, where he had gone on important business; int. Mt. Moriah Cem. Extract from Phila. Preachers Meeting Res.: "We bear united and most emphatic testimony to the gentleness of our brother's spirit, and the warmth of his affectionate nature, the guilelessness of his conversation, the unaffected simplicity of his manners, the strength and brilliancy of his intellect, the power of his pulpit ministrations and the consistent, even, and beautiful character of his religious life. With the profound thought of the philosopher and the lively imagination of a poet, with the courage of a lion and the gentleness of a lamb, he stood forth in the originality of his genius, a representative man of the Conference and the Church. As a patriot, a Protestant, a Methodist and a Christian he has fairly earned the honorable position of champion." Rachel T. Barns d. 8 Jan., 1899, at her residence, Tioga, Pa. Int. Mt. Though never robust, she never wearied of ministering to the comfort and pleasure of others. Very early in her married life she adopted an orphan girl, aged about five years, who missed nothing of a mother's tender love and care in the treatment of Mrs. Jaquett. About 1879 another member was added to the family circle, the orphan dau. of a niece of Rev. Jaquett, Mary Villa Webber; and no more welcome duty was ever taken up than that of nurturing and training this little one by Mrs. Jaquett and her daughter. Later another occupant was added to the home, the door of which seemed never to weary of swinging on its hinges. A widowed sister of Rev. Jaquett, Mrs. McPherson, was the latest addition to the household. The strongest and most beautiful point of Mrs. Jaquett's character was charity. Nothing pained her so much as the idle, wanton gossip which touched upon the faults of fellow beings. "Aunt Charity," writes a relative, "was a bustling, energetic woman. She used to laugh about being kept out of a Methodist Love Feast on a cold day because she and her sister, Laetitia, had green baize veils on—a woeful exhibition of worldly spirit!" About 1828, a Miss Isabelle Rolins,* seamstress, came to her father's home to board and sew for the country 'round. When Charity was left alone she invited her to remain, and she settled down and lived there for 65 years, or until her death at the age of 90. 94. JOB THROCKMORTON (Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 27 May, 1761; at the age of three he was bereft by death of his father. On his sixteenth birthday he enlisted in the Revolutionary War, his record from the Adj. Gen. of the State of N. J.:

"Job Throckmorton enlisted May 27, 1777, as a private, Captain Hendrick Smock's Company, First Reg., Monmouth Co., N. J. Militia, Col. Asher Holmes, and served every alternate month in 1777; six months in 1778; six months in 1779; six months in 1780, and six months in 1781,—during the Rev. War."

"Applied for a pension July 31, 1832, and was paid $80 per annum to March 4, 1839. Sum received $240."—Rev. Pension Roll, Monmouth Co., N. J.; Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C.

The Battle of Monmouth Court House (now Freehold), 28 June, 1778, was partially fought on his home farm. Upon no other field of battle during the war for independence were the valor and patriotism of the Americans more conspicuous. Monmouth County suffered more severely from intestine enemies and marauding parties of refugees from New York State than all the rest of N. J. combined. They were known as "The Associated Loyalists," and at one time gained the ascendancy and had possession of Freehold village for a week or ten days. The people of Monmouth Co., favorable to the popular cause, were compelled to draw up articles of agreement for the purpose of retaliation. Among the 436 signers were: Job Throckmorton, John and Joseph Morford, Capt. James Green, Cornelius Barkalow, etc. The original "Articles of Agreement" is in the Sec. of State's Office, Trenton, N. J.

Job Throckmorton was a Whig in politics and became the first Methodist in Monmouth County, 1780, under the ministry of Rev. Richard Garretson.† Methodists were few in number and much persecuted in New Jersey at that time. The Throckmorton home became a preaching place and home for the itinerant ministers, who traveled over large circuits either on horseback or in two-wheeled gigs, preaching in groves or in the homes of members. The chief meeting place was Blue Ball (Adelphia), and the Methodists of Freehold and all the country around went there to worship. Bishop Asbury was a guest at the Throckmorton home while passing through that country at intervals after 1782. In his "Journal," under date May 1st, 1806, he writes:

"I breakfasted with Throckmorton; his loss is his gain—he has lost his birthright as a citizen of the State but he has the blessing of God in his Soul."

205. VI. BARNES, b. Sunday, 10 Sept., 1797.

206. VII. MARY, b. 10 May, 1800. From birth to marriage her life was that of a farmer's daughter, spent amid rural environments. Her father's was a home for the M.E. preachers in the early days. Among the ones who found a kindly welcome there was Rev. Eliphalet Reed, who was traveling the Freehold circuit the Conference year 1822. One day in the hall at the foot of the stairway, as he was leaving, he asked Mary to marry him, saying he would wait her answer until his return the following fortnight, and for her to "think it over carefully." Her answer can be imagined, as the wedding took place 3 May, 1823. He b. 10 March, 1792, near Centerville, Queen Anne Co., Maryland; son of Thomas and Ann Reed. After marriage they resided wherever sent by the Conference, and dwelt in various places in New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland. But in 1861 removed to Mount Joy, Lancaster Co., Pa., where they both died and were buried. She d. 22 Oct., 1869; he d. 1 Jan., 1863. "As a preacher he was remarkable for clearness, brevity and power of illustration from scripture and the incidents of daily life. . . . So far as giving offense with the tongue is concerned, he may be said to have been a perfect man. Were it proper to speak of his sermons specifically, it might be shown that in their diction and general outline, they bore a striking resemblance to those of the founder of Methodism. He was in every sense a great man of God. Religious devotion was the element of his life. . . . Earnestness and fervor were the distinguishing characteristics of his ministrations." Robinson Family

James Robinson, b. Belfast, Ireland, 1699, of Scottish ancestry; m. Charity; migrated to Monmouth Co., N. J., where he was a communicant of Old Tennent Church as early as 1735; treasurer in 1750; deacon in 1754. He deeded the site of St. Peter's P. E. Church in Freehold, N. J., 28 March, 1738. He and his wife and son Henry all buried on the west side of Old Tennent Church, Tennent, N. J.

"Here lies the Body of James Robinson, Merchant,
Who departed this life
The twenty second day of January
In the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy three.
Aged 73 years, 4 months.
He was born in Belfast in the North of Ireland."

"Here lies Interr'd the Body of Charity,
Wife of James Robinson,
Who departed this life
April the twenty third Day in the year of our Lord God
One thousand seven hundred and sixty two.
Aged fifty seven years, two months and one day."

In the Old Tennent register are recorded the following baptisms of their children: 1. Mary, bp., 5th Feb., 1732. 2. Jane, bp. 25th Feb., 1734. 3. John, bp. 3 Oct., 1736. 4. Charity, bp. 4 March, 1739. 5. Henry. bp. 12 July, 1741; m. Anne, dau. of David and Anna Rhe; d. 3 April, 1768, aged 26 yrs., 9 mos., 27 ds. Ch.: Charity, bp. 14 April, 1765. 6. Joseph, bp. 25 March, 1744. Their son,—

Joseph Robinson, bp. 25 March, 1744; m. Eunice ——, who (with her sister Hannah) was bp. on profession of faith, 18 Oct., 1769. One "Joseph Robinson served in the Revolutionary War as private in Capt. James Lawrie's Co., 1st Reg., of West N. J. Troops, commanded by Col. William Maxwell, organization also designated 2nd N. J. Battalion. His name appears on a company roll covering the period from Oct. 28, 1775, to Jan. 15, 1776, which shows that he enlisted Nov. 2, 1775." The records also show that one "Joseph Robinson served in that war as a drummer in Capt. John Noble Cumming's Co. of foot, 2nd N. J. Reg., commanded by Col. Israel Shreve. His name appears on a company pay roll covering the period from enlistment to April 1, 1777, which shows that he enlisted Dec., 15; time of service 3 months, 15 days." (War Dept., Washington, D. C.) He probably died soon after, or during the Revolutionary War; his name is given in the list of burials at Old Tennent Church, but the date is defaced.* The baptism of two of his children found in church records: Mary, bp. 18 Oct., 1767; m. Job Throckmorton as given; James, b. 30 May, 1769; bp. 9 July, 1769; m. Elizabeth Conover, 20 Jan., 1791; d. 1 June, 1844. She b. 12 Aug., 1772; d. 21 Feb., 1856. Both int. Old Tennent churchyard.

journeys to worship, which he was wont to take with his wife on horseback, and moved with a desire to proselyte, he joined with his neighbors in organizing a church in that neighborhood, which was known as the South Ten Mile Baptist Church. The church was organized and the first service held in a barn. In 1841 a comfortable frame house was erected."

A grandson, Jas. R. Throckmorton, Jr., writes: "Grandfather Throckmorton tilled the soil and preached the gospel. At one time after preaching a lady's funeral sermon, she appeared to him in a dream and told him he 'ought to quit making a fool of himself and showing his ignorance.' The dream made such an impression on him that he preached no more."

After his wife's death he made his home with his son Daniel, and later with his son Isaac; d. 27 Feb., 1852; int., according to one informant, "on his farm with his wives." Another says, "If my memory serves me right he lies buried in South Ten Mile Baptist Churchyard. I do not know where his wives were laid to rest."

They took up their residence at Freehold in a house which afterwards became known as the "Throckmorton Mansion" and stood on the north side of Main Street a short distance above the courthouse. An American soldier wounded at the battle of Monmouth was carried into this house and the blood stains could yet be seen upon the floor in 1876. Mrs. Throckmorton d. 25 Nov., 1863. He d. 25 Dec., 1868. "In the shadow of the church, beside the partner of his life, and near the remains of his dear children who preceded him to the paradise of eternal life he sleeps in peace."

DEATH OF JUDGE THROCKMORTON, DEC. 25, 1868

"On Christmas morning, Judge Throckmorton, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of our County, died at his residence in Freehold, in the 85th year of his age. He was born in Middlesex County, Jan. 27, 1784, and removed to Freehold in 1803. He was married in 1808 to Major James Craig's daughter, Elizabeth. Immediately after marriage he moved into the house where he resided at the time of his death, and which he had occupied continuously for sixty years. He enjoyed fifty-five years of married life, his wife dying in 1863. He possessed fine social qualities, and loved his home and his family, gathering his children, and his grandchildren frequently around him. The annual Christmas gathering of the family at the old homestead was an event looked forward to by all its members with joyful anticipations. He passed on into Eternal Life early upon that day, with children and grand-children unto the fourth generation around him. He always adhered to the Democratic faith in politics, and for many years took a prominent part in public affairs. During the War of 1812,* he was 1st Lieu. of Capt. Wm. Ten Eyck's Company of Volunteer Militia; in Col. John Frelinghuysen's regiment, and was stationed at Sandy Hook for about six months. In 1820 he was appointed Justice of the Peace, which office he held by reappointment and re-election up to the time of his death, a period of forty-two years. He was also Judge of the Common Pleas for twenty-seven years; a member of the Legislature for three years; a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders, and President of the Board of Trustees of the County Poor for a number of years. In every position he discharged his duties with fidelity and honor.

Early in life he became a communicant with the Protestant Episcopal Church, and filled the position of Senior Warden of this Parish for over forty years. He leaves a large family of sons and daughters, who are now filling prominent positions in life, enjoying the confidence and respect of the communities where they reside, and reflecting honor upon the training of the aged patriarch who has just passed to the reward of a well spent life." New York City, 11 May, 1794, dau. of John and Margaret (Bassett) MacLaren, who came to that city from Scotland. The year of his marriage Mr. Throckmorton settled in Philadelphia, Pa., and engaged in mercantile pursuits until 1820, then retired from active business and removed to near Shrewsbury, N. J., where he devoted his time to agriculture until his death, 26 Sept., 1866. His widow d. 30 Aug., 1875; both int. Presbyterian Churchyard, Shrewsbury. Her inv. filed 7 March, 1876, son Joseph A. adm.: $5741.17. He is named in the will of Richard Throckmorton (77) 1842, at which time his place of residence is given as Red Bank, N. J. Ellis: Hist. of Monmouth Co. (1885) says in part:

* Daniel D. Tompkins was elected Governor of N. Y. four times and was Vice-President of the U. S. under President Monroe.

"Edmund Throckmorton's family were Presbyterians. He was among the leading representative citizens of his day in the county, and actively identified with its social and business interests. His influence was also apparent in the development of Red Bank, every enterprise which tended to promote its advancement and further its growth as a commercial center finding in him generous co-operation and material support. He was no less an influential factor in political and in business projects. Modest in demeanor and indifferent to the honors conferred for party service, he was, nevertheless, one of the leading Henry Clay Whigs of his day. A strong partisan and zealous in defense of the principles of his party, he was frequently a delegate to county and state conventions, where his judicial counsels won respectful attention. His ability as a financier, combined with the most scrupulous integrity, caused him frequently to be chosen for the office of executor and trustee, which important trusts were filled with fidelity and wisdom. Mr. Throckmorton, though not a member, was an active supporter of the First Presbyterian Church at Shrewsbury, to which he gave with an ungrudging liberality."

338. VII. JOSEPH ALFRED, b. do., 3 July, 1827; educated at Elizabeth, N. J. In 1842 went to Tennessee and engaged in the fur business, returning to Red Bank in 1848. The following spring in company with a number of his fellow-townsmen, sailed from New York for California to seek his fortune among the gold regions of that wonderful country, about which in those days one heard such fabulous accounts. After a long and tedious voyage he arrived at San Francisco, and from thence proceeded to the gold fields and engaged in gold mining operations, with varied success for seven years, then returned to the place of his nativity, and embarked in the lumber business and ranked among the leading and successful capitalists of Red Bank. He was in the organization of the 1st National Bank of that place and was one of the directors, and later filled the same office in connection with the 2d National Bank; also director of the Red Bank and Eatontown Turnpike Co. and the Leedsville and Red Bank Turnpike Co.; also of the Mutual Insurance Co. of Shrewsbury. With a loyal affection for the place of his nativity, he entered heartily into nearly all important schemes which promoted its growth and affected its well-being. True to the traditions of his family, he early espoused the principles of the Old Line Whig party, and on the organization of the Republican party became a warm partisan in its cause. He frequently served as delegate to state and county conventions, but declined all proffers of office. He was a man of large means and unquestioned integrity, and was often sought for such positions as executor and guardian and for various other trusts involving much responsibility. He was a Presbyterian in faith and contributed generously to the support of the church. He d. unm., at the old home where he was born in Red Bank, on East Front St., 20 April, 1907, aged 79 years.

His father was a merchant in comfortable circumstances and gave his son the advantage of a thorough home training in habits of industry and sound morals, besides a good public school education and business training in conducting a village store. He went to Philadelphia, Pa., where he engaged in the mercantile and brokerage business. "Unfortunately," writes a descendant, "he placed his name on a note for a cousin, who went off to California during the 40's of the past century and left him to pay it! He thus helped his kinsman to a fortune and his own family to poverty." He and his wife were very strict Presbyterians and brought their children up as such, but when grown they all, so far as known, joined the Episcopal church; and during the later years of their lives Mr. Throckmorton and his wife also became Episcopalians. 157. CAPT. JOSEPH W. THROCKMORTON (William 74, Joseph 26, John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Spotswood, N. J., 16 June, 1800. His parents removed to New York City in 1811, where he was graduated from the public schools in 1817, taught literature for a short time, then entered one of the first mercantile houses of that city. Coming to the years of manhood he became a merchant in Natchez, Miss., but while he journeyed East to procure more merchandise, his partner decamped with all the money, his share being about $18,000, and the whole matter lapsed, never hearing of the man again. He then commenced business in New York and continued it for a few years. But having a talent for machinery and boat-building he soon broke away from such modest conditions and went West, where he adopted the business of steamboating, which in those days was a great thing and the steamboat captain a very important personage. He was one of the officers on board the Pike, the first steamboat known to have visited St. Louis, Mo. He eventually became one of the most noted river men in the U.S.A. He and one Shellcross being the first persons to engage in steamboating on the Upper Mississippi.[1] Out of historical publications, Pittsburgh and St. Louis papers of bygone times, have been excerpted the following particulars concerning his life:

"Capt. Throckmorton's first steamboat, the Red Rover, was built at Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1827. He made two or three trips in it to Zanesville, O., then had the misfortune of being run into by another boat above Louisville, and his vessel sunk without a dollar of insurance! Nothing daunted, he raised his vessel, delivered his cargo in a damaged condition, and went on to St. Louis, Mo., in the first steamboat known to have landed there, in 1828, commanded by Capt. Reed, he being an officer on this pioneer steamer.[2] The same year he entered the Upper Mississippi trade, to run between St. Louis and Galena, making occasional trips to Prairie du Chien and Fort Snelling, or St. Paul. In those days the Upper Mississippi presented difficulties that are unknown to boatmen of the present day. Besides snags, stumps, leaning trees and sand-bars, there were scarcely any settlements above Fort Edward (Warsaw), and the Indians were almost the only possessors of the land. Keokuk, the celebrated Indian chief, had quite a friendly feeling for Capt. Throckmorton, and at one time offered him nearly all of Flint hills, now the city of Burlington, if he would settle there. He formed many and lasting friendships with the officers of the army stationed at the various military posts on the river and elsewhere. They would frequently wait for days at a time for "Capt. Throckmorton's boat," knowing that he always kept the best of police on board of his boats and that passengers, be they high or low, always received kindly and gentlemanly treatment from him. "He differed from most of the old-time steamboat men, in that he never used profane language, and did not countenance it on his boats" (Phil E. Chappell: Kan. Hist. Pub., 1906).

After commanding the Red Rover for two or three years, he built at Pittsburgh, in 1832, the Warrior and also a passenger barge, towing it in the Galena trade for two seasons. He had much government patronage in transporting troops, supplies and Indian goods for the factory trade. His gentlemanly deportment and efficiency as a commander secured for him the confidence of Pierre Chouteau Jr., the head man of the American Fur[3] Co., and Capt. Throckmorton was employed as Master of various steamboats of that company for many years, navigating the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. He was one of two steamboat masters who was pressed into government service during the Black Hawk War of 1832, with boats and crews. He took part in the battle of Bad Axe with his steamer Warrior. The following hastily penned letter[4] by him gives a graphic description of this battle:

"3rd Aug., 1832 (Prairie du Chien).

I arrived in this place on Monday last (July 30) and was dispatched with the Warrior alone to Wa-pa-shaw's village, 120 miles above, to inform them of the approach of the Sacs, and in order to bring down all the friendly Indians to this place. On our way down we met one of the Sioux band, who informed us that the Indians, our enemies, were on Bad Axe River to the number of 400. We stopped and cut some wood and prepared for action. About 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon (Aug. 1st) we found the gentlemen where the Sioux stated he had left them. As we neared them they raised a white flag and endeavored to decoy us; but we were a little too old for them, for instead of landing, we ordered them to send a boat on board, which they declined. After about 15 minutes delay, giving them time to remove some of their women and children, we let slip a six-pounder loaded with canister, followed by a severe fire of musketry; and if you ever saw straight blankets, you would have seen them there. I fought them at anchor most of the time, and we were all very much exposed. I have a ball which came close by where I was standing, and passed through the bulkhead of the wheelroom. We fought them about an hour or more, until our wood began to fail, and night coming on, we left and went on to the Prairie. This fight cost them 23 killed and of course a great many wounded. We never lost a man and had but one wounded. The next morning, before we could get back again, on account of a heavy fog, they had the whole army upon them. We found them at it, walked in, and took a hand ourselves. The first shot from the Warrior laid out three. I can hardly tell you anything about it, for I am in great haste, as am on my way to the field again. The army lost 8 or 9 killed, and 7 wounded, whom we brought down. One died on deck last night. We brought down 36 prisoners, women and children. I tell you what, Sam, there is no fun in fighting Indians, particularly at this season, when the grass is so bright. Every man, and even my cabin boy, fought well. We had 16 regulars, 5 riflemen and 20 of ourselves." (This battle virtually ended the war.)

Capt. Throckmorton built, owned, and commanded successfully some of the finest steamers upon the Western waters,—nine in all. The Burlington, built in 1837, was one of the finest steamers that had been built for the trade. During the Mexican War an order arrived at Fort Crawford for the movement of two companies of dragoons, then at Forts Crawford and Atkinson, to New Orleans as speedily as possible. As an evidence of the energy of Capt. Throckmorton, then at Fort Crawford and on his way to Fort Snelling with a rapids barge in tow, he went on to Fort Snelling and hurriedly discharged his freight, prepared his barge for the horses, and took two Cos., with all their horses, baggage, and stores from Ft. Atkinson to St. Louis, carrying the horses in the open barge, and at a time when the water was very low, evidencing his great care, which was a feature of his life. He engaged in steamboating nearly 45 years, with the exception of about four years in which he was in charge of the Tenn. Ins. Co., of St. Louis. The last year or so of his life he was in the service of the U.S. Government, under Col. McComb, of the Engineer Corps, U.S.A., in charge of the improvement of the Mississippi from St. Paul to Rock Island. He died in 1872, in this service just as he had placed his boat in safe harbor for the winter.

The St. Louis Republican says: "During Capt. Throckmorton's lifetime we have frequently asked from him the privilege of noticing in our paper the principal incidents of his long and eventful life, but he uniformly but courteously declined to do so, seeking to avoid, rather than court, notoriety. He was a man of unblemished reputation and a devout Christian; for many years a member and communicant of the Roman Catholic Church. Many and varied as were the attractions which Capt. Throckmorton possessed, it was only when with his family that one saw his character in its most beautiful colors, and never was there a man who loved more to be at home than he. For several years he was in the Indian trade on the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers. . . . The flags of steamers at our port yesterday were flying at half mast in honor of the deceased."

Capt. Throckmorton d. at Rock Island, on board the steamer Montana,[1] 23 Nov., 1872; int. St. Louis, Mo. "He was the most picturesque and distinguished pioneer river man in the United States." Yet he died poor, after having won for himself several competencies from the profits of his business only to lose all: "In 1868, he was induced to load his steamer Columbia for Fort Benton at very low rates for two successive years. They proved to be seasons of very low water, and the many detentions and delays, caused heavy losses,[2] and swept from him the savings of former years. But he bore his misfortune in a truly Christian spirit. We but echo the saying of a friend: 'Living or dead, no more accomplished gentleman ever trod the deck of any vessel.'" The Wisconsin, Missouri, and Kansas State Hist. Socs. Publications contain many references to him. He m. at Pittsburgh, Pa., 29 Sept., 1836, Mary Jane Gorman; b. Bedford, Pa., 1818, dau. of John and Teresa (Glynn) Gorman, who came from Dublin, Ireland, in 1807. She was a Catholic and he an Episcopalian, but later he embraced her faith. She d. St. Louis, Mo., 16 Feb., 1879. Her obituary says in part:

"Mrs. Throckmorton was widely known in this city and highly esteemed on account of those truly Christian virtues which go to make up the dutiful mother, faithful wife and revered friend. There is scarcely a deserving charity in this city but will bear testimony of her zealous efforts to relieve the poor, help the orphans, and assist those who have to struggle with the dark side of life. Her good deeds and kind actions will always remain to speak her praises and point to her meritorious life as an example to be imitated."

Res. Pittsburgh, Pa., until about 1843; then St. Louis, Mo.

[1] The last boat he built, and which was purchased by the Government.

[2] He also lost heavily through the destruction of his boats by snags and fire, in a time when such losses were expected to befall any boat within four years from its launching: Malta, an American Fur Co. boat, 2 Aug., 1842, struck a sawyer, which tore the entire bottom out of her and she sunk to the hurricane roof in a little over a minute: probably no boat ever went to the bottom so quickly on the river. Geneva, sunk near Nebraska City, 1850. Florence, first went down in Augusta bend, below Washington, Mo., 1854, but was finally lost near Port Williams, Kan., 1856 (or '61). Florence (No. 2), sunk near Sumner, Kansas, 1864. Montana, a large side-wheel boat, built by Capt. T., sunk by ice at St. Louis, 16 Dec., 1865. (Kansas State Hist. Soc. Pub.)

They lived at Astoria,† Long Island, but in the late 40s or early 50s of the past century went to San Francisco, Calif., where he became a very influential man and at one time owned most of Marin Co.; there was one fence on his land more than 25 miles in length. When a well planned attempt was made to rob him of his land, by an organized gang of land thieves, who disputed his titles, the case was carried through the U. S. Supreme Court, and a decision in his favor handed down,—to this day the most important suit in Land Case Litigations in the Law Reports. He dealt in real estate and was fish commissioner for many years. "Throckmorton Trail," over the ridge in Marin Co., and "Throckmorton Ave.," Mill Valley, were named for him. He d. about 1883/4, as his name appears at that date in the city directory for the last time. W. H. Shebley, Dept. of Fish Culture, Sacramento, 1927, writes:

"As a boy I knew Samuel R. Throckmorton. He was a man of wealth and owned a large piece of property in Marin County, as well as in other places in the vicinity of San Francisco. He was one of the most active and energetic men in the early development of California. He had a magnificent home and grounds in Marin County, known as "The Throckmorton Place." He was interested in the common welfare of the State and in a great many of the civil and political activities. He was well known by the old pioneers for his untiring energy in bettering conditions in California. He was appointed on the Board of Fish and Game Commissioners in 1870 and served until 1880. He was very much interested in the introduction of food and game fishes into the State, and through the efforts of this Board, of which he was an active member, some of the finest food and game fishes that exist in California are the result of their labors. As a boy the writer remembers well the popularity and respect that the people had for Mr. Samuel R. Throckmorton, for he was one of our leading citizens."

388. III. CHARITY, b. 3 Oct., 1825, Warren Co., O.; m. in St. Joseph Co., Ind., 6 Feb., 1844, William Wharton, son of David, a native of Pa. and of English ancestry. The Whartons were one of the first families to establish their home within the borders of St. Joseph Co., and for many years they were numbered among the leading citizens and agriculturists of Greene tp. William Wharton was b. in Warren Co., O., where he grew to maturity, learned and followed the wagon-maker's trade for many years in connection with his agricultural pursuits. In 1833* he went to St. Joseph Co., the Wharton name thus being enrolled among its very first pioneers. The county was then a wild western region, the Indians still roamed at will throughout the state, the forests stood in their primeval strength and the broad prairies had been untamed by the plow. In the work of growth and upbuilding Mr. Wharton performed his full share and he now lies buried in the township in which he was so long an honored resident, his death occurring at the age of sixty-two years. He gave his political support to the Republican party, and was a Hicksite Quaker in his religious belief. Ten years later his wife joined him in the home beyond; she also having passed away at the age of sixty-two years, dying in the faith of the Presbyterian church. They were loved and honored for their many excellent traits of character, and in the locality in which they so long made their home they had many friends. He b. 23 June, 1815; d. 7 May, 1877. Learned the cabinet-maker trade of his brother-in-law, George LaFetra, and engaged in that work for fifteen years. In 1836 moved to Piqua for two years, thence to a farm he had purchased several years before in Brown Tp., Miami Co. He cleared the forest, and to-day fine buildings have taken the place of his rude huts and barns. During the Civil War he sold this farm and purchased another in the same tp. In 1865 he removed to a farm purchased of his nephew, James LaFetra, near Oakland, Clinton Co., but later returned to Miami Co., near Oakland, where he d. 4 Jan., 1881; int. Fletcher Cem. He m. 200. JOSEPH THROCKMORTON (Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 3 June, 1785; saddler and harness maker by trade but followed farming. He was a spare man of medium height, active, quick-tempered and inclined to be "spluttery"; m. 16 Feb., 1809, Catherine Hulsart, dau. of Joseph (?), an "officer in the American Revolution"; b. 23 Oct., 1789. Her parents d. early and she was reared in the home of Stephen Barkalow, near Freehold. The same spring of their marriage they left N. J. for Greene Co., Pa., with what necessaries of life they could haul over the almost roadless mountains in a two-horse wagon. They settled on an 100 acre farm on Ten Mile Creek, about two miles west of the village of Waynesburg. Greene County was then an almost unbroken wilderness, and they encountered many difficulties and hardships in clearing the primeval forest and establishing a home for themselves. They had to shed the sheep at nights to save them from the wolves, watch the turkeys to prevent the wild ones from tolling them off, and guard the wheat fields in the early spring to keep the deer from eating the tender grain. As the years went by they prospered, purchased adjoining lands—until they owned 400 acres,—gave liberally to the church and other benevolent objects. He built one of the first sawmills west of Waynesburg on Ten Mile Creek, near the present Throckmorton Church. Mrs. Throckmorton d. 14 March, 1853; int. Hill burying-ground adjoining their farm. While on a visit to his brother Archie in Ohio he met and m. Mrs. Laura (Peck) Gilbert, widow of David A. Gilbert,* 13 May, 1857; he being 72 years old and she 57. He then made his home on her farm near Bloomfield, O., where she d. 5 Oct., 1868; int. Bloomfield Cem.; b. Conn., 14 July, 1799. After her death Mr. Throckmorton returned to Greene Co., Pa., sold his farm and divided the bulk of his estate among his children, with whom he went to live,—going from one home to another. This was not a satisfactory life for a man over fourscore years, so he finally made his home with a grandson, John T. Rees, at Rees' Mill, where he d. 15 Sept., 1881, in the 97th year of his age. Probably the oldest man in the county. His obt. says in part:

"Joseph Throckmorton, during much of his active life, was a member of the Waynesburg M.E. Church and was foremost in its enterprises and church duties, visiting the sick and ministering to both the spiritual and temporal wants of the needy. Though a man of decided opinions and hasty temper, he was always quick to forgive and forget. Kind of heart and benevolent in character,—a man universally respected. As he grew upward into his nineties he remarked to the writer, in speaking of his age, "I should like to live to be an hundred years old, that it might be said a Throckmorton lived to be a centenarian!" But his desire was not realized by three years, though he retained his physical and mental faculties to a remarkable degree up to within a few days of his death. . . . The most notable feature in the death of this remarkably aged man was the attendance at the funeral of the two remaining brothers of the deceased, who lived on adjoining farms: James R. Throckmorton in his 93rd year vigorous and active, and Morford Throckmorton in the 91st year of his age. The like of which could not probably be found in traveling the world over. He was buried by the side of his wife Catherine in the Hill Burying-ground, in an enclosed and select spot provided by himself. His descendants embrace a long line numbering: 10 children, 52 grandchildren, 45 great-grandchildren and 5 great-great-grandchildren,—110 in all."

A grandnephew† writes thus of the three brothers:

"Joseph, James, and Morford Throckmorton were not born frontier men, but as sophisticated as any to be found in the country, in fact they were rather out of touch with the rough and ignorant mass that made up the first settlers of their county. As boys they had been for their day well educated, though not college men. They had been strong and athletic and could easily swim a mile, and were great pedestrians even in old age. They never spoke of each other, or called each other by the formal name, always the diminutive: Josie, Jimmie, Archie. Their father owned slaves and one of the "nigger boys," while in swimming one day, made some remark that Josie resented and he attempted to drown the offender who, terror stricken, took to land and his heels with Josie in close pursuit (in a state of nature), until both were exhausted. Once while in New York City marketing their crops they met one of their father's runaway slaves, whom they pursued but were unable to capture. Another time while there they remained over night to witness Fulton's first trial trip with his steamboat. They remembered the condition of the public mind caused by the news of the death of George Washington. They told of picking up musket balls and other relics of the battle of Monmouth, part of which

Operating flour mills had been the occupation of his forbears for three generations and he followed in their footsteps. When steam was introduced he changed from the old-time water power at his mill to the more modern way of turning the burrs. When the new roller process was invented back in the 80's, he organized the Waynesburg New Process Milling Co. and was the manager of it for almost twenty-five years, though continuing to reside at his home two miles west of Waynesburg. Later the property was sold and he retired to his farm, where he conducted feed-grinding at the old mill. He d. from injuries sustained in a mowing machine accident, 13 July, 1915; int. Simpson Cem. 442. VII. ELIZABETH JENNINGS, b. 27 Nov., 1824; m. William Jacob Keigley, 29 Feb., 1848; b. 12 June, 1824, son of John and Rachel (Anderson). Lived at the old Keigley home near Waynesburg. April 1854 removed to Boone Co., Iowa, and in 1885 into Madrid, Iowa. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary 29 Feb., 1898, at Hotel Arie. The parlors were filled to overflowing with grey haired men and women, scores of whom had known the Keigleys when Madrid was only a wilderness and wild beasts roamed the site. Jonas Throckmorton, a nephew, was the only guest present who had witnessed the ceremony half a century before. In a letter to the compiler, 1900, Mrs. Keigley writes: "I joined the M. E. Church in Waynesburg fifty-nine years ago. When we came to Iowa there was no church near our home. This was a very lonesome looking country at that time,—no settlements to speak of; a cabin once in two or three miles along the timber. Well, we passed through it and began to live nicely, when a prairie fire came and destroyed all our buildings, grain and hay, we merely escaped with our lives. But we went to work with renewed energy, put up new buildings and improved the farm. In 1864 Mr. Keigley was drafted into the army, and I was left with six children, the eldest fourteen and the youngest two months. He was taken seriously ill and sent to the hospital. I gave a man $800 to take his place and had him brought home. In 1885 we sold the farm and moved to Madrid, four miles south of our old home. Mr. Keigley and our son Lionel went into the mercantile business and were very successful. In 1898 Mr. Keigley sold his share to our son Robert, and now the two sons own the store and Mr. Keigley has retired from active business." Mrs. Keigley d. 23 April, 1903; he d. 29 Dec., 1904. He filled a number of tp. offices and was the first supt. of the first S. S. ever organized at Belle Point. He was a member of the council. Ch.:

202. JAMES ROBINSON THROCKMORTON (Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 24 Feb., 1790; united with the Blue Ball M. E. Church at age of nineteen. After completing his trade of wainwright and millwright he went to Greene Co., Pa., purchased land adjoining that of his brothers, Joseph and Morford, and began the manufacturing of wooden plows, the iron work being done by his brother Morford. These plows were such a success that the two brothers continued to make and sell them for a number of years, doing much of the work at night. But owning large tracts of land they gradually gave up their trades and devoted their time to farming. In 1838 James R. Throckmorton purchased 249 acres, and in 1870, 5 acres.* He m. Jane Throckmorton, 3 Sept., 1818; b. 11 Nov., 1800, dau. of Daniel and Mary (Barclo), of near Rutan, Pa. She d. 16 Feb., 1839; int. Hill Burial Ground. He m. 2d, Euphemia ("Effie") Braddock, Sept., 1840; b. 7 June, 1810, dau. of John and Mary (Wilson); d. 14 June, 1882. Before this marriage he began to build the great stone house which still stands. When he found that it could not be completed by the time set for the wedding he suggested to "Effie" that they postpone their marriage until a later date, but the lady firmly said, "Now or never!" So the celebration of the nuptial ceremony came off at the specified time, and the house was ready for occupancy the following summer. Preaching services were often held in the home of his brother Morford, and from these services grew the Throckmorton M. E. Church in 1850, erected upon a wooded hill on James R. Throckmorton's farm.† He and his family were members of this church from the time of its establishment. For more than threescore years the three brothers dwelt on their adjoining farms, 900 acres in a body, and engaged in various activities until they retired from business long after the allotted years of man,—hale and healthy even in old age. A grandnephew, who knew him well, writes:

"Old Uncle Jimmie was a picturesque and original character; shrewd, witty, and with a vast amount of brains, but lacking the element of business instinct which made his brothers so prosperous. He was slenderly built, about five-feet-ten in height, with a slightly Roman nose. He was wont to wear a high gray stovepipe hat, which would have held at least two gallons, and was 'sicklied o'er with the pale cast of time.'"

Mr. Throckmorton was a remarkably alert and active pedestrian, even at the age of ninety-four walking over the big hill twice a week to visit his brother Morford; d. 26 July, 1885, in the 96th year of his age. A fragment from an obituary:

"Father Throckmorton was in many respects a remarkable man. Remarkable for his physical health, his powers of endurance, his longevity, and above all his faith in God. He lived to become the oldest man in Greene county and the only man in the county who had lived under the administration of every President of the U. S. For more than seventy-six years he was a faithful and consistent member of the M. E. Church. . . . His mortal remains were laid to rest in the Hill cemetery, followed by a large concourse of friends."

He left a will, leaving much of his property to his youngest son, who resided in the old home. Res. Freehold, N. J.; Waynesburg, Pa.

203. MORFORD THROCKMORTON (Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 11 April, 1792. He was a tall, slenderly built, handsome youth, with keen grey eyes and an abundance of soft dark hair "thick with many a curl." After mastering the blacksmith trade, about 1812, he crossed the mountains on horseback to visit his brother Joseph and other relatives in Greene Co., Pa. Liking the new country he decided to stay, and located his first blacksmith shop at Morrisville (See No. 90). He m. 21 March, 1816, Margaret Hill; b. 1 Aug., 1796, dau. of Samuel and Elizabeth (Cathers). Prior to this event he built a log cabin on his father-in-law's farm west of Waynesburg on the Rogersville road and moved his shop there. He early bought 134 acres of land which he exchanged with Job Cornwell,* Jan. 7, 1822, for 224 acres, paying "$70. to boot." This became his permanent farm. May 15, 1823, he purchased 193 adjoining acres of John and Annie (Graham) Roach* for $500. He also bought 421 a. near Rogersville, where his son Samuel later lived; 160 a. of Gov. land in Ohio, which he transferred to his brother Archie; several hundred acres in Iowa during the '50s, which he afterwards distributed among his children. His wife d. 12 Nov., 1823; int. Hill Burying Ground. He m. 2d. Nancy Simpson, 15 Dec., 1825; b. 19 July, 1801, dau. of Rev. John and Rebecca (Gregory). He then established his home on his own farm 3 mi. west of Waynesburg, where he erected, 1826/7, the capacious two-storied brick house where the rest of his life was spent. He bought a cookstove, the third one in the county, and the entire countryside came to view the strange contraption! He owned the first mowing machine west of Waynesburg; brought grafts from New Jersey and started the first grafted apples in the neighborhood. He was regarded by his brothers as the best business man of the three and his counsel and advice were sought by them and his judgment accepted as final. He was one of the executors of his father's will, and in that capacity sold the homestead in New Jersey to a purchaser not related to the family. It was while settling his father's estate in 1839 that the old Family Bible, bearing dates back to 1693, came into his possession, along with other books from his father's library. These he brought in a carpet bag, by stagecoach and horseback, to his Pa. home.

Morford Throckmorton was a Democrat and one of the pioneers of the M. E. Church. His home was a Christian home where God was daily worshipped and was ever open to his ministers. Every member of his family came into the M. E. church and became not merely nominal members but zealous workers in the activities of the congregation. He was a wealthy man for the time and place in which he lived, owning at his death 970 acres of fertile land with fine improvements. He possessed great physical endurance and mental poise, but was a singularly modest, quiet man,—the gentlest of the gentle. He held an honorable place in the community and was especially favored in his home. The family life was generous and hospitable. The comfortable time-mellowed house was surrounded by shade trees and a delightful yard. Deep, capacious window-seats and hearthstones, prodigal of space, and a glorious fire of logs roaring up the great chimneys, greeted one with the largest welcome. Mrs. Throckmorton d. of paralysis, 28 Feb., 1869. She was a fine cook, a notable housekeeper and possessed unusual executive ability in managing her home and family. After her death a widowed daughter, Rebecca Guiher with her five young children, stayed with Mr. Throckmorton four years. Then his son, Reed and family, came into the home to care for his declining years. He d. in the house that had been his for more than half a century, 16 Jan., 1884, in his 92nd year; int. Green Mount Cem., Waynesburg, where later the remains of his two wives and young children were placed, having been removed from the Hill Burying-ground. He left a will with his sons, William and Reed, executors.

The Three Throckmorton Brothers,‡ Who and What They Were

Born in one of the oldest English settlements in New Jersey, descendants of one of the original Proprietary families of the colony, in youth and early manhood they exhibited the spirit and enterprise that had marked their forbears. Sturdy, self-reliant, and with complete control of mind and body, they went about the duties of life. They met and mingled with their fellow men in a spirit of equality. They asked no favors, either political or financial, of their fellows. For them life must be a fair field and no favorites. They acknowledged their dependence on God, but they stood upright in the presence of all men, acknowledging no man or party as their master. They had no lust for public office and despised gain or power that was obtained by questionable methods.

By precept and example they taught their families to be sober, truthful, economical and honest. To be prudent and industrious in their vocations of life. To obey the laws of God and to keep his commandments and to strictly observe the laws of the land in which they lived.

They made no ostentatious display of the wealth they gained. They lived uprightly, they dealt justly, and no man questioned their honor or integrity. And such lives as these, prolonged to so many years beyond the scriptural allotment, became an influence for good that reached far beyond their own immediate families or communities. In life they were honored and respected by all men, and died in the fear and favor of God, passing the torch of an unsullied christian character as a heritage to their children. And they proved worthy of the trust to the end, since all that has been said of the fathers can also be said of them." (Dr. H. B. Guiher)

Center Tp., Greene Co., Pa., 27 Dec., 1823, youngest child of Peter and Mary (Shearin), and grandson of George Graham (Revolutionary soldier from N. J.) and his wife Charity Kimball. Res. two years on his father's farm,* then moved to their permanent home, a mile west at the headwaters of Scott Run, where he acquired the finest homestead in that part of the county. His 416 acres of cleared, fenced, cultivated land, with capacious colonial house, wash-house, barn and other outbuildings, all kept in good repair, was the outstanding place in the community. During the 50's he bought several sections of land in Ind., Iowa and Mo. direct from the U. S. Gov., at $1.25 per acre. Some of the Iowa land is still owned by his descendants. He was an extensive stock raiser as well as farmer. A man of quick, active industry, honest, economical and of few words. As a youth of fifteen he helped the neighbors build the first little Hopewell M. E. Church, which was on his father's farm, and who deeded the land for the church and cemetery 29 Aug., 1839. He joined this church in Dec., 1843, and was an officer therein the rest of his life. He d. 8 Oct., 1894; int. Hopewell Cem. where three generations of the family now are resting.

Margaret Throckmorton Grimes d. 21 Jan., 1901. As the 2nd dau. in a large family where generous hospitality prevailed, she always had plenty of employment, and early in life acquired a vigor of mind, a quick energy of action and an overwhelming sense of duty which remained with her throughout life. She was a model housekeeper. Thrift, system, neatness and hospitality marked her home administration. She was also a wonderful disciplinarian, and he would have been a rarely reckless person who had ventured to question her authority within her own home. She united with the Hopewell M. E. Church in her twelfth year, and throughout her life was a devoted Christian. Her home was always open to ministers. As her body failed her intellect, always vigorous, remained strong and clear and her memory unfailing. To the end her interest in the lives and work of those around her was most vital. To her home she gave her best energies and unceasing and unwearied devotion. To her husband and children she gave a life single in purpose, and in their happiness and welfare found her highest pleasure. She was a kind and helpful neighbor, unfailing in generosity, and her desire was to accommodate and serve all with whom she came in contact. Ch.:

Dr. Sitherwood d. suddenly of pneumonia, 5th Jan., 1929. Quoted from funeral service (Edgar DeWitt Jones, D.D.):

"As a churchman, Dr. Sitherwood was a leader. Thirty years he was supt. of the Sunday School of the First Christian Church, twenty-five years an elder. The church was the greatest thing in the doctor's life. He loved it devotedly and gave the church the best he had. He was a close student of the Bible, was gifted in public prayer. His musical taste was unusually good, and he, himself, possessed fine musical ability. He was a friendly man, hospitable, generous and kind. . . . Dr. Sitherwood was distinctly a credit to his profession, a luminous asset to his church and community. He ever followed some fair ideal. He loved good books, read the best magazines, was down to date in his thinking, reading, planning. He did his own thinking. He was a gentleman unafraid. He dared to follow new trails."

Dr. Sitherwood was a graduate of Millsboro, Pa., Normal School; and taught two terms of school. Enlisted in the Civil War, Mt. Pleasant, Pa., Independent Cav. Co., for three months, 3 July, 1863; and in the regular army,—U. S. Vol., Signal Corps, 27 Feb., 1864, Indiana, Pa., for three years. He was one of the chief buglers of the signal camp of instruction at Georgetown Heights, D. C., and a member of the Signal Corps Band and assisted in the serenade at the White House the night Lincoln was re-elected president. Feb. 1865, was sent with a detachment of the Signal Corps to the South, doing duty at Hilton Head, S. C.; Braddock Point, Fort Pulaska, Ga.; and the sea islands of S. C.; disc. 21 Aug., 1865, Hilton Head. He was graduated in medicine and surgery, 1868, at Univ. of Med. & Surg., Philadelphia. Practiced this profession until 1872, then removed to Bloomington, Ill., and turned his attention to dentistry at 118 W. Washington St., and was an active dentist there until a week before his death. He was a lover of music, and from boyhood played various musical instruments, taught singing school and led a brass band at Mt. Pleasant, Pa. He also possessed a beautiful voice. For a period of half a century he served on the music committee of the First Christian Church, Bloomington, and for 15 years had entire charge of the choir. He was supt. of the S. S. for thirty consecutive years and served as elder for a quarter of a century. One of the organizers of the Temperance Cadets; member of county, state and national Dental Socs.; State vice-pres., 1919; several times pres. of McLean Co. Soc. Member of Longfellow Club. Guernsey Co., O., 25 June, 1825, son of Francis and Mary (Crow), who removed from O. to near Ryerson Station, Greene Co., Pa., 1827. They went to housekeeping on his father's farm where the rest of their lives were spent. He was a lover of nature and natural surroundings, and made his farm one of the most beautiful and attractive in the county. During the 70's he built a substantial brick house. He kept fine chickens, geese, guineas and a few stately peacocks, and was the first man in his community to introduce thoroughbred cattle and sheep. He made stock raising his business through life. He was the soul of honor in his relations with men, and had a profound reverence for sacred things and an abiding respect for his godly father and mother. Such was his integrity that for years he sold the wool he produced on his farm, in the Phila. market, at from two to four cents per pound above the highest market quotations, and that without examination of the wool. He d. suddenly, 17 Jan., 1892. "A most loving and companionable husband to one of the most unselfish wives. A tender and affectionate father to children delighting to revel in the richness of that love. In hospitality a model, taking pleasure in sharing the best their elegant home afforded with all who were so favored as to come under their friendly roof. . . . Other children less fortunate than theirs, found a home there and were trained to habits of industry and in the essentials of a good and useful life." Mrs. Alice Lazear, one of the worth while women of Greene County, d. 8 April, 1913, at the home of her daughter Mary. She united with the M. E. Church in 1847. 465. VIII. REBECCA, b. Monday, 17 Sept., 1833; attended Waynesburg College, 1854-56; taught school a short time; m. 16 Feb., 1858, Dr. James Guiher; b. Lewistown, Pa., 1821, son of John and —— (2d wf.). He was a student at Allegheny Coll. and graduated at Jefferson Med. Coll., Phila. Located at Waynesburg, Pa., 1846, and practiced his profession there until 1862; his health being impaired he turned his attention to speculating in grain and in 1865 to general merchandise; d. 24 June, 1869, aged about 49 years. He was kind hearted and liberal, giving beyond what is usual for men in his circumstances. He took a deep interest in the Temperance reform, giving it his sympathy, time and money. The freedom and positiveness with which he expressed his opinions were very marked. After his death Mrs. Guiher went back to her girlhood home with her children where she remained four years, then returned to her home on W. Main* St., where she d. 8 March, 1908. In early life she became a member of Hopewell M.E. Church, but after marriage transferred her membership to the Waynesburg M.E. Church. She was devoted to every department of the church and filled many important positions in it and the S. S., where for many years she was a teacher. Charter member of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Soc., and its first treasurer, March, 1879, and filled the office until her death; several years before, as a token of appreciation of her faithful service, she was made a life member of this society. She was also treasurer of the Ladies Aid Soc. "In many respects Mrs. Guiher was a remarkable woman. When clouds hung low and were dark, when stone-faced difficulties hedged her path she did not sit down to pine and complain but felt it was God's call to diligence. No barrier ever hedged her way to victory. Her actions were a true reflex of her feelings, no one doubted as to where her stand was, and no one questioned the honesty of her expressed opinions; she was faithful to every duty because duty was sacred to her. Above all she was a Christian of the truest type. The beauty of her faith shone through her whole life. She believed in prayer as undoubted as she believed in life, and could inspire her confidence in another. Her honesty of purpose, her gentleness of spirit and her kindly benevolence, gained her many warm friends. The Bible used at her funeral had been in the Throckmorton family for 150 years." 5. Mary Alice Nancy (Nannie), b. 31 Jan., 1868; unm. Res. in the old home, Waynesburg, Pa.

The first of the name Guiher (Guyer) to come to America was Emmanuel Guyer, from Germany; buried Lititz, Pa., 1727. There were two brothers bearing this name, George and John, born and raised around Huntingdon and Tyrone, Pa. George had five or six sons and two daus.; four of the sons were Methodist ministers. John Guiher removed to East Brady, Pa., where he owned 5 or 6 hundred acres of land and a blast furnace. He was twice married; d. about 1842, aged about 70 or 80. By his 1st wife he had sons: Casper and John. By 2d wife: William, Rev. Andrew, Dr. James (as given), Isaac, and Sarah.

466. IX. SARAH, b. 31 Jan., 1836; graduated at Waynesburg Coll., 1860. She was a decidedly attractive girl of much more than ordinary intellectuality. Her laugh lay very near her lips, and to her keen sense of humor she added a gift of putting amusing things in words that made her merry company. Among her many ardent admirers was Joseph M. Milligan, a handsome, witty young student of Irish descent,—courteous in manner, entertaining in conversation, a sweet singer, but poor in purse. They became engaged, but the engagement met with opposition from the young lady's parents. So they hied themselves to the Waynesburg M. E. Parsonage and were secretly married by Rev. M. J. Peirce, 15 Aug., 1861. Several weeks later, during the minister's vacation, two students glancing over his books discovered the marriage record and noised it abroad. Mrs. Throckmorton, while shopping in Waynesburg, heard the report and was properly scandalized. Hurrying home the lively Sarah was promptly interviewed, and then and there received such a severe, old-fashioned Puritanic scolding that the memory lingered long, and surreptitious marriages were never popular among her descendants. In 1863 they began housekeeping at Taylorsville, Pa., where he taught school, and where the first child was born. The following year removed to Monongahela City where he taught for four years, studying law in the meantime. Admitted to Pa. bar, 1867, and removed to Afton, Iowa, 1869, where he again taught for two years, then practiced law for the rest of his life. He was county supt. of schools for a number of years and prominent in educational work. Ruling elder and clerk of the session in Presbyterian church; also choir leader. Mrs. Milligan united with the M. E. church in early life but after her removal to Iowa transferred her membership to the Presbyterian church. She d. of heart disease, 20 Nov., 1897. Her obt. says in part: "One could write a volume on the life and character of Mrs. Milligan. For many, many years until the last few weeks her noble and erect form has been seen treading the streets with the elastic step of youth. The shadow of age had never fallen upon her. She died as the young die. . . . The pioneers of Union county, one and all, found in Mrs. Milligan a friend. Even strangers felt the charm of her rare courtesy and sunny temperament, but how much more so the members of her own household upon whom she lavished all the earnestness and careful culture of her mind and nature. . . . The funeral services were held at the residence. It was a funeral at which all were mourners. The little children knew and loved Mrs. Milligan, the old pioneers, whose locks were whitened by the frosts of many winters, mingled their tears with the young in years as they looked at the peaceful sleeper in the casket."

Joseph M. Milligan d. 13 July, 1914; b. near West Finley, Pa., 22 May, 1833, son of Robert and Rebecca (Adams). He made his way through college by teaching during the winter months and attending school in the summer. He also tutored young men in Latin and Greek. He graduated at Waynesburg Coll., 1862. He was one of Afton's most honorable and highly respected citizens. Always in his place in the church and the day before his death he was in the house of God morning and evening. His grandfather, who came from Ireland, was in the Revolutionary War, his father in the War of 1812, and two of his brothers in the Civil War. Ch:

College St., Waynesburg, Pa., 13 Feb., 1879. "He was in many respects a remarkable man. He possessed an uncommon mind, and though young in years had acquired quite a proficiency in the science of law. He was one of the most prompt, energetic and efficient business men in the county." Mrs. Waddell d. "Hill Home," 16 July, 1921. In her girlhood she was a member of the M. E. church, but after marriage united with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Waynesburg. She was a charter member of the Waynesburg W.C.T.U. and for many years an active worker in the prohibition movement as well as in the churches. She was a loving and devoted mother, her greatest interest being in her home and family. She took especial delight in reading good literature and was always well informed on current happenings and interested in public affairs. Her outstanding characteristics were gentleness, kindness and modesty, but behind these great womanly virtues was a strong mind and she always maintained her convictions of right with determined will. She looked at the bright side of things and emphasized the good and useful, brushing aside the bad and inferior. Ch.:

"Archie." He learned the shoemaker trade in youth but never followed it after leaving New Jersey. The first time he visited his brothers in Greene Co., Pa., the journey there and back was made on foot—he had the family constitution. The Throckmortons were good pedestrians, having the essentials of health and strength. In 1826 he went to live in Greene Co., Pa., and m. there, 15 May, 1828, Ruth Simpson, ninth dau. of Rev. John and Rebecca (Gregory), b. 12 Dec., 1808. She was a sister of his brother Morford's wife. After the birth of his first child he purchased 160 acres of Government land from his brother Morford, near Bloomfield, Knox (now Morrow) Co., Ohio, and Morford helped him to move there in 1830. Archie was a farmer by occupation, a Methodist in religion, and a Republican in politics; d. 12 Sept., 1880. She d. 9 Nov., 1871; both int. Bloomfield Cem., South Bloomfield Tp., Morrow Co., O. After the birth of all their children a new county was formed called Morrow. It was made by cutting off a part of Knox, Delaware, Richland, etc., so the Archie Throckmorton farm now lies in Morrow Co. Their children were all members of the M. E. Church.

"My great grandfather Dill and two of his brothers came from England about 200 years ago, and settled in Maryland and Delaware. All married and raised large families. The name is very common in the latter place. I was visiting there some years ago and went to church and found about 30 Dills present, and the preacher was also named Dill, and very near all of them went to my brother's for dinner. I think my mother's grandparents (Cubbage) came from France. 'Tis said the name came from being "cup bearers" to the King.

I was in the War of the Rebellion and receive a pension; that with my farm and a few thousand on interest, enable us to get along very well. The Throckmortons and their relatives in this part of the country are no paupers."

Simpson Family

Rev. John Simpson, b. Ireland, 12 March, 1756 (Fam. Reg.); m. Rebecca Gregory, 8 April, 1790; b. Fermanagh Co., Ireland, 1 Aug., 1766 (Do.). Landed in America 12 Aug., 1791; settled near Phila., Pa., but in the fall of 1796, moved to Greene Co., Pa., on a farm near the present Swarts Station. He was licensed to preach the gospel, 22 Sept., 1798,* and preached his last sermon at Hopewell M. E. Church, July before his death, which occurred 1 Jan., 1844. Extract from a long obituary: "This venerable servant of the Lord was early awakened to a sight of his lost condition; and nearly sixty years ago, while praying in his father's garden, God removed the burden from his soul. He immediately joined the Methodist Church and was soon appointed leader of a class which office he held until he left for America. He brought with him a letter of his membership stating that he was an acceptable member of the church and a man of unblemished character. . . . His house has been a preaching place and a home for the preachers for nearly thirty years. . . . For something over one year past he had been feeble and gradually declining, until two weeks before his death, when he was confined to his bed. He suffered no pain, either in mind or body. I visited him on Christmas day, and found him happy in his Saviour. He said: 'Bags of gold and silver could do me no good now; but the grace of God supports me.' Then joyfully said, 'Death where is thy sting, grave where is thy victory?' In this happy frame of mind he continued until New Year's day when as calm as an infant's sleep his spirit left the clay tenement to join the blood-washed throng." (S. Cheney, Good Intent, Pa., Jan. 20, 1844.) "Rebecca Gregory Simpson, d. at the old homestead, now the residence of her son William, 31 Oct., 1859, in the 93rd year of her age. She was received by John Wesley into his society in her twelfth year; emigrated to America in 1791, bringing a certificate of membership in the Methodist Society, signed by John Armstrong. When she found a home she presented her certificate to the M. E. church; from it she was never expelled or lured. Believing its doctrines, loving its discipline, she cheerfully conformed to its usages until transferred to the church above. In 1816, she and her husband tendered their house as a place of preaching; the offer was immediately accepted, and their house regularly returned on 'the plan' for nearly forty years, until a neat little church was built and dedicated on the same farm, not more than five or six years ago. When they gave their house for a preaching place they opened it also for the preachers' home—such it has been and still is. Her life of piety toward God and her charity to men, leaves no doubt in our minds that she sleeps that sleep 'from which none ever wake to weep.'" (J. 1859.) Both int. Old M. E. DOCTOR OUTRIDES ROOSEVELT

"When, some time ago, former President Roosevelt succeeded in making a military ride of 96 miles in a single day, he was justly regarded as having performed no ordinary feat. Pres. Roosevelt is still a comparatively young man, and it would hardly be expected that any but a young man would be able to equal or surpass him in long-distance riding. However, a 65 year old gentleman, Dr. J. A. Throckmorton, of Sidney, Ohio, has far outdone our famous and strenuous retired executive. Dr. Throckmorton in one day rode three horses in relays from Sidney, through Piqua, to Troy, Ohio, twenty-one miles and return, three times, or one hundred and twenty-six miles in all. The actual time in the saddle was 12 hours and 36 minutes. Two of his horses made 21 miles each, one horse made 32 miles and the Kentucky black charger, shown in our picture, made 52 miles, in four relays of 13 miles each, in 200 minutes, smashing all records of any horse in history. On the day of his long ride, Dr. Throckmorton weighed 130 pounds. Before starting on it, he prayed for protection and guidance, and to this he attributes his success. . . . Although the day ended rainy and muddy, the doctor was greeted by large crowds along the route. And on his return to Sidney on the last trip he was welcomed by a brass band. . . . The result was telegraphed to Pres. Roosevelt." (One of many press articles.)

She d. 5 March, 1837, aged 26 years, leaving six small sons, the youngest but nine days old. This child was taken into the home of his grandmother Throckmorton who, with the aid of her two unmarried daughters and her son "Billy," raised him entirely. Samuel's sister, "Betsey" Throckmorton, came into his home and remained there until the eldest son married and brought his bride into the family. Samuel Throckmorton lived on the farm bought by his father near Hallsville, O., until about a month before his death, which occurred at the residence of his son, Judge J. L. Throckmorton, Chillicothe, O., 25 Nov., 1884, in his 84th year.

"Samuel Throckmorton possessed a tenacious and accurate memory, and a logical cast of mind. He was also endowed with fluency of speech and expressed his thoughts with accuracy and force. He was especially noted for his Biblical knowledge. He was devoid of all ostentation. . . . He was a constant church-goer, when circumstances permitted, and during Sabbath School hours occupied a place in the Bible class. He was a kind and indulgent parent, an affectionate husband, and a good citizen."

His wife's sister, Anna Woodhull, has left this tribute of affection written on the back of one of his photographs: "He has left none of his family worthy to wipe the dust from his shoes." The New York Times speaks of him thus:

"The death of Mr. Barberie Throckmorton,‡ in Bergen, N. J. (now Jersey City) calls for more than a passing notice. He had in large development the best features that had been characteristic of those New York merchants whose sagacity, integrity and enterprise, have built up the commercial renown of this city. He was the second son of the late Judge Throckmorton, of Monmouth county, inheriting all his father's best traits. He had true commercial sagacity, and so much executive ability, that though restrained by conscientious caution and prudence from entering upon the boldest operations he carried the business firm of Cunningham, Frost & Throckmorton, of which he was managing partner. through the financial vicissitudes of the last fifteen eventful years, without faltering, to the front rank of credit in the trade. At the time of his death he was the senior member of the firm of Throckmorton, Diggs & Co. But Mr. Throckmorton was not merely a man of business; he was in the truest sense a man. He was large of heart, of dauntless spirit, chivalrous in temper, refined in taste, of incorruptible integrity, a father for children to love and venerate, a citizen to be proud of, a perfect neighbor and a perfect friend."

311. AARON RHEA THROCKMORTON (Thomas 142, James 71, Joseph 26, John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 21 March, 1818; bp. St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 25 Oct., 1818; educated at common schools and Freehold Academy. At an early age he became an assistant in his father's office, but about 1835 went to New York where he remained for two years as a clerk in a mercantile house. Returned to Freehold, studied law, and was admitted as an attorney May 1841; counselor May 1846. Immediately upon his first admission he commenced the practice of his profession at Freehold; m. 14 Dec., 1848, Elizabeth H. Ellis; b. 24 Oct., 1819, dau. of Hon. Daniel Hendrickson Ellis and his wife Catherine A. Holmes (dau. John S. Holmes). In 1853 he formed a partnership with Judge J. S. Nevius, and removed to Jersey City, where he remained only about one year. At the organization of the State Senate in 1854 he was elected secretary and held the position three years. He was surrogate of Monmouth Co. from 1867 until he resigned the office 14 years later, 8th Feb., 1882, to accept that of president of the Freehold National Banking Company. He was one of the first directors of the bank at its organization in 1855, and continued a member of the board during the remainder of his life. The office of president he held from the time he was elected until his death, 3rd March, 1883. His widow d. 13 July, 1893. Both int. Maplewood Cem., Freehold; both left wills. Ellis's History of Monmouth County says of him in part:

"From the earliest years of his manhood Mr. Throckmorton took an active interest in public affairs, and became widely and most favorably known. In public meetings and celebrations he was always a leader. In the preliminary measures taken to produce the incorporation of Freehold he took a prominent part, and drafted the bill, which was afterwards passed by the Legislature. Prior to the first election under the charter, a public meeting was held for the purpose of nomination a "citizen's ticket" for the officers, having for its object the securing of honesty and economy in the administration of local affairs of the town and ignoring all partisanship. At this meeting Mr. Throckmorton presided and the ticket was elected. The citizen's organization thus formed was maintained and each year Mr. Throckmorton was called on to preside until the time of his death. . . . In the formation of the Fire Dept. of Freehold he was a leader and, until his death, an active member.

In 1860 he became a member of Olive Branch Lodge of Freemasons at Freehold, and filled in succession the several higher positions in it, including that of Master, 1865-66 & 1873; Junior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of N. J., 1869; finance committee, 1879-1882. In 1873, having been appointed by Gov. Parker commissioner to represent the State of New Jersey at the Vienna Exposition, he, in connection with the business of that commission, made the tour of Europe, in company with Dr. Vought and other gentlemen of his acquaintance. On the death of Dr. Vought, who was manager of the State Lunatic Asylum, Gov. Ludlow appointed Mr. Throckmorton to the position, which is one of honor and great responsibility.

Aaron Rhea Throckmorton was a man remarkable for the many admirable qualities which he exhibited, both in public and social life. The difficult duties of the important and responsible office of surrogate, which he filled so long and honorably, were performed by him with a perfect fidelity, justice and honesty of purpose, which received their most emphatic recognition in the remarkable majorities by which he was re-elected for his second and third terms. He had that very peculiar and very rare disposition which enabled him to discharge trying duties with an evenness of temper which was remarkable. . . . He was a genial, courteous and friendly man, full of benevolence and a kindly regard for the feelings of others. For the young practitioners, with whom he came in contact, he had always a word of encouragement. For those who filled positions under him, and who were with him daily for years, his uniform kindness, consideration and forbearance won for him a love which outlived its object, and still clings to his memory. To the poor his sympathy and his purse were always open. Needy families were shielded from cold and hunger by his liberality, yet his benevolence was wholly free from ostentation, and many of his charitable acts remained hidden until his death. He left behind him a name which is a proud inheritance, an example worthy of emulation.

For many years he was a communicant of St. Peter's Church of Freehold, of which he was Junior Warden in 1880. One of the stained glass windows bears his name. Referring to Mr. Throckmorton's connection with the church and his fidelity to its principles, his pastor spoke of him 'as a devoted, earnest, faithful member, and a most liberal supporter; one deeply interested in its welfare, eager for its prosperity. . . . The friend revered, the companion esteemed, the parishioner always mindful of his churchly relations; the Christian brother, walking in his vocation, remembering his assumed vows of loyalty to his Divine Master; striving, though in the midst of temptation and hinderances which come to every man, to do his duty; the co-worker whose resolve was earnest, whose counsel was wise, whose judgment was helpful, whose loving deeds were efficient.' 312. CHARLES DUNCAN THROCKMORTON (Thomas 142, James 71, Joseph 26, John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 13 Sept., 1821; m. Mary Ann Ellis, 7 Feb., 1855; b. 5 May, 1824, dau. of Hon. Daniel Hendrickson and Catherine (Holmes) Ellis. He was a merchant,—first at Freehold, then New York City. Listed as "Importer, 53 Murray, N. Y., 1858-9." About 1855 moved to Jersey City, where he is listed "Merchant, 71 Worth. House, Jersey City, 1865-66;" d. 12 June, 1875. His widow d. 26 April, 1900; both int. Maplewood Cem., Freehold. Extracts from obituaries:

"In June 1875, Mr. C. D. Throckmorton and Dr. John Vought started on a pleasure trip to California. They reached St. Louis, Mo., June 12, and stopped at the Lindell Hotel. After supper Mr. Throckmorton complained of feeling unwell and retired to his room, where Dr. Vought left him smoking a cigar. Returning half an hour afterwards, Dr. Vought found that Mr. Throckmorton had been attacked by apoplexy. He continued in a speechless state until 9 o'clock when he died. . . . He was a retired dry goods merchant of New York City and had an enviable Jersey lineage, his paternal and maternal ancestors having been in their day second to none in this illustrious commonwealth in their best qualities of public and private character. . . ."

"When but twenty years old C. D. Throckmorton joined his brother, Barberie, in carrying on the mercantile business in Freehold under the name B. & C. D. Throckmorton. In 1848 he went to New York and shortly after became a member of the firm Cunningham, Frost & Throckmorton, which subsequently was changed to Throckmorton, Diggs & Co. In 1870 he retired from the firm and from business upon a well and honestly earned competency. He was a thoroughly first class business man, and had been unusually successful in all his business enterprises. He was strictly upright in all his business transactions and his word was as good a his bond in any pledge or promise made by him. He held several public positions in Jersey City which had been his home for twenty years. He was Director of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Hudson Co.—an office of high trust and responsibility, and in the discharge of his duties he always had the respect and confidence of the public."

He adhered to the Presbyterian faith and was a supporter of the church of that denomination at Shrewsbury."

A correspondent writes:

"The Red Bank, N. J., Throckmortons have been well-to-do for many years, and for a long time during the "Elegant Eighties and Glorious Nineties" the younger members of the family living there were leaders in outdoor sports, particularly in ice boat racing on the Shrewsbury River during the winters. They lived well, owned and drove and rode fine horses, and were good all-around sportsmen. Due to their activities in outdoor sports and pastimes, the village of Red Bank was constantly on the first page of the New York City daily papers, and many interesting articles on the family in general appeared in the N. Y. Morning Sun during the late Charles A. Dana's editorship."

"Onancock, Va., Aug. 23, 1864.

Maj. Frank J. White,
Provost-Marshal, Eastville, Va.

Major: Reliable information has been received by a refugee just from Northumberland Co., Va., that five small-class vessels are now fitted out, with about 300 men, with avowed purpose of making a raid on Tangier and Smith Islands or other points on the shore. I would ask that Lieu. Throckmorton (Joseph F. Throckmorton), with his sloop, be sent back at once to cruise in this sound, to report to me that I may increase his force.

Respectfully,
J. W. Strong, Lieu. and Assistant Provost-Marshal."

HON. JOB THROCKMORTON

Delaware, O.; m. 7 Sept., 1854, Catherine Coleman White; b. Miami Co., O., 10 Dec., 1834, dau. of Samuel Tinbrook and Elizabeth Rogers (White) * White. He was a Republican, Methodist, farmer and stock raiser. In 1857 he removed to Coffey Co., Kansas, about 1½ m. from the present town of Burlington, but in those pioneer days the Indians still roamed the plains. He was county trustee under the Territorial Government, also county commissioner and county clerk for four years. He served two terms in the State Legislature. The longest single span bridge in Kansas, 216 ft., is called "Throckmorton Bridge" in honor of Job Throckmorton, who was instrumental in having it constructed. He d. 28 March, 1902; his wife d. at the home of her son, George, 28 Feb., 1923. Both charter members of Burlington M. E. Church. His obt. says in part:

"No man ever lived in our city who was more prominent in the affairs of Burlington and Coffey Co., than Job Throckmorton. He was honored with various county offices and represented this county in the Legislature two terms. Up to a few years ago there was not a man in the county but what knew Mr. Throckmorton. He was a kind-hearted, liberal man, who was always helping people, and we do not believe he had an enemy in the world. At all times and under all conditions he was a thorough, refined gentleman and had a disposition as mild and kind as one could have. When the heat of the campaign was on and he was actively engaged in politics, we never heard him utter an unkind word against a person. He was a man of remarkable ability and was a power in political battles. It was always a pleasure to be with him. He was a member of the Odd Fellows for many years, and his funeral was conducted by this organization." Res. Burlington, Kansas.

436. JOB THROCKMORTON (Joseph 200, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. near Waynesburg, Pa., 17 Dec., 1809. Began teaching rural school at the age of fifteen and taught several 12-week terms at $1.50 per pupil. At the age of eighteen he became apprenticed for four years to learn the tailor business under Robert Ledwith, of Waynesburg and, according to the custom of the time, received no wages. He bought his first sewing machine after he had tailored for fifteen years, paying $108 for it. He m. 14 Feb., 1837, Sarah Fry; b. 13 Feb., 1816, dau. of George and Elizabeth (Beckinbaugh), of German and Dutch descent. They moved to their permanent home on Smith Creek, near Oak Forest, 5 April, 1846, where he acquired 119 acres of valuable land for $1,000.* From that time on he devoted himself to farming, working at his trade only when he had the time and during bad weather. When nineteen years old he united with the M. E. Church, and after moving to his farm attended Class Meeting at the Old Stone School House, near where Fairall M. E. Church was later built. He was steward and trustee in this church until his death. When he became too feeble to attend to church business others did the work for him and left his name on the board. At the age of eighty he built a haystack and a year later cut and made the first long trousers for a grandson. He was a man of native force of character and refinement. In the very beginning of this genealogical work he rendered the compiler valuable aid, so carefully, kindly and cheerfully given, in his fair handwriting, without a mistake or erasure!

The event of his death was noticed in a local paper as follows:

"Job Throckmorton died at his home near Oak Forest, Pa., 7 June, 1898, in his 90th year. About a week before he was injured by a cow knocking him down and running over him, and owing to his advanced age the injuries proved fatal. Neatness, kindness, justice and goodness were his eminent qualities. He never quarreled or lawed with his neighbors, and gave liberally toward every good cause. He was a lifelong Democrat, and held most of the offices in Franklin tp. Greatly interested in school matters he served as school director for many years. He was a useful man, a loving and indulgent husband and father. He lived to be the oldest member of Fairall M. E. Church and for half a century ministers enjoyed the hospitality of his home. His funeral was attended by the largest number of people ever witnessed, perhaps, upon an occasion of this kind in that community; int. in Fairall Cemetery. A good man has departed from this life to receive his eternal reward and his loss will be deeply felt."

Sarah Fry Throckmorton, d. at the home of her son Joseph, 8 March, 1900. "Services were held at Fairall Church, where she had worshipped through her long life and where she was laid by the side of her husband in the cemetery, awaiting the grand call when the dead in Him shall rise." (Obt.)

Began their married life in Greene Co., Pa., where three of their children were born and the eldest died and was buried in the "Thomas Hill Cemetery," near Waynesburg. The last of March, 1854, they moved to Meigs Co., Ohio, where they remained two years. Their daughter, Elizabeth, died there and was buried at Jerseyville. 1st April, 1856, they removed to Sidney, Iowa, where the rest of their lives were spent. He was instrumental in constructing many of the first buildings in Sidney. He was also one of Sidney's first school teachers and served as mayor for many years. His health was impaired while in the Civil War and he received a pension of $20 per month for several years before his death, which occurred 28 Feb., 1905. Excerpt from obituary:

"When the tocsin of war was sounded Job Throckmorton felt that the honor of his country must be upheld, so 10 Oct., 1861, he enlisted in Co. F, 15th Iowa Inf., and served during the war. He rose from private to first sergeant; March 1862 promoted 2d lieu. and in May, 1st lieu. Sept., 1862, captain. Mustered out 3 Aug., 1865. He was in 41 skirmishes and battles. Shiloh, Tenn., was the first hard battle he participated in, 6th and 7th April, 1862. Gen. A. S. Johnson, who was leading the Confederate forces, was shot and mortally wounded on the evening of the 6th; this turned the tide and the Confederate army was on the next day repulsed and made a hasty retreat, leaving the body of their commander on the field of battle. Later in the evening burial of the dead began and the body of Gen. Johnson was interred beside those who wore the blue, near Shiloh Church. Capt. Throckmorton took part in the siege of Corinth, Miss., the second battle of Corinth and the seige of Vicksburg; thence to the seige of Atlanta, Georgia. In one of the hard fought battles there he was slightly wounded, 28 July, 1864, and later received another wound. From Atlanta he went with Sherman on that memorable march to the sea, and helped take Savannah; from there across South Carolina and into North Carolina, to the final surrender at Crab Apple. He was in command of the regiment several times: commanding a battle at Savannah, Ga., and Benton Post, N. C. That was the last battle he was in. He frequently saw Gen. Grant and was personally acquainted with Gen. Sherman. At the close of the war he was with the Union troops that marched down Pennsylvania Ave., Washington City for inspection by Pres. Andrew Johnson and a staff of the leading federal generals. After receiving his discharge he went to Pa. to transact some personal business, but in Sept., 1865, returned to Sidney, Iowa, where he engaged in the furniture and undertaking business for about eighteen years, retiring near 1893. After that he worked at the carpenter trade part of the time. He was a member of the G.A.R. and a charter member of Frontier Lodge, No. 93, I.O.O.F. Member of the M.E. church seventy-one years and secretary for nearly forty years. He was a gentleman of the old school, quiet and unostentatious. But his army comrades say a braver man never donned a uniform." (Sidney Herald).

Mrs. Throckmorton d. 28 Feb., 1906, just one year after her husband's death and almost at the same hour. Both int. Sidney Cemetery. Thus closed two long and useful lives fraught with many kindly deeds. His autograph is from a letter to the compiler, 1900, at the age of eighty-one years, when it was to him as to the prophets of old: "My shadows are falling long upon my pathway, but they are all pointing toward the morning." Res. Sidney, Iowa.

451. JAMES R. THROCKMORTON JR. (James 202, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Pipes Run, four miles west of Waynesburg, Pa., 14 May, 1830. Attended Crouse School two and a half miles west of Waynesburg,—a log school house with slabs for seats; later a frame school was built at the mouth of Pipes Run, within half a mile of his boyhood home. He has described his own career in a letter to the compiler, 1899, as follows:

"I united with the Hopewell M. E. Church in 1845. Am a Democrat to the hub. Married Hannah Stewart, 24 April, 1852; dau. of —— Catherine (Thomas), b. 27 March, 1834. The same spring of our marriage we moved to Hard Scrabble* and remained there until Feb., 1853, when we went back to the old farm where I was born. Taught the Scott School the winter of 1855, and all my pupils bore the name of Scott! The next winter I taught the Grimes School, two and a half miles southeast of Hopewell Church. In the spring of 1856, with two of my brothers-in-law (Jesse Braddock and John W. Cole), put up a sawmill at the mouth of Claylick Run, which we operated in partnership about two years. Then I bought them out and run it alone about ten months, then sold it. Was drafted into the army in 1863, but paid a substitute $300 to take my place. Shortly afterwards I moved to Wayne Co., Ill., where I remained a little over one year, raising a crop of tobacco. Then went to Mendota, Ill., in the spring of '64. And in the fall of the same year moved to Fremont Co., Iowa, where I bought a broom machine and made brooms two winters and rigged up a team and broke prairie two summers at three dollars per acre. In 1874, times being hard from the effect of demonetization and contracting the currency, I, with thousands of others, went to California, but in the fall returned to Fremont Co., Iowa, purchased a farm northwest of Sidney and opened a nursery, raising all kinds of plants and trees. My wife died Dec. 17, 1885. I married 2d, Catherine Lyvers, July 13, 1886, Van Buren Co., Iowa. In the spring of 1887, I removed to Weeping Water, Cass Co., Nebraska, where I farmed for seven years. Then returned to Sidney, Iowa, where I again engaged in selling trees and nursery stock."

Mr. Throckmorton d. at his home, Sidney, Iowa, 2 April, 1924, in his 94th year. 461. JOHN THROCKMORTON (Morford 203, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. near Waynesburg, Pa., 9 Nov., 1826. When in his teens he united with the Hopewell M. E. Church. His first considerable journey into the world was made at the age of fifteen, driving hogs from Waynesburg to Baltimore, Md., for forty cents a day and no dinner; his next long trip was to Iowa and Mo. in 1847, but without the above munificent wages. He taught a few terms of rural school; m. 18 Sept., 1849, Nancy Elizabeth Lazear, at the home of the bride's uncle, Hon. Jesse Lazear, Waynesburg. She b. 25 May, 1828, dau. of Francis and Mary (Crow), of Richhill tp. She was a young lady of unusual and striking beauty, with particularly fine black eyes. Previous to his marriage he was engaged in a general merchandise store in Waynesburg, which he closed in 1855, as in March of that year he went to Iowa where he entered land for himself, his father and brother Samuel. The following year he and his brother-in-law, Michael Lazear, again went to Iowa where they built a house on his land. He returned to Pa. and April 1, 1856, started with his family by way of Wheeling, W. Va., on the long and tedious trip by steamboat to Chariton, Iowa, reaching their new home April 17. When gold was discovered at Pike's Peak, he started for Colorado with an ox-team in the spring of 1860, returning the same fall, improved in health but not enriched in gold.

At the beginning of the Civil War he moved his family to Chariton, and enlisted 11 Aug., 1862, in Co. E, 34th Iowa Inf., serving as Commissary Sergeant until his discharge 3 July, 1862, at Vicksburg, Miss. Returned to his farm and was busy with his nursery, stock-raising, elevator, lumber, grain, and a general merchandise store in the town of Derby, located one half mile away; a very busy and industrious man as the owner of 1400 acres of land and such varied financial interests would need be! He was one of the pioneer orchardists of Lucas Co., and built by subscription the first school house in the township on his own farm. He was of fine personal appearance, tall and well formed, with a commanding voice and presence. Of his eleven children all grew to adultship except one infant daughter; to these children he gave as good education as the times afforded, often having five in college at one time. Both he and his wife were earnest and devout Christians; but she, owing to her crippled condition from rheumatism, was unable to attend church services, being confined to her chair and bed the last thirty-five years of her life, which ended 27 April, 1906. He was a faithful member and loyal supporter of the Derby M. E. Church, both financially and by his presence, up to the time of his death, 2 May, 1907. Res. Waynesburg, Pa., until 1856, then Derby, Iowa.

467. DR. WILLIAM SIMPSON THROCKMORTON (Morford 203, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. near Waynesburg, Pa., 2 March, 1838. Like his brothers and sisters he received his early education at the Crouse district school. He was a teacher for a short time; later pursued his studies in Allegheny City and was graduated at Waynesburg College, 1861. The class was broken up on account of the Civil War, but he received his degree, with his classmates, after the war closed. Read medicine in the office of Dr. D. W. Braden in Waynesburg for four years, then entered Jefferson Medical College, Phila., from which he received his degree in 1865. He located at Nineveh, Pa., where he spent forty-two years of his life constantly engaged in the arduous duties of his profession. He was a man of marked energy of character—a quality which showed itself in the vigorous support he rendered in church and religious matters, no less successful than his professional life. He joined the Hopewell M. E. Church at the age of fifteen and was an official member of the M. E. church from 1853 until his death. He was not only a physician but a missionary among the people of his community, and did more than any other man in building up and improving the town of Nineveh. To him belongs the credit for the erection of the first M. E. church in the village, dedicated June 6, 1881. It was known for years as "Dr. Throckmorton's Church." He was its first S. S. Supt., also steward and trustee from the time it was organized* until his removal from the village twenty-eight years later. His wife was a devoted and active worker in all its departments, and his daughter was organist until her marriage. He was a leading member of both County and State Med. Socs., holding the office of corresponding sec. and president. In 1872 and 1876 he took post-graduate work at Bellevue Med. Coll., N. Y., and in 1904 attended Phila. Polyclinic. He was a Mason and Odd Fellow; delegate to the general conference of the M. E. church held in Baltimore several years before his death. He was a small, graceful man, full of vitality, quick of movement, of pronounced religious opinions, of marked ability and scholarly attainments,—a persistent student all his life. He m. Caroline M. Hill, 1 May, 1866, at her home near Waynesburg; b. 24 Oct., 1842, dau. of Jesse and Maria (Hoskinson) Hill. She was graduated at Waynesburg College in the same class with her husband.

* It was organized with five members: Dr. Throckmorton and wife, John Van Cleve and wife, and Mrs. Theodore Parkinson.

In Oct., 1907, Dr. Throckmorton removed from Nineveh to Canonsburg, Pa., to practice his profession in partnership with his son, Dr. Charles B., who was in poor health. In anticipation of the change he had erected there a large double house for both families. His wife contracted a cold which developed into pneumonia and she d. suddenly, 27 Oct., 1907, at the home of her son in Canonsburg, never having seen the inside of her own new home. Int. Simpson Cem.,* near Swarts, Pa. "Her gentle disposition and kind manner endeared her to every one, and her unexpected death shocked and saddened the whole community."

Dr. Throckmorton m. 2d, in Detroit, Mich., 6 July, 1909, Lydia Smith, a graduate nurse of Cincinnati Hospital Training School; b. Cincinnati, O., 18 March, 1868, dau. of Perry C. and Martha (Rutan). His health failed about 1916 and he d. 4 April, 1918, aged 80 years. He had an extensive practice and was widely known in Western Pa., as a leading and gifted physician, and ranked among the foremost and best, being engaged in his profession continuously for more than fifty years. The funeral services were held in the Canonsburg M. E. Church, conducted by six ministers,—four of whom had served at different periods as pastors of the Nineveh M. E. church during his membership there, and the other two had been his pastors at Canonsburg. "In the home Dr. Throckmorton was a kind and devoted husband and an indulgent father; in the practice of his profession he was 'the beloved physician'; as a citizen of the town and county he was patron of whatever was good." He was greatly interested in this family history and gave much assistance in the research work. His widow removed to her kindred. Res. Nineveh, Pa., 1865-1907; then Canonsburg, Pa.

860. I. JESSIE, b. 23 Sept., 1867; educated in Nineveh schools and Waynesburg Coll.; m. Dr. Thomas Robinson Kerr, 25 June, 1895, ceremony by his father, Rev. N. P. Kerr, of the M. E. church; b. West Elizabeth, Pa., 25 June, 1868, son of Rev. Nathaniel P. and Emma Josephine (Robinson) Kerr. His father b. 10 March, 1835, Freedom, Pa.; d. 16 Oct., 1924, Pittsburgh, Pa.; m. 1864, Emma J. Robinson, of Freedom, who d. 1912. Dr. Thos. R. Kerr attended Waynesburg Coll., and was graduated in medicine from the Univ. of Pittsburgh, Medical Dept., March 1892. 468. ELIPHALET REED THROCKMORTON (Morford 203, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. near Waynesburg, Pa., 19 May, 1840. While still a youth he decided to be a teacher some day; attended Waynesburg College a few years, and later took a course in what was then known as "Iron City Business College," Pittsburgh. Returning to his native county, in accordance with his boyish resolutions, he began teaching in the rural schools and continued in this work for more than twenty years. The good accomplished during that time in creating an interest in all true culture and raising the educational standard in the community cannot be estimated. The era of the old log school house, with its long board seats and writing desks, had not yet passed, nor the familiar but barbarous practice of whipping. He was able to abolish corporal punishment in his educational work and accomplished many other reforms. He was considered such a superior teacher that the citizens would club together to increase his salary in order to retain his services and parents would send their children from other districts to obtain the benefit of his instructions. He m. Samantha J. Hill, 17 Oct., 1866; b. near Waynesburg, 30 July, 1847, dau. of Thomas and Nancy (Roseberry) Hill, of "Hill Farm." They began housekeeping in a new frame house he had built on his father's farm a short distance north of the home where he was born. But in 1874 moved into the old home to better care for his father's declining years and assist in the management of his farm and business interests. Upon the death of his father ten years later he purchased the homestead—the birthplace of the family—and there resided until he retired from active business in 1914. He then turned the old home place over to his son Howard, and removed to the newly purchased "Hill Farm," two miles west of Waynesburg and adjoining the farm on which he was born. Mrs. Throckmorton's great-grandfather, John Hill, had founded his home on this tract of land previous to the American Revolution. It was inherited by his son Samuel Hill, and passed by inheritance from Samuel to his son, Thomas Hill, father of Mrs. Throckmorton. It was later owned by her brother-in-law, Samuel W. Scott, whose executors sold it to Mr. Throckmorton.

In the autumn of 1916 the Throckmortons celebrated their golden wedding anniversary by an extended western trip visiting friends and relatives in various parts of Illinois and Iowa. He d. at his home, 12 June, 1924, after several months of failing health; int. Green Mount Cem., Waynesburg. He was a quiet, unassuming, but very observing country gentleman; industrious and intelligent, honest and upright in his dealings with others. A member of the Throckmorton M. E. Church and constant in attendance with his family. He lived for his home, his church, the schools and his community. He was a man of excellent judgment and common sense and took an unselfish interest in his fellow-man. He was counselor to his neighbors and frequently chosen executor of wills. His widow, a woman of singular beauty and loveliness, still lives in the home with her eldest daughter. Res. Waynesburg, Pa., R. D. 4.

864. I. NANCY HILL, b. 24 Feb., 1868; united with the Throckmorton M. E. Church at the age of fourteen; graduated from the country schools at the age of twelve, and from Waynesburg College, 1890. She was a teacher in the rural schools for several years, but in 1905 began teaching in the Waynesburg public schools. Two years later became a teacher in the High School, where she remained for several years, or until the increasing age of her parents made it necessary for her to be at home. She is unmarried.

867. IV. THOMAS HOWARD, b. 19 Dec., 1881.

471. AUSTIN HALL THROCKMORTON (Barnes 205, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 21 Jan., 1821; m. at New Brunswick, N. J., 11 Aug., 1846, Jeannette Crawford Owens, dau. of William; Rev. Wm. Roberts officiating. He was a robust looking man, about five feet seven in height and stocky built. A nephew writes:

"Uncle Austin was a fine character and a rugged specimen of manhood. He was a master Iron Molder and Foundry man, and people engaged in the same line of work used to come from all over the country to talk with him about his trade and to see the wonderful castings that he made. His specialty was marine hardware and his firm, "Jackson & Throckmorton" (his cousin James L. Jackson), New York City.* Among the notable buildings they erected were: Harper Bros. Printing House, Franklin Square, N. Y., the Railroad Station, Rutland, Vt., Wilson House, North Adams, Mass., etc. My brother was surprised the first time he attended a lecture in the Lowell Institute, Boston (part of Mass. Inst. Tech.), to see the orchestra chairs in the auditorium stamped with the name of the firm "Jackson & Throckmorton"! The firm made a lot of money and soon after the Civil War dissolved partnership and Uncle Austin retired to Eatontown, N. J., where he built himself a house not far from where his brothers, Jackson and Job, had theirs. In addition to all this wonderful work along commercial lines, he was a great supporter of the Methodist Church, not only of the one at Eatontown (where he was a member for over fifty years) but also at Tinton Falls. He was one of the founders of the popular Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, on the Jersey coast, and his name is on the Founders Stone."

His capacity for work was so great that it was said of him "he could do the work of six men." John Roach, the celebrated ship-builder of Chester, Pa., learned his trade with the "Jackson & Throckmorton" firm. Austin H. Throckmorton d. at his home, Eatontown, N. J., 5 March, 1889; int. in family plot at Rumson, N. J. His widow d. in Brooklyn, N. Y., 14 June, 1907; int. beside her husband. Res. New York City and Eatontown, N. J.

473. JACKSON CLAYTON THROCKMORTON (Barnes 205, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 11 June, 1825; blacksmith and horseshoer by trade at Eatontown, N. J. He m. Lydia Anne Wolcott, 25 July, 1854; b. 25 June, 1834, dau. of Henry W. and Sybilla (Potter). A severe case of scarlet fever in childhood affected his hearing, which later in life became so aggravating that he made no attempt to hear conversation but mastered the art of lip reading at which he was very proficient. He was passionately fond of little children and, though no church member, "had great respect for the Bible, the church and its ministry." He predeceased his wife dying 16 Oct., 1902; int. Eatontown, N. J. His widow res. West Orange, N. J.

"She was one of the fairest of the Throckmortons and a great beauty, with charming manners and many accomplishments, practically the last of her most interesting family," writes one who knew her years agone. Res. unmarried, with the widow of one of her brothers in Brooklyn, N. Y.

475. WILLIAM NATHAN THROCKMORTON (Barnes 205, Job 94, Job 32, Joseph 18, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 7 Nov., 1834. His widowed mother removed to New Brunswick, N. J., where they lived for several years, thence to New York City where his brothers, Austin and Job, were already established in business. His early education was supervised by Prof. Seneca Durand, prominent educator and member of board of education, N. Y. City. He entered into commercial life with Bartholomew C. Asten (a fellow clerk in the firm with which he had started his career), forming the firm of Asten & Throckmorton in 1852, Manufacturers and Dealers in Builders Hardware. He m. in St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church, N. Y. City, 6 Oct. 1859, the beautiful Julia Ward Knapp, youngest dau. of Joshua and Maria (Francis) Knapp, and niece of Dr. John Wakefield Francis,* who gave away the bride; ceremony by Rev. Cooke, D.D.; groomsmen: Elwood Hampton and Henry Francis Knapp; bridesmaids: Eliza and Louise Knapp.

After the Civil War Mr. Throckmorton was, for several years, an active member of the old First Regiment of Artillery. Also a member of Eureka Lodge of Masons and much interested in its affairs. He retired from active business in 1876, and devoted much of his time thereafter to travel, recreation and indulgence in his favorite hobby,—fishing and hunting, in Pa. and N. Y. States. He was a devout Christian and was vestryman in St. John's Epis. Church, Park Slope, Brooklyn, for a number of years. He was a resident of Brooklyn for 38 years and d. at his residence, 1295 Bergen St., 30 April, 1908. He was fond of good literature and a devoted admirer of Sir Walter Scott, Bobby Burns, Shakespeare, Dickens and Thackeray. He was proud of his ancestry and deeply interested in the history of the family from its earliest known date down to the day of his death. He was charitable and loyal to his friends, none of whom he ever forgot. His widow passed away in her sleep, 12 Dec., 1927, at the fine old age of 97. Both int. Greenwood Cem. in the family plot. Res. Brooklyn, N. Y.

* John W. Francis, M.D., LL.D., b. N. Y. City, 1789. His father, Melchoir Francis, was a native of Germany, who settled in America about 1784. Dr. Francis was one of the most distinguished of American physicians and a man of letters; a graduate of Columbia Univ., 1809. He was distinguished for his ardent thirst for knowledge, acuteness of perception and breadth of comprehension. Graduated as a physician in 1811, he visited the renowned medical schools of Europe, and on his return to New York was appointed to a professorship in the Coll. of Phys. & Surgs. He continued his connection with that college until 1826, when he resigned, and with two colleagues, organized a new institution under the name of the Rutgers Medical College. (See National Portrait Gallery of Distinguished Americans, Vol. IV; North American Review, July 1853.)

Knapp coat of arms (Norfolk, Tuddenham, Needham and Washbrooke, Co. Suffolk) or, in chief three close helmets, sable, in base a lion passant, of the last. Crest,—An arm, embowed in armor, proper, garnished, or, that hand of the first grasping by the blade a broken sword, or, hilt and pommel of the second, with a branch of laurel, vert. Motto,—Spes nostra Deus.

The coat of arms granted to Roger de Knapp in 1540 when he was knighted by King Henry VIII, to commemorate his skill and success at a tournament held in Norfolk, England, when he unseated three knights of great skill and bravery. Roger de Knapp was an esquire as is shown by the esquires' helmets on the shield, indicating his rank and also acknowledgments of victories gained. These arms were used in 1600 by John Knapp, son of Roger de Knapp, and his son John. On good authority it is stated that the last mentioned John had three sons,—William, Nicholas and Roger Knapp, who emigrated to America, coming from Sussex, England, about 1630. The Knapps in this country are largely descended from Nicholas Knapp who settled in Watertown, Mass. Many of the descendants were prominent in military affairs. Heraldica.

877. I. JOHN WAKEFIELD FRANCIS, b. N. Y. City, 4 July, 1860; christened in St. Bartholomew's Church, 22 Feb., 1861. Began his early education at the Friend's Seminary, St. George's Churchyard, Stuyvesant Square, N. Y. City; later educated by private tutors and prepared for college at Nuremburg, Germany, where it was intended he should be fitted for the medical profession and follow in the footsteps of his mother's favorite uncle, Dr. John Wakefield Francis,* known in New York City as "The Great Physician," and who enjoyed the remarkable distinction of having three sons and a brother, all practicing physicians, associated with him. Being fond of travel and being given every opportunity to enjoy it by his father, changed his desires for a professional career as outlined by the family, so when 18 years old he persuaded his parents to allow him to take up a business career, which he did, first in Wall Street with a Stock Brokerage House, in which a relative was a partner, then in an Export Commission House, the members of which were old friends of the family, and whose business connections extended to every part of the world, and finally as a Manufacturer's Agent, during which the preliminaries took him to every part of the U.S.A. and Canada, Mexico and Central America, and later on to Europe, South America, South Africa, Australia and China, with residences in San Francisco, Boston, London, New York, and other important American cities. He was in London during the gala Jubilee of the late Queen Victoria, and during this London residence, in 1896 and 1897, he made several visits to Coughton Court and the nearby countryside of lovely Warwickshire. Sir William Throckmorton, the then head of the family, gave him most kindly reception and splendid treatment. Sir William was much interested in the American branch of the family and asked him many questions. He made frequent visits to the Continental cities, especially those in France and Italy.

He was associated with several manufacturing enterprises and during the World War was engaged in the manufacture of munitions for the Allies and for the American Government. Like his father, he was very fond of outdoor life and the various sports it afforded and when a resident of Boston was a member of several Clubs and a keen participant in riding, driving, yachting, boating and athletic events of various kinds. He retired from active business in 1922 and is living at the time this is written in the family residence in Brooklyn, where he devotes much of his time to reading, attending lectures, concerts and theatres during the winter months and enjoying the great outdoors during the rest of the year. He is a fine raconteur and his talk is picturesque with description and amusing with anecdote. Res. unm., 1295 Bergen St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

He had carefully made all preparation for his death and the care of his family. In religious belief both he and his wife accepted no creed, but were inclined to Universalism. The lines he penned to be placed on his gravestone expressed his views:

"Death ends all earthly troubles. I believe that those who have confidence in God, who have done all things well and lived well, have a foretaste of heaven on earth; the same in manner as those who properly manage their earthly affairs enjoy the temporal blessings of this life."

The widow remained on the farm with her daughter and there d. at the age of 89 years, 6 April, 1921. She was a woman of great excellence of character, and in the early days when sickness was about her and medical aid not easily secured, she willingly assisted her neighbors and friends, sitting up with the sick and caring for and relieving much suffiering with her own hands. "Judge J. L. Throckmorton was for many years one of the best known attorneys at the local bar and his absolute honesty in all matters pertaining to his profession, business and social life was widely known. His passing takes from this community one of the men who regard his profession as a sacred trust, and knew not what it was to do wrong."

Ada M. Throckmorton was a teacher from her sixteenth year until her marriage. This excerpt from a Chillicothe newspaper, published way back in the piping times of black walnut and red plush, is a notable reminder of Victorian grandure:

A Representative Woman

"Mrs. Judge J. L. Throckmorton is a representative American woman—one of those wonders of energy, capability and versatility who develop only in this free and malaria-burdened atmosphere. Not content with making a reputation for herself as one of the most accomplished housewives in Ross county, and the inventor of admirable aids to perfect cookery, she has invaded the field of art, and has now adorning her home probably the finest set of parlor furniture in Chillicothe.—a set of seven pieces made of black walnut, every part of which is elaborately and beautifully carved by her own hands, and luxuriously upholstered in finest materials, enriched with embroidered designs, the counterpart, in colors, of the designs in which the main parts of the wood are engraved. There is a platform rocker, that is a work of art. It is upholstered in cardinal plush, with old gold plush trimmings, and carved in designs of English ivy, forget-me-nots, morning glories, maiden hair fern and wild roses—the distribution of the designs over the various parts of the chair being in perfect taste." (Then follows a description of the reception chair, sofa, gentleman's chair, corner chair, window chair, foot rest). "We will venture the assertion, without a reasonable fear of contradiction, that there is not a lady in Chillicothe but would go into ecstasies over this suite of furniture and envy the owner its possession. The set is made of solid black walnut, and is chased with such original and exquisite taste, that each piece is a treasure in itself. All the wood of the various pieces is carved, not merely parts of it. The bare frames and coverings were obtained from an upholstering firm."

A far-off cousin who met Mrs. Throckmorton for the first time in 1915, said of her: "She is delightful. Though of advanced age, she is remarkably preserved, and a woman of rare grace and fine attainments." She was proud of her ancestry and rendered valuable assistance in her branch of the family. Her death occurred 2 Jan., 1917. A fragment from an obituary:

"Mrs. Ada M. Throckmorton's death came as a shock to her friends in both city and county. She was a brilliant woman of highest Christian character. Her friends, both old and young, can be numbered by the hundreds. She was the true friend and sincere adviser of the young, and her fine character made her the admiration of all. In her death the city loses one of its bright women. She was well informed on all subjects, one of the early teachers of Ross County and one of the charter members of the Century Club. But above all her intellectual attainments, her splendid womanhood will ever remain uppermost in the minds of all who knew her. . . . A large concourse of friends from all walks of life was present at her funeral to pay the last tribute to the memory of this estimable woman, whose life was one of service to her fellow-men." Res. Chillicothe, Ohio.

512. MAJOR JOHN ISAAC THROCKMORTON (Samuel 225, William 100, William 46, Job 20, Job 7, John 1), b. near Hallsville, Ohio, 20 Feb., 1832; received his education in the common school, which he regularly attended for thirteen winters, obtaining all the scholarship his instructors could impart. Samuel Yaple and his son Alfred (the latter of whom became a judge of the supreme court of Cincinnati) were among his teachers. Eventually Alfred Yaple was admitted to the bar and John I. Throckmorton, his pupil, succeeded him as a school teacher. He m. 22 Sept., 1857, the exquisitely beautiful Mary Ann Holman (known as "Mollie"); dau. of John and Catherine (Eyestone); b. 27 Aug., 1838, Kinnickinnick, O. They removed to McDonough Co., Illinois, and there jointly with his brother William, purchased a farm of 160 acres. In the autumn of 1859, he commenced the study of law in the office of Judge Thompson. The following year, 11 March, 1860, his young wife died of typhoid pneumonia, after a short illness, leaving a baby boy. This sudden event unsettled his life for a time; he suspended his legal studies, disposed of his interest in the Illinois property, returned to Ohio, and in the winter of 1860-61 taught his last school. The following autumn, having assisted in recruiting a company in his native township, he received from Gov. Tod, a commission as 2d Lieu. of Co. A, 73d Ohio Vol. Inf. Served under Gens. Rosecrans and Fremont, and in 1862 was promoted to 1st Lieu. of his company. His health soon failed and he was compelled to resign his commission. Again in 1863, the Ross Co. Militia being called upon to repel the invasion of Morgan from Ky., he received the appointment of Major of the 2d Reg., and served through the campaign. In 1865 he resumed the study of law, was admitted to the bar, and in 1867 commenced the practice of his profession with Thaddeus A. Minshall (later Judge of common pleas, 5th judicial district of Ohio). In 1873 he became law partner with Judge John M. Vanmeter, as Vanmeter & Throckmorton. April 3, 1877, he was admitted to practice in the sixth circuit. He attained considerable celebrity as a lawyer, more especially as an advocate. His politics varied with his ideas of public justice. In 1856 he was a staunch Republican, and was identified with that party until 1869, having in the previous year been a delegate from Ross Co. to the Republican State Convention. In the following year, mainly on account of the passage of the public credit bill, he severed his connection with the party, but refused to join the democracy. In 1876, however, he consented to be a delegate to the Democratic State Convention at Cincinnati. At that period the subject of the currency and finance had assumed great prominence. The advocates of paper money, among whom was Mr. Throckmorton, passed a platform in accordance with their views; but the democratic convention, subsequently held in St. Louis, adopted a hard-money platform, and in consequence of this Mr. Throckmorton, on conscientious ground, withdrew himself from the party and cast his vote and influence in favor of the Peter Cooper movement. Sept. 13, 1877, it was determined at a mass convention in Columbus, to organize a distinct party movement in the interest of labor and currency reform, and as chairman of the committee on resolutions Mr. Throckmorton was the first to designate the new organization, the "National Party." Believing in the efficacy of paper currency, to the best of his ability and judgment, and as a matter of high principle, he labored to promote the success of the national party. He never was a candidate for office though frequently solicited to allow his name to be used in convention.* He m. 2d, Margaret Alice Brown, 14 Nov., 1881, by whom no issue. Res. Columbus, O. 667. BARBERIE WOODBURN THROCKMORTON (Barberie 309, Thomas C. 142, James 71, Joseph 26, John 16, Job 7, John 1), b. Freehold, N. J., 22 March, 1843. Attended College of City of New York and was graduated at Harvard Law School. During his college course he enlisted in 22 (or 23?) N. J. Militia and served three months during the Civil War. Admitted to New York bar† and practiced law in that state until his death. He was a brilliant and talented man with a lively disposition as a writer, editor,‡ and lecturer; possessed of a fine high tenor voice and noted for his choice flow of language. He was called "The silver tongued orator of New Jersey" and made many political speeches. Member of the Congress of Authors held in Phila., Pa., July 1876, and was one of the two selected in the state of N. J., to deliver an address at Independence Hall. Among his many noted addresses are these: Schuylerville, N. Y., in honor of Burgoyne's Surrender (Centennial, 17 Oct., 1877); unveiling of the monument commemorating the Battle of Monmouth; Jersey City Memorial Centennial Celebration of the Battle of Paulus Hook, 19 Aug., 1879; memorial exercises for Pres. Garfield, Great Barrington, Mass., 26 Sept., 1881. A fragment from one of his addresses, "The Battle Rolls":

"Call the battle rolls of the American Revolution and where do you find New Jersey? Let Princeton, Monmouth, Trenton and Paulus Hook answer. Search the pages of history and find a battle among the many fought to create the great nation, in which Jerseymen did not take part, and always with honor, and on the historic page, too, read the fact that during the Revolutionary struggle New Jersey contributed more in blood and treasure, in proportion to her wealth and population, to the patriotic cause, than any other colony.

Again, no one can read the record of New Jersey and her troops in our late gigantic contest waged to secure equal justice to all men, without a quicker beating of the heart in pride. More than 90,000 men were by New Jersey sent, first and last, to the front, an

S., completing his studies at the latter place in 1875, and the same year entered the wholesale dry-goods business in New York City with his father, and to him the son owed his start in the business that claimed him for thirty-five years, 1875-1910. He was very successful and understood dry-goods merchandising as few men understand it. In 1910 he retired from mercantile activity and the same year became officially interested and engaged in banking, being made president of the Provident Institution for Savings, Jersey City,—an office of trust and responsibility. He is also a director of the N. J. Title Guarantee Trust Co., of Jersey City, and from 1912 until 1920 a member of the Hudson County Park Commission. He is a Mason; member of U. S. J., 8 Nov., 1869; educated in schools of New York City, Nantucket and New Bedford, Mass., being a member of the Cadet Corps while a High School pupil at the latter place. Attended the Polytechnic Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y., and from there went on board the School Ship "St. Mary's," from which he was graduated A.B. (Able Seaman), Oct. 1887. During his term on the "St. Mary's" he visited several places abroad,—notably Spain, Portugal and Gibraltar. He was for some time Quartermaster on the Brazilian Mail Steamer, but after having a very bad attack of fever and experiencing an extremely dangerous fire on shipboard, in which he was badly burned, in deference to his mother, he gave up the sea and secured a position on shore. After his mother's death he stayed for a time in New York and then went out with an expedition to the Klondyke in a steamship going around the Horn. He was wrecked several times on the way up to Seattle, and after arriving there it was found no provision had been made for the payment of the crew, so the ship was sold. Henry and another sailor bought a small boat, rigged it, and sailed up the Yukon River,—a most reckless performance. He spent a winter in the Klondyke but found nothing worth while and in the spring came out with 30,000 other unsuccessful gold hunters. In 1897 he again went west, and worked at a variety of things. At one time second officer on the U. S. Transport "Sherman," going out to Manila. He took the Federal Civil Service Examination for Ship Master and passed 100 per cent. He was Supt. of the B. C. Lumber Corporation Ltd., of New Westminster, B. C. Master Mariner (Sea Capt.), rank, Lieu-Commander, U.S.N.R.F., since 1919. honorary M.D. degrees from Drake University and Iowa State University. Practiced medicine at Chariton with her father until 1919, during which time was active in Infant Welfare, Public Health and State Federation of Women's Clubs; being a Judge of Babies ten years at the Iowa State Fair; a State chairman many years on the Public Health Com. of the Iowa Fed. Women's Clubs and of Iowa State Medical Society. A paper on Public Health read in Chicago before the National Public Health Assn. attracted attention of the Associated Press, being given notice not only in the U. S., but also in the Paris, France, edition of the N. Y. Herald. In 1919 she left the practice of medicine to enter the U. S. Public Health Service co-operating with the Iowa State Board of Health, in which delightful work she traveled for six years, not only over Iowa but was invited by State Boards of Health and College officials to many other states to lecture to women and girls on health problems.

In 1919 was sent as a representative of the Iowa State Board of Health to a conference of Public Health officials in New York City, where she met Elizabeth, Queen of Belgium, herself greatly interested in medicine. Thus, when the following year she was sent to Belgium as representative of the U. S. Public Health Service, she again met the Queen at the Royal Conservatory, who graciously said she remembered their meeting in N. Y. City. While in Brussels she read a paper before the Royal Institute of Public Health, that was kindly received and published later in a London paper; and was honored by being made a Vice-Pres. of that Institute. On this visit she was accorded every courtesy: Mr. Brand Whitlock, the American Ambassador, and his wife gave a tea for her in Brussels, at which she met many notables; she was a guest at the Royal Banquet at which Gen. Gorgas, M.D., was awarded the Haarben Medal,—just a few days before his untimely death. Later in London, she was a guest at the 130th Banquet of the Royal Literary Society of London, that was held in the imposing Draper's Hall, on Throgmorton Street; where she met not only the present Sir Walter Raleigh but was presented to, and dined with, the greatest men and women of English literature of to-day. On this same trip she was entertained at Coughton Court, the ancient ancestral home of the Throckmortons, a magnificent old castle with a hostess equally charming. In 1922 went abroad for pleasure, visiting the continent. Three years later again went abroad with a large party of physicians, visiting hospitals of Europe and meeting with master minds and authorities in medical science. Every possible courtesy was given on this trip. Henry, Duke of York, second son of the King of England, opened their session in London; the Lord Mayor of London, the American Ambassador Mr. Houghton, and others of the nobility gave banquets and Garden Parties. In London she, with other medical women, was invited to sit on the platform of the University of London. when Dr. William Mayo presented diplomas to the medical graduates of that famous university.

The President of France held a reception in their honor; as did the President of the Irish Free State in Dublin; and the Lord Mayors of Bristol and of Edinburgh; Lord Londonderry opened his magnificent rose garden and palatial manor for a Garden Party. The photographer happened to get a picture of Dr. Jeannette shaking hands with Lord Londonderry, which later was in the paper together with a description of her dress.

She was Pres. of the State Society of Medical Women in 1918; made a member of the American College of Physicians in 1921, at which time only six women in the U. S. were members. Member of the Writer's Club in N. Y. City. Spent a year of graduate work in Psychology in Columbia University, and a similar year in the University of Chicago, where the research work she did was incorporated in a book published by one of the professors. She m. Dr. Charles N. Dean, b. 5 March, 1879, a former classmate, 1 March, 1928, at Derby, Iowa; but as they left the church he was stricken, dying ten days later in spite of medical and hospital care, 10 March, 1928, "leaving nought but grief and pain, for promis'd joy!" One ray of sunshine alleviated this tragedy, however, as he had a daughter, Jeannette, by a previous marriage, b. 24 Sept, 1909, named by her parents for their former college friend. Dr. Jeannette is now Head of the Iowa State Medical Library, Des Moines, Iowa.

His mother died while he was an infant, and he was adopted by her sister, Mrs. Joseph A. Miller, and his name changed to Lee Charles Miller. In 1872 the Millers removed from Martinsburg to Wichita, Kansas, where he graduated at the high school in 1882, and attended the Kansas State Univ. for two years. He m. in Wichita, 21 May, 1890, Minnie Williams Viele; b. Saratoga Springs, N. Y., 28 July, 1870, dau. of Abram and Cornelia Kissam (Williams) Viele. In 1889 he removed to Salt Lake City, Utah. He is manager of Miller & Viele Farm Mortgage,—the largest business of its kind in the intermountain country. He is a member of the First Congregational Church and Society, and for twenty years was trustee of that organization. He was president of the Salt Lake Country Club at the time the present club house and golf course were erected. During the World War he was chairman of the Salt Lake City Council of Defense, which was made up of the leaders of the community. The spring of 1929 he and his wife made a trip abroad. They have both been enthusiastic big game hunters for over a quarter of a century, and recently presented their trophies numbering over twenty-five to the State of Utah. The picture shows a group of Mountain Sheep just as they appear in a big glass case prominently located in the State Capitol Building. The Millers furnished the specimens and had them mounted by Jonas Bros., very distinguished taxidermists, of Denver, Col. The State of Utah built the glass case, painted the picture, assembled the rocks and made the nature mounting, at a cost of about $1200. Mr. Miller writes:

"We have just finished our new home 'Up Yonder,' built especially for our needs. It is English in type, located about 500 feet above the business part of Salt Lake and about 20 feet above the street on the side of a bench. The old English Weather Cock, which an iron worker in Salisbury, England, made for us, is quite a feature on the crest of the roof. We found one on an old Norman Tower, 800 years old at Broadchalk, near Salisbury, and an iron worker went out and climbed up the tower, took the measures of the old Weather Cock and made a duplicate for us, shipping it to Salt Lake, via the Panama Canal and San Francisco." An Iowa critic says of it: "Dr. Throckmorton's philosophy is a bit old-fashioned, but it is healthy, and among the 3,000 Indiana poets he deserves the place he has up near the head of the procession." Here is the way he looks at life:

"When the world's a-goin' crooked,
Or it looks that way to you—
Somehow seems to be a tangle
To 'most ever'thing you do;
When you start out of a mornin'
With your luck a-runnin' wrong,
Then the birds along your pathway
Have a harshness in their song,
And the grass though soft as velvet,
You will sort o' stumble through.
Sich times, if you want things better,
Friend, it's mostly up to you.

. . . . .

'Tain't hard smilin' with the sunshine,
But it's durin' stormy spells,
When our weary feet are slippin'
That the stuff what's in us tells.
No,—you won't have flowers allus
In the paths you travel through;
Still, if you would have things better,
Friend, it's mostly up to you."

EARLY THROCKMORTONS* IN VIRGINIA

KELLAM (KELLEME) THROCKMORTON, gentleman, set sail from Blackwell, England, 19 Dec., 1606; reached Cape Henry, Va., 26 April, 1607. Died the sixe and twentieth day. Many others perished from the hardships endured.—Strickland: Queens of England.

The Muster of John Throckmorton:

JOHN THROCKMORTON, aged 24 years in y^e^ William and Thomas, 1613. China Boyse aged 26 years in the George in May, 1617. Servants: Edward Sparshott aged 31 yeares in the Seafloure 1621; Francis Downing aged 24 years in the Returne 1624, also Ellis Ripping aged 23 yeares in the Returne 1624.—Hotten: Original Lists of Emigrants who went to America 1600-1700, 2nd ed.

JOHN THROCKMORTON (not of titled descent) aged about 18 years in 1618 arrived in Virginia in the ship William and Thomas. He was a grandson of Briget Pray, who bore all the expenses of his conveyance to Virginia.—(Neill: Virginia Vitusta, p. 102). No further record found of him or of his descendants.

JOHN THROGMORTON living in Virginia at the eastern shore, Febr: 16, 1623 (i.e. 1623/24). After the Indian Massacre in 1624. "Liste of the Living and Dead in Virginia Febr: 16th, 1626: John Throgmorton." (Probably the same as one of the above. Ed.)

SIR WILLIAM THROCKMORTON of Tortsworth (son of Sir Thomas) owned a plantation in Virginia as early as 1618/19. His name is signed to the Third Charter of King James to the Treasurer & Company for Virginia, May 7, 1620. Capt. John Smith in his Generall Historie, pp. 43, 44, gives the name of "William Throgmorton among the first Planters of Va."

MR. HENRY THROCKMORTON'S Plantations in Virginia, mentioned Oct. 16, 1629.—W. G. Stannard: Va. Col. Rec., p. 54.

ROBERT THROCKMORTON of Virginia, planter, deposed Oct. 20, 1640, aged 35. He is brother to Thomas Throgmorton of London, Merchant.—Gen. & Bi. Rec. of N. Y., Vol. 47.

* It seems that only one man bearing this name came to New England,—John Throckmorton, in the ship Lyon, 1630/1. Though the New England Hist. & Gen. Reg., Vol. 3, p. 90, 1849 records that: "Mr. George Throckmorton took the oath of ffreeman at Salem, Mass., 18 May, 1631," but nothing more is heard of him and he is probably confused with John Throckmorton. Savage and other authorities consider John as the one who arrived at this time (Hutchinson: Hist. Mass., 371). Dr. J. E. Stillwell, a descendant through John and Alice (Stout) Throckmorton and a noted genealogist of N. Y. City, writes (Jan. 18, 1930):

"I have always been of the opinion and am still, that Go., Geo. and George are erroneous readings of Jo., Jno. and John Throckmorton. As George is a name that never appears among the descendants of John of R. I. and New Jersey I do not intend to recede from my contention that it was a John and not a George Throckmorton who came in the ship Lyon with Roger Williams and that it was this John Throckmorton who founded the family which settled in New Jersey. The fact that John Throckmorton abided with us for many years and that George Throckmorton disappeared at once and that John Throckmorton was commonly called under the plain yet distinctive appellation of Mr., the title with which he arrived, and that he was lastingly the associate of Roger Williams, makes specious all arguments to the contrary—at least from my standpoint."

THE VIRGINIA THROCKMORTONS

The English ancestry of the Virginia Throckmortons was established in 1767, when John (2017), eldest son of Robert and Mary (Lewis) Throckmorton, of Virginia, fell heir to the greater portion of the estate, real and personal, of his father's cousin, Robert Throckmorton, of "Hael Western," Huntingdonshire, England. John went to England, secured the estate and while in that country obtained a confirmation of his family arms (Wm. & Mary Quart. Hist. Mag., 5). The long line of unbroken ancestry follows:

I. JOHN DE THROCKMORTON, 1339; m. Agnes, dau. Sir Rich. Abberbury.

II. THOMAS THROCKMORTON, their son; m. Agnes, dau. Sir Alexander Besford, and had,—

VIII. ROBERT THROCKMORTON, of Ellington, Co. Hunts., living Jan. 1613; m. Elizabeth, dau. John Pickering. Excerpt from a "Story of Witchcraft":† "In 1589, Nov. 10th, a dau. of Robert Throckmorton, gent., of Warboyse, Co. Hunts., ten years old, was seized with what we would now call epileptic fits. Old Alice Samuel, a neighbor, wife of a tenant on adjacent lands, came to see the child, whereupon the child pointed to her saying: "Did you ever see one more like a witch than she is?" . . . Two days later the child remaining ill, the parents sent to Dr. Barrow, a skillful water-doctor at Cambridge, who pronounced the child's body to be in good temper and asked if there was no sorcery of witchcraft suspected. A month later two elder sisters fell ill and cried out that Mother Samuel had bewitched them and would kill them all. A month later still, a younger sister was attacked, and soon after, Miss Joan, the eldest dau., 15 years old. Then the female servants were likewise seized, and cried out to "burn Mother Samuel, as she will kill them all." Mrs. Samuel was invited to visit the children, but refused. She had before promised to come if she could be of service, though she "was up to her chin in water, and though she lost some of her best blood in their service." About a month later Lady Cromwell came to see the children and comfort the parents. As Mother Samuel's husband was tenant of Sir Henry Cromwell, she could not refuse the Lady's demand that she come. The children grew worse than before. Many scholars, the minister of the crown, and other worthies, exercised themselves about the matter. The father held out for a long time against the "doctors," "divines" and "Ladys," but finally consented that the case be brought before the Bishop and investigated by the justices of the peace at Buckden. Lady Cromwell meantime had died (1592). They examined Dame Samuel, who with her dau. Agnes, was sent to Huntingdon gaol. Tests were made of their guiltiness and reported at the trial, 9 Jan., 1592/3. The children referred to: Mary, Jane, Grace, Joan, and Elizabeth. Dame Samuel and her husband and daughter were indited for bewitching unto death Lady Cromwell, contrary to God's law, and again

Mr. Standard makes him a member of Vestry of Ware, 1677, if so he moved from that parish to Petsworth during the year, since he is recorded as being present at a Vestry meeting June 14, 1677 and Oct. 6, 1677; made Church Warden same year. He gave to the church at Petsworth Parish in Oct., 1679, "a horse and man for 5 months, and 9 bbls. of corn, and 4 bbls. of meal." Again, in Dec., 1679, he gave "1 lb. powder and 3 lbs. of shot for expedition against Indians," and subscribed "for support of the soldiers which the parish supplied (1 out of every 35 inhabitants)." His name is signed to the "Address of the Magistrates & Militia Officers of Gloucester Co., March 16, 1701/2" (Calendar of State Papers, Colonial Period). He m. Frances Cooke, 1690, dau. of Hon. Mordecai† and Frances (Ironmonger) Cooke; d. July 1737; obituary printed in Virginia Gazette:

"Mr. Gabriel Throckmorton died in Gloucester County July 1737; many years Justice of the Peace and Sheriff. A gentleman of unblemished reputation, just in all of his dealings, a kind husband, an indulgent parent, a good neighbor, and for his valuable qualities, the loss of him is much regretted."

His father-in-law, Hon. Mordecai Cooke, received a grant of 1174 acres on Ware River, Va., 1650, called "Mordecai Mount"; this land descended to the Throckmorton family. The old historic church of Ware Parish is built on a portion of this land which was donated to the parish by the Throckmortons. The exact date of the creation of this parish is unknown, but it was before 1723. Many of the Throckmortons have been vestrymen of Ware Parish. After donating part of the land to this church the name of "Mordecai Mount" was changed to "Church Hill," and descended to the Taliaferro family, whose maternal ancestor was a Throckmorton.

"Albion Throckmorton inherited lands* on York River from his brother Robert; was a processioner in First Precinct of Petsworth Parish with Thomas Dickerson in 1709, "to begin at Clay Bank Creek, on Bennett's Creek and so across to Ware Parish." April 29, 1701, Albion Throckmorton signed with numerous others against "transubstantiation." In Oct. 1710 he was elected to Vestry and Church Warden. His name appears in Vestry for last time in 1718, when "Mr. John Washington was elected to Vestry vice Mr. Throckmorton, deceased." In 1718, John Throckmorton, apparently his son, was appointed processioner of same precinct, and made member of Vestry and Church Warden in 1720. In 1735 Capt. Jno. Smith, "The Lawyer," from same precinct is elected to Vestry vice Jno. Throckmorton, deceased. In 1763 Jno. Throckmorton (presumably son of above John) was made processioner of same precinct. But this is the only time his name occurs, and it is presumed that he moved out of the parish and sold his land in this precinct.

Whom the above married is unknown, but in Abingdon Church Register are the following: "Mrs. Elizabeth Throckmorton d. 1744 at Mr. Burwell's" "Alice Stone of Widow Ann Throckmorton, bp. 1745." And "Billy, slave of Madam Throckmorton's Estate, 1748."

On account of close proximity of first precinct of Petsworth Parish to Mr. Burwell's home (Carter Creek) it is highly probable that the above were wives of Albion and John mentioned above. From this it seems that Albion d. 1718 and had Elizabeth ——, d. 1744, as wife, and probably daughter Jane, wife of John Robins, and son John, d. 1733, m. perhaps, Ann ——, living 1745, and had son John, who apparently left parish in 1763. These last two Johns, son and grandson of Albion, have never been mentioned in any history of the family. It would be interesting to know if they left issue."

* "In 1637 Robt. Throckmorton patented a tract of land in the county of Charles River, "The White Marsh being in the middle of said land." The Co. of Charles River, afterward called York, included both sides of York River, and the grant was thought to be "White Marsh" in Gloucester Co., but in the will of Robt. his nephew and ultimate heir of his estate, he gives to his brother Albion, "All my plantations in Gloucester Co., upon York River in Virginia," and since it is well known that Albion's plantations were in the lowest (1st) precinct of Petsworth Parish, between the Clay Bank (now Aberdeen) Creek, and the present main road to Clay Bank Wharf, it is highly probable that this was the land granted in 1637."—*Two Families in Virginia: Cooke and Booth, by Dr. Wm. His inventory, 1781(?) is quite lengthy and evidently incomplete. His three half-brothers were taken to England by their mother just before the Revolution and one of them, Sir Charles Wade Thornton, (d. 1854) became a lieutenant-general in the English Army. (*Va. Ware Parish, Gloucester Co., Va., 20 Dec., 1731 (F.B.); m. about 1752, Rebecca Richardson, dau. of William; m. 2d, Elizabeth Cooke, dau. of John and Elizabeth (Lee) Cooke, of Gloucester Co. (F.B.). According to a manuscript left by Mrs. Lucy Ann Page (dau. of Richard and Martha Throckmorton Jones) "he removed for a time to the Western Portion of the Colony" (probably "Roxton" in the present Jefferson Co.), but after the death of his first wife returned to Gloucester Co. He surveyed a plot of land lying in Gloucester Co., Ware Neck on North River, Nov. 19 & 20, 1754 (Wm. & Mary Coll. Quar., Vol. 10). His cousin, Robert Throckmorton, Esq., of "Hail Western," Huntingdonshire, England, died in 1767, and left a large portion of his estate to this John Throckmorton. A letter to the father of John notifying him of the fact, dated "London, 12 Sept., 1767":

"Sir:

The chief purport of this is to enclose you a line from Mr. Baily of Huntingdonshire, informing us that your namesake of Hailweston in said county died the fifth instance & by will had given a good real estate and the principal part of his personal property to a gentleman described as follows: "To the eldest son of my Cousin Robert Throckmorton, Esqr., now or late upon York River in Gloucester co., in Virginia and to his Heirs and assigns forever" and had appointed the above I. Baily his Trustee and Exr. Mr. Baily desired we should send him an answer, which we did, and as he proposed writing himself shall as soon as we receive it order it to be Immediately forwarded. We presume Mr

John Throckmorton to be your Eldest son, and if so, the sooner he comes over the better, without waiting for any further Confirmation than this.

Mr. Baily recommends, as he is an entire stranger to every party here, that it will be necessary for your son to bring with him proper Certificates signed by the Govr. and put under Colony seal, with every Credential to prove him to be the Identical person described as above, or else he will meet with great difficulties in disposing of the real estate or getting into his possession the personal which is Vested in Public Funds, & who, when the doubt is made, will never part with a six pence; as we are doubtful whether Mr. John Throckmorton is your eldest son,—we have not wrote him, but referred every thing to yourself. What service we can render him, you or any of your family, we shall with great pleasure do. The estate is worth Eight thousand pounds, &c.

ROBERT CARY & Co."

Upon the receipt of this intelligence John Throckmorton went to England and after litigation secured the estate, sold* it, and returned to Gloucester and established a home in Deacon's Neck, and named it from the English home "Hael Western" (Hail Weston). While in England he obtained a confirmation of his family arms, and deposited an "Unofficial Pedigree" of his family in the Heralds College, London (Wm. & Mary Quart. Hist. Mag. 5).

Frederick Co., Va., was organized in 1732 and included what is now Berkeley Co., W. Va.; in 1772 Berkeley Co. was set off from Frederick Co. [and became a part of W. Va. at the beginning of the Civil War].

John Throckmorton of Berkeley and Frederick counties, Va., had entered into partnership with Francis Whiting (cousin-in-law), and the Records of Augusta Co., Va., Vol. II, show that while in England he, in 1768, advanced money for goods; also in 1769 and 1770. He was appointed Justice of the Peace for County of Berkeley, 14 April, 1773 (Book of Coms., office of County Clerk, Berkeley Co., W. Va.)

John Throckmorton d. Aug. 1775; will recorded in Will Book No. I, p. 37; probated 15 Aug., 1775:

"I, John Throckmorton of the Parish of Norborne† in the County of Berkeley in Virginia" . . . Dau.: Elizabeth Throckmorton, 1000 pounds and negro girl. Son: Albion Throckmorton, 1000 pounds and 20 negroes, land in County of Gloucester to be sold by executors. Son: Robert Throckmorton, 1100 acres in Parish of Norborne and rest of negroes, stock, farming implements and household goods. Exors: Son Robert and brothers Gabriel and William Throckmorton and John Cooke.

Settlement of accounts, by his son Robert as executor, show that he disbursed 5596 pounds. Also several amounts, aggregating her one third, paid Mrs. Elizabeth Throckmorton, not mentioned in the will (Will Book, No. 3, p. 278).

"1788. It then appeared on the records of Augusta Ca., Va., that John Throckmorton of Gloucester Co., had at one time been guardian of Grace Young. Grace was the wife of John Fox, who dates a notice 'Louise County, 1793.' "

† Tyler's Quart. Hist. & Gen. Mag., Vol. 6, 1924-5, states: "In the 'Throckmorton Family,' as published in the Wm. & Mary Quarterly, III, 46-52, Albion Throckmorton is listed wrongly. He does not appear to have been Albion Throckmorton, son of Maj. Robert Throckmorton, but Albion, grandson of Maj. Robert Throckmorton, and son of Gabriel, b. 16 Aug., 1735. The Albion of the pedigree was his uncle."

Washington and others, Justices and Directors of the Town of Bathe (which is now Berkeley Springs, Morgan Co., W. Va.) to Robert Throckmorton, Lot No. 26, of the Town Bath—consideration 9 pounds—on condition that a dwelling fit for occupancy—at least 12 ft. square—be built within 12 months from date of Deed, Aug. 23, 1777 (Deed Book No. 4, p. 368).

Throckmorton built a tavern on his "Lot No. 26" which he operated for some years in partnership with James Rumsey of steamboat history. In 1784 they advertised in the Maryland Gazette that they were "engaged in a boarding house enterprise for the accommodation of travelers at 'The Springs.' ". James Rumsey was the steamboat inventor whose boat was tried at Shepardstown later in the presence of Gen. Washington, who records more than once his having lodged at the above mentioned house.

"1777. 2025. MAJOR MORDECAI THROCKMORTON (Robert 2014, Gabriel 2006, John 2002), b. Ware Parish, Gloucester Co., Va., about 174–; m. Mary Peyton, 11 Dec., 1773 (Mar. Reg. Kingston Parish); b. 11 July, 1748, dau. of Sir John Peyton, Bart., of "Isleham," Gloucester Co., Va.

"A certificate of the appointment of Mordecai Throckmorton, Gent., to be Captain of a Minute Co., Gloucester district was ret'd and a Comm's issued, dated 6 May, 1776." Oct. 24, 1776, Capt. Mordecai Throckmorton's and three other Cos. of Minute Men stationed at Gloucester town were discharged on account of their reduced numbers (Council Journals, 1776). Later in the war he was Major in the Gloucester Militia.

Elected vestryman, North River Parish, 23 Nov., 1778; Census of Gloucester Co., Va., 1 Oct., 1782/3: "Mord. Throckmorton, Ware and Kingston Parishes,—8 whites; 57 blacks." Land Entry Book No. 1, p. 4: Mordecai Throckmorton, by virtue of a Treasury Warrant, dated June 2, 1787 (Warrant No. 13), enters a tract of vacant land lying on the south side of Sleepy Creek. Beginning at the Creek with Robert Throckmorton his line and running thence with said line . . . down to the Creek, then with said Creek up to the beginning. According to pp. 28 and 29, same book, entry was withdrawn, July 13, 1791, by Robert Throckmorton by virtue of a Power of Attorney, and reentered by Lewis Duckwall.

Major Throckmorton probably d. about 1788. The Va. Gaz. records this:

"Notice is hereby given that a petition will be presented to the present Gen'l Assembly to enable Sir John Peyton to make a deed of a tract of land on North River sold to Modecai Throckmorton of Gloucester Co., before his death." (Va. Gaz., Nov 20, 1788). This petition was not presented owing to the death of Sir John Peyton (Throckmorton R. S., 4, 2, 81).

Mary Webb, dau. of James Jr. and Mary (Smith). Tyler's Quarterly Hist. & Gen. Mag., Vol. 6, 1924, states that "Albion Throckmorton Jr., has been confused with his uncle, Albion Throckmorton (2021)* son of Robert, in the pedigrees" and quotes from will of James Edmondson (uncle) to prove his assertion. Albion has been placed here according to Tyler, with the exception of the date of birth,† which is manifestly incorrect. Saffell's Rec. of Rev. War:

"1776-1783, Albion Throckmorton recruiting in the vallew of Virginia for Light Horse Harry Lee's troops. He was mustered in by Maj. Henry Peyton. Served as Cornet in Lee's Legion and was allowed land for a subaltern; also Lieu. in Col. Lee's legion of Cavalry." Letter addressed to Gen. Andrew Dunscomb, Esq., Richmond, Va., dated Dec. 15, 1785:

"Sir:—Some time last summer I enclosed a furlough to me by Col. Baylor, wherein he mentioned I had one from Gen. Greene, which I know he kept when he granted mine. Be pleased to be so very good as to say what can be done. Col. Charles Magill will bring whatever you may honor him with. I am, sir,

The assumption, for such it is, that Gabriel who married and died in Noble Co., Ohio, is "Gabriel son of Capt. Gabriel" rests on the facts that Gabriel Jr. was living unmarried in Va. in 1810, according to the *Census, and that Gabriel of Ohio was "born in Virginia and had at least two brothers named respectively James and Albion, for whom he named his only son. The supposition is that he removed from Va. to Noble Co., Ohio, after 1810 and married there late in life a young wife (name unknown) and died while his children were very young. They were taken into other homes to be reared and his widow remarried, dying in March, 1870" (Family tradition).

"Miss Salley Dudley on the 14th day Oct., 1802"; b. 9 May, 1784; d. 23 Nov., 1862, a sister of the famous Dr. Dudley of Lexington, Ky. A grandson† has described his career in this manner:

"John Throckmorton was at one time connected with the Blue Lick Springs in Nicholas Co.,—a great stopping point for the people from the South-Land. He was a stalwart man, six-foot-three, and weighed over 200 pounds—all bone and muscle. He possessed great strength, was handy with his fists and feared no man. On celebration, election and training days much drinking was done in Kentucky, and often fights were pulled off just to see who was the best man. Nearly all the men in that part of the country drank and fought. Many anecdotes are related of Throckmorton's physical power. On one occasion a fight was arranged to take place between him and 'The Bully of Kentucky,' both of whom were known far and wide for their great strength. Much betting was done, for in those days in Kentucky church members, and sometimes their preachers, drank whiskey and bet on fights and horse races. The great day of the fight came at last, and with it an immense crowd to bet, drink whiskey, trade horses, and witness the fight. It was a day long remembered in that part of the State, for Throckmorton, the idol of his neighbors and acquaintances, soundly licked 'The Kentucky Bully.' At that time Throckmorton lived about 26 miles east of Lexington. He and Henry Clay were close friends and every time Clay left Lexington for Washington, D. C., he would stay the night in the Throckmorton home. He went in his cab with his negro driver outside. In that far-away time Clay would often hold his host's little grandson, John James Throckmorton (the narrator), on his knee and talk to him about what he should do when he became a man: told him to keep out of law suits, for lawyers when they got hold of a rich client were like a fox with a goose—did not leave much meat on the bones!

"John Throckmorton was a Whig in politics and a great admirer of Abraham Lincoln, and when he heard the Emancipation Proclamation read he went home, called in his many slaves (eighty in all and among them some as fine negroes as the sun ever shone on) and set them free. Only one, however, Sam by name, went away; he joined the Union Army and was killed a few days later. The other negroes were glad when he left as he domineered over them. Throckmorton had one negro for whom he was offered $3000 (1855). They ordinarily brought from $800 to $1000. John Throckmorton d. 6 Nov., 1865. He became blind a few years before his death."

2068. MAJOR ARIS THROCKMORTON (Thomas 2028, Mordecai 2015, Gabriel 2006, John 2002), b. Frederick Co., Va., 1789. Probably named for his godfather, John Aris.* Taken by his parents to Nicholas Co., Ky., while a child. Served as Lieu. in the War of 1812, 3rd Reg. (Poage's) Throckmorton's Co.; also served as Major in the Black Hawk War, 1832. He m. Susan E. Raine, dau. of John. He was distinguished before 1830 as the landlord of the Lower Blue Lick Springs, Nicholas Co.,—a resort kept open three months of the year, or during "the season." · A grand nephew furnishes the following:

> The Blue Lick Springs was visited alike by those who came for the healing qualities of the water and those who came to gamble. In this hotel were separate bowling alleys for men and women. During the season gamblers came from everywhere with their gold done up in little deer skin sacks which they carried in small leather valises. The sacks contained from $100 up to $5000 (or more) in gold, each sack plainly marked with the amount. During the games the valises were held in the lap. No bet at cards was less than $100. No thieving was ever known as the money was secure in the valises. Men made fortunes in a day and became heroes. The broken men left with as little said about their losses as possible. Three or four thousand guests visited this hotel during its short season. No one paid less than $5 per day for room and board."

Major Throckmorton was also owner and manager of the celebrated Galt House, Louisville, Ky., from 1834 to 1865. Its patrons were the rich. During the Civil War it was the headquarters for politicians and army officers. Says the Kansas City Star, June 1919:†

> "The first Galt House was built on ground which had been occupied for many years as the residence of Dr. W. C. Galt. Major Throckmorton was its first manager. Throckmorton had been a captain in the War of 1812 and a warm friend of Henry Clay and was a host of the old school who became acquainted with each guest and personally saw to it that every guest received proper attention. In the maze of time one tradition of his hospitality has become famous. He threw Capt. Marryat, English novelist and author of "Midshipman Easy," out of the hotel after Major Throckmorton had called at the distinguished guest's room to inquire whether there was anything he desired and had received an insolent answer that he would call a servant if he needed anything. Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, was entertained in the old Galt House, where was staged the most famous ball of the city, given in honor of Grand Duke Alexis, son of the Czar of Russia. Gen. Grant was given a dinner there for Confederate and Union soldiers by Henry Watterson. Charles Dickens‡ had been a guest there. It was in the office of the Galt House that Gen. Nelson was shot and killed by Gen. Jeff C. Davis. Numerous duels had been fought under its roof."

In 1865, Major Throckmorton retired from the management of the Galt House and d. 26 Dec., 1868. He was a rich man and his children grew up in luxury. The Louisville Journal contained a long obituary notice only a part of which can here be transcribed:

* John Aris's will dated 10 Dec., 1797; proved in Berkley, 21 April, 1800. Men. "godson Airiss Throckmorton." (Abs. Rec. of Augusta Co. Vol. II.)

† In 1919 the historic Galt House passed from view as a hotel and made way for a great office building.

‡ Dickens (1842) in his American Notes says: "We slept at the Galt House; a splendid hotel; and as handsomely lodged as though we had been in Paris, rather than hundreds of miles beyond the Alleghenies." And again, "We arrived at Louisville on the fourth night, and gladly availed ourselves of its excellent hotel."

"We do not think that we have ever known a man who dried up more tears in his life and caused more to flow at his death, than Major Throckmorton. There probably was not a man in the U.S., who, personally, was known more extensively than he, or who had more numerous and more devoted friends among those who knew him. He had all the high moral qualities that glow in our human nature like gems in the waves of the sea. Though not a scholar, having been reared in Kentucky when schools were almost unknown within her borders, he acquired a rare and valuable education in the great schools of the world. There were few of life's lessons that he did not learn in them by heart. He was keen and shrewd to observe, and quick and powerful to comprehend. He readily made himself master of all that was to be prized in the knowledge of others. His intellect was profound and strong. His common sense and judgment were unsurpassed. His perception of right and wrong was an intuition. He was charitable to faults, but his scorn of all meanness was fierce and bitter. He ever took the part of the weak against the powerful, regardless of the odds he might have to encounter. His heart was as soft as it was brave. All its portals lived with the thick rush of tears at the sight of affliction and grief. . . . . The blessings of the poor waited upon his footsteps. Honor sat like a diadem upon his brow. His soul looked out through his calm clear eyes like sunshine through the rifts of a bright cloud. Authority was in his port and bearing. . . . Through age he kept the freshness and joyousness of young manhood. Time could not rob him of his youth or chill his gushing sympathies. . . . He was like an oak that knew no decay, but is stricken down in all its strength and with all its glorious wealth of foliage by a storm.

Major Throckmorton was in every sense of the term an American gentleman of the best type. No prince or nobleman transcended him in courtesy and courtliness of manners. He was at all times as scrupulous in his politeness and civility to the lowest as to the highest. He assumed no superiority in the presence of the lowly, and felt no inferiority when standing face to face with the lordly. He never knew a consciousness of abasement or a sentiment of fear. We have seen him when a vast crowd was raging and maddened and swaying and tossing furiously to and fro, rush into the midst of it, at what he, in his excitement, considered the demands of duty, like a man plunged into the yeasty waves of a tempest-tossed ocean. Many passages in his life illustrative of his chivalry would read like the tales of old romance. Though gentle in heart, he was passionate, and, when his aroused wrath burst into flame, it was terrible, and yet a kindly word or tone could almost in a moment soothe it to quietude and peace. He was an ardent, energetic and enthusiastic politician of the old Whig party, battling for it with his utmost might until its dissolution in 1854, and then he wept as if at the grave of a beloved and revered father. In social intercourse he was sought and recognized as a peer by the tallest spirits of the nation. He was deeply loved by Clay, Crittenden, Letchner and others of their order. He was ever an arc of their fine circle, which, without him, would not have been complete. . . .

Farewell, old friend, till we meet. To many eyes that thou hast gladdened, there is gloom upon the earth, and they look sadly out through the somber shadows of the eclipse. But we should not permit a cloud to make us despondent when the very cloud itself floats beneath the eternal stars."

Henry Watterson in "Marse Henry," 1919, Vol. II, gives a chapter to "The Throckmortons,"—Aris and his son John. Of the former he writes:

"Among the hotels of Christendom the Galt House, of Louisville, Ky., for a long time occupied a foremost place and held its own. . . . Aris Throckmorton, its manager in the Thirties, the Forties, and the Fifties, was a personality and a personage. The handsomest of men and the most illiterate, he exemplified the characteristics and peculiarities of the days of the river steamer and the stage coach, when "mine host" felt it his duty to make the individual acquaintance of his patrons and each and severally to look after their comfort. Many stories are told at his expense; of how he made a formal call upon Dickens—it was, in point of fact, Marryat*—in his apartment, to be cooly told that when its occupant wanted him he would ring for him; and of how, investigating a strange box which had newly arrived from Florida, the prevailing opinion being that the live animal

* One story runs thus: 'Marryat had not been at the Galt House long before Major Throckmorton called upon him and offered his service in introducing him to the prominent families of the city and other parts of the State, attracted there by the presence of the great writer, ending with,—"Sir, I am proud to extend to you the hospitality of the house, and shall be delighted to serve you to the best of my ability." The distinguished author, in spite of his alertness, was not aware of the difference there is between the social standing of an American hotel proprietor and that of an English innkeeper. Glancing at the polite Major he replied:

"All right, sir; all right; if I want anything I'll ring for you."

The Major's eyes flashed fire as he exclaimed, "What do you mean by such impertinence? You don't know whom you are talking to. I'll throw you out of the window!"

The Major was a powerful man and viewed insults from a strictly Ky. point of view, and would, doubtless have made good his threat had not the author speedily apologized for his mistake."

within was an alligator, he exclaimed, "Alligator, hell; it's a scorponicum." He died at length, to be succeeded by his son John, a very different character. And thereby hangs a tale."

2116. I. MAJOR JOHN, an officer in the C.S.A. during the Civil War. Never married. Watterson writes of him: "John Throckmorton, like Aris, his father, was one of the handsomest of men. Perhaps because he was so he became the victim of one of the strangest of feminine whimsies and human freaks. There was a young girl in Louisville, named Ellen Godwin. Meeting him at a public ball she fell violently in love with him. As Throckmorton did not reciprocate this and refused to pursue the acquaintance, she began to dog his footsteps. She dressed herself in deep black and took up a position in front of Galt House, and when he came out and wherever he went she followed him. No matter how long he stayed, when he reappeared she was on the spot and watch. He took himself away to San Francisco. It was but the matter of a few weeks when she was there, too. He hied him hence to Liverpool, and as he stepped upon dock there she was. She had got wind of his going and, having caught an earlier steamer, preceded him. Finally the War of the Sections arrived. He became a Confederate officer, and, being able to keep her out of the lines, he had a rest for four years. But, when after the war he returned to Louisville, the quarry began again. He was wont to call her "Old Hell's Delight." . . .

I knew her well. She used to once in a while come and see me, having some story or other to tell. On one occasion I said to her: "Ellen, why do you pursue this man in such a cruel way? What possible good can it do you?" She looked me straight in the eye and slowly replied: "Because I love him." . . . He was a man, every inch of him, and a gentleman through and through—the very soul of honor in his transactions of every sort—most highly respected and esteemed wherever he was known—yet his life was made half a failure and wholly unhappy by this "crazy Jane." Catherine Inskeep, 26 June, 1810; b. near Romney, Hampshire Co., Va., 19 Sept., 1791, dau. of William and Susannah, of "Riverside Farm." A descendant writes:

"Warner Throckmorton built a fine colonial home* with an old-fashioned flower garden, for his bride at Romney. He learned the cabinet-maker trade in youth, and adorned the mantels and panels in each room with beautiful carvings. The house still stands but has passed out of the Throckmorton family. Architects from Baltimore and Washington have frequently inspected the interior woodwork and made drawings of the excellent handwork."

He was a Whig, Episcopalian, lawyer, and State Senator from 1819 to 1822; d. Romney, Va., 13 March, 1826; int. "Indian Mound Cemetery." His obt. says in part:

"Departed this life 11 April, 1855, at his residence on the Bull Skin in Jefferson Co., Warner Washington Throckmorton, in the 66th year of his age. In the death of this truly good man his family, his friends and society sustain a loss that will be long felt. In the domestic and social virtues he was excelled by no one. He was a devoted husband, an affectionate parent, a true friend and an obliging neighbor. His was a home of hospitality and no one ever appealed to him in vain when any service of kindness or usefulness or charity was to be rendered. It was indeed in these walks of life,—private life and the domestic and social circle, and in which after all men are best known and most useful—that he most delighted and shone. It was his ambition to discharge in unpretending simplicity all the duties of life. How well he succeeded will be attested by all who knew him, for 'none knew him but to love him' It may be said of him in truth, he died without an enemy on earth. In paying this just tribute to his worth we should fail to do justice to his memory unless we said further that in all those qualities that mark a noble nature he was, without ostentation, equally distinguished.

"He loved his country and promptly obeyed her call to defend her in the last war with Great Britain. He was a frank, generous and chivalrous man. He had in all things been just to man, and his crowning merit was to be 'just to God.' He bore a long and painful illness with fortitude and cheerfulness; expressed an unfaltering confidence in his Creator and cast all his hopes on the Redeemer of the world. Unreluctantly and without a regret or fear he entered the 'dark valley and shadow of death.'"—Truth.

praise which when applied to the deceased, mean much indeed, have been so perverted by their application to all kinds of persons that we scarcely know how to speak of him; but we truly say he was an affectionate father, a kind and obliging neighbor, and a good citizen, who conducted himself with uncommon propriety in all the relations of life. All who knew him loved and respected him. The unaffected amiability of his manners was but an index of the amiability of his heart. It was always a pleasure to us to see with what gentleness he treated the humble and unfortunate, and we must say that of benevolence, that much despised and neglected virtue, there are few men anywhere that possess as much as did he."

"He was a strong believer in States rights, and when Va. seceded from the Union, he was chief of a division in the Treasury Dept., Washington City, but immediately resigned and enlisted, April 1861, as a private in Co. F, 6th Va. Cav. (although at that time he was a colonel of the State Militia). In a few days he was elected orderly sergeant; in a month made 1st lieu, and was with Gen. Stewart in all his scouts and raids. In 1862 he was elected captain of his company, and in that position commanded a squadron of his regiment under Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson in the valley of Va. in all his battles, having a horse killed under him. He participated in the battle of Cedar Mountain, and led Gen. Jackson's advance all three days of the 2d Manassas fight. In 1863 he was promoted to major, and commanded a regiment in the great cavalry fight at Brandy Station, June 9, 1863. At Gettysburg he commanded the regiment which led the great cavalry charge. He was known as "Old Colonel," and participated in 34 hard-fought battles and skirmishes. He was mentioned many times in official dispatches for bravery and gallantry in battle.* Discharged 19 Dec., 1864."

Chichester, his wife. Col. Tutt was an officer in the War of 1812, a large land owner and slaveholder. He was a personal friend of Pres. Jackson, who offered him the governorship of the then territory of Mo., which he refused; he subsequently appointed him U. S. Naval agent at Pensacola, Fla. His wife was a grand-dau. of Hon. Thomson Mason, of Va., famous as a statesman, judge and patriot, and a grand-niece of George Mason of "Gunston Hall," author of the Va. bill of rights. Mary B. Tutt was well known in Washington society for many years. She made her debut at the White House as a guest of Pres. Jackson, and was the "young lady of the White House" during his 2d administration. She enjoyed the personal acquaintance, and in some cases friendship, of every president from Gen. Jackson to the time of her death (19 Dec., 1869), and was a guest at the White House in one of Gen. Grant's terms, and was probably the only person who had been an inmate of the White House in Gen. Jackson's and Gen. Grant's incumbency. She was famous for her wit, and a great belle in her time. During the Civil War she stayed in Washington, and made the welfare of the Confederate prisoners her special care. "All the Throckmortons and Chamblins were Whigs before the Civil War. Mason Chamblin was an especially ardent Whig, and so devoted to Henry Clay that Clay's defeat in 1844, almost caused his death. In like manner, the Throckmortons and Chamblins voted for Bell and Everett in 1860, and the next year voted against secession of Virginia. With the exception, however, of Charles B. Throckmorton, all the family threw in their fortunes with the South upon the secession of Virginia. James Barbour Throckmorton was a country gentleman, a man of property and influence in his community—a successful miller, farmer and business man. He held the office of Justice of the Peace for many years, and died 5 Dec., 1906. After his death his widow made her home for many years with a granddaughter, Mrs. Robert Chamblin, Herndon, Fairfax Co., Va. . . . 'leaned toward the Campbellites.' He owned many slaves, and aside from his plantation work he owned and operated a line of big truck wagons. Unfortunately he went security for a friend, for $18,000, which he had to pay. This was a big sum of money for a farmer to raise in those days. Negroes were very cheap from 1840 to 1850,—hired out to work, a negro woman with two or three children, brought as low as five dollars per year with her keep. A good negro man would bring from $75 to $100 for a year's labor. When sold, a negro woman brought from $150 to $400; a negro man, $300 to $500. To pay his security debt Throckmorton sold his freighting outfits in lots consisting of a negro driver, wagon, canvas covering, harness and four horses. They were auctioned off and brought from $800 to $1000 for each outfit. Freighting payed well in those days: a good negro with wagon and four horses would earn five dollars a day, or as much as a negro woman could earn in a whole year. On the farm they raised oats, corn and wheat, and cut the small grain with sickle, thrashed it with a flail and cleaned by hand. An expert could cut an acre a day from sun up to sun down. Wheat sold for 40 cts. per bushel."

Throckmorton, who was postmaster at that time. An excerpt: "A crowd of men appeared at the entrance of the jail at Birmingham, Ala., at 11 o'clock on the night of Saturday, Dec. 8, 1888, with the expressed intention of lynching ———, who was confined there on a charge of murder. The mob numbered 2000 strong. The Sheriff and Chief of Police called to the men to stop, on pain of death; the mob did not heed. Then, as the Sheriff asserts, a shot was fired by a man in the crowd. An instant later, in response to a command from the Sheriff, the guards fired a olley into the thick of the mob. The effect was awful. Three men were killed outright, seven mortally wounded, and thirty were less seriously hurt. Six of the mortally wounded men died within a short time. The mob dispersed, and did not renew the attack. When the dead and wounded were removed it was found that one of the victims was Maurice B. Throckmorton, Postmaster of Birmingham. It is claimed that he was trying to pacify the mob when the firing began. He died early Sunday morning."

His father was one of the early settlers in Collin Co., Texas., 1841. James W. Throckmorton read medicine at Princeton, Ky., under the supervision of his uncle, Dr. James E. Throckmorton, and having prepared himself for the medical profession, returned to Texas and enjoyed for a number of years an extensive practice and the reputation of being a skillful physician. During the war with Mexico he volunteered his services and was made surgeon of Major Chevallie's Texas Rangers. He afterwards resumed his practice in Collin county, and pursued the duties of his profession until 1849, when, in consequence of failing health induced by the exposure and irregularity attending an extensive medical practice, he determined to follow the dictates of a natural taste and prepared himself for the bar and, having studied the general principles of law, entered upon a successful legal career. He m. Annie Rattan, Feb. 1848, dau. of Thomas and Gilean, who moved from Ill. to Texas at an early day. She b. 1828. In 1851 he was elected a member of the legislature, and re-elected 1853, 1855. In 1857 he was elected State Senator for a term of four years. He had been reared a Whig and was one of the electors of Texas in 1852, but on the dissolution of that party he affiliated with the Democrats, and as such was elected to the Texas legislature. He strenuously opposed secession, but when that step was taken he went with his State and was a brave Confederate officer.

* See National Cyclopedia of American Biography, Vol. IX.

He commanded a company in one of the first regiments organized in the State, and participated in the capture of Forts Washita and Arbuckle, on the Texas frontier. He was afterwards captain of a company in the famous Sixth Texas Cavalry, and rendered important service in the Missouri campaign. He led his company in the Indian fight at Chustennallah and in the two days' battle at Elkhorn. In the latter part of 1862 he was transferred to Corinth, Miss., where he resigned his command on account of failing health and returned home. He afterward performed efficient service in the campaign in Louisiana, and his health again failing, he retired once more, and was afterwards appointed by the governor of Texas to the command of State troops, with the rank of brigadier-general, in which position he acquitted himself with honor and efficiency. He was soon after elected to the State senate for another four years.

At the close of the war he returned home and resumed the practice of his profession* In 1866 he was elected a member of the reconstructive convention assembled under Pres. Johnson's proclamation, and was chosen pres. of that body. In June of the same year he was elected governor of Texas, under the new constitution, by a large majority, and was inaugurated on the 8th of Aug. As governor, his course was wise and conservative. His efforts were directed to the building up of waste places scourged by the besom of Civil War, and to the restoration of peace and friendship between the dissevered and discordant sections of the country. But his efforts were soon thwarted by the partisan and revengeful process of reconstruction adopted by the federal congress, which superseded the more pacific and just designs of the president. On the 9th Aug., 1867, he was deposed by a missal containing three lines from an officer of the U. S. Army at New Orleans, who was temporarily in command of the military district of Louisiana and Texas. In 1874 on the restoration of the ballot box to the people, he was elected to a seat in the U. S. Congress by a large majority of the voters of his district, and was re-elected 1877, 1883, 1885, 1888. He was known as one of Texas's greatest citizens.

In 1892 he was appointed receiver for the Choctaw Coal and Railroad Co. In March 1894, he was injured by a fall while on a business trip and never recovered. Although confined to his bed, he continued to carry on the business of his official position until a few days before his death, which occurred at McKinney, Texas, 21 April, 1894. There is a large monument to his memory erected on the Court House Square in McKinney and he is int. in the nearby cem. He had ten children, six of whom were living at time of his death.

* He was a great criminal lawyer and had a large practice in the Southwest defending desperate characters, many of them murderers. The N. Y. Sun, about 1885, published this squib: "Ex-Gov. Throckmorton was defending a murderer the other day at Gainesville, Texas. He desired to convince the Jury that the man whom his client killed, although in his shirt sleeves and without a pistol pocket in his trousers, might still have been armed. The lawyer had prepared himself to illustrate his argument. Taking off his coat and standing before the Jurors he said, "Can you see any signs of arms about me?" They shook their heads. Then he drew a pistol from under each arm, one from each bootleg, and a long knife from the back of his neck."

2190. JOHN JAMES THROCKMORTON II (John 2109, John 2064, Thomas 2028, Mordecai 2015, Gabriel 2006, John 2002), b. Nicholas Co., Ky., 30 Sept., 1834. In 1854 the family moved to a farm 25 mi. N. W. of Kansas City, Platte Co., Mo., "because land was cheap there and opportunities to improve their condition seemed good." A border warfare was going on at the time between the Missourians and settlers in the new territory of Kansas over the question of whether Kansas should be a free or slave state. The following is an account of one contest participated in by young Throckmorton:

"On our father's farm in Kentucky there had been scores of slaves and we boys grew up in that environment. The right to own slaves, horses and cattle was a part of our religion,—one just as valid as the other. We bitterly opposed any one who questioned this right, hence we at once shouldered arms in defense of slavery. John Brown of Ossawattamie, Kansas, a notorious character,* was the leader of the "Red Legs," or "Kansas Jayhawkers." He, with his numerous sons, was continually raiding along the border of Missouri driving off slaves and sending them North to freedom. Aug. 30, 1856, a squad of twenty men, including myself, visited Ossawattamie with a view of putting an end to these raids by capturing Brown and his active followers. On approaching his residence we were fired upon by one of his sons and his satellite, both of whom were killed on the spot. It was not the intention to kill any of the Browns or their followers but to take them prisoners, have the courts of Missouri condemn and imprison them for stealing negroes. John Brown and his other sons were either not at home or escaped in the thick brush and timber that surrounded his home.

When the Civil War broke out I, with my two brothers, William and Lewis, joined the Confederate Cavalry under Gen. S. Price, and served the whole four years of the war. William was killed, but Lewis and I came through alive. Though both often wounded and sometimes made prisoners, we always managed to escape and get back to Price's army. I was a good shot with rifle and revolver,—had no superior in Price's army. Riding my horse at its greatest speed, I could cut a clothes line hanging from the limb of a tree nine times out of ten. A man's life at 100 yards was not worth a penny, I could shoot his eye out at that distance."

He m. Elizabeth Catherine Bowen, 21 Jan., 1858; dau. of Ben and —— (Hughes). In March of the same year he took charge of the Virginia Hotel in Platte City. The war wrecked him financially, but he was a good judge of horses, which led him to buying horses and mules for the government at which he made money. He continues his narrative thus:

"In 1866 I bought six big freight wagons and six mules for each wagon. Loaded five of these wagons with bacon at 22 cts. a pound, and the other one with barrels of whiskey at $2.50 per gallon. The barrels were made to order and each held 55 gal. I hired drivers and started with my outfit to Salt Lake City. The whiskey was made extra strong so it could be weakened and still be better than most whiskey. By diluting it with water one barrel payed the whole expense of the trip, as it brought $10 per gal. The bacon sold for 60 cts. per pound. The one trip netted me $16,000. I sold the oufit in Salt Lake City and paid $300 for a stage ticket back to Leavenworth. Freighting was a dangerous business on account of the Indians. The trail was lined with graves of freighters and prospectors killed by them. In 1867 I loaded 62 wagons with oats and corn, each drawn by six ox teams, to be sold to the government at Fort Larned, Kan. There were no railroads in Mo. at that time. All the wagons were kept close together through the day and at night were formed into a corral for defense and security against the Indians. The oxen were herded for pasture during the night, and early in the morning driven to the corral and yoked to the wagons for the start. It was a strenuous life! The encampment had to be where there was water, and Kansas was dry that year and water could only be found in large streams. One morning after all the oxen had been yoked to the wagons ready to start, two buffaloes came swimming across the river toward them. They caught the scent, saw them coming, and instantly stampeded, wrecking every wagon in the train! Always extra wagon tongues, axletrees, etc., were carried in these caravans. But it took two days to repair the damage. On another trip of like nature the men were attacked by cholera, and for a time it seemed that all would die. I converted one of the wagons into an ambulance and placed all the sick men in it, and went ahead the best I could. It took four months to make the trip to Salt Lake City; at one point it took 14 days to cross a river."

In 1868 Throckmorton bought the St. George Hotel at Weston, Mo., and Weston was his home until he moved to Kansas City about 1884. His wife d. 8 Aug., 1908. He m. 2d, May McLaughlin, 17 May, 1909, who survived him. He d. 27 July, 1919. "He was a very honest and industrious man; member of the Baptist church; charter member and first pres. of the Pleasant Ridge Cem. Ass., and always willing to lend a helping hand to anything he though to be for the upbuilding of the community (Obt.)." One* who met him a year before his death said:

"Mr. Throckmorton is now 84 years old but looks much younger. In perfect health save a slight attack of rheumatism. He is straight, alert, and commanding in appearance. Six feet in height and weighing in his prime 212 pounds. He is a large man and looks like nothing so much as an old lion,—a great shock of hair turning grey, dark complected with black eyes, and a manner that bespeaks the independence that marks his striking career. His memory is remarkably good. His mind perfectly clear and his eyes and hearing nearly so. He is strictly truthful and honest. A good conversationist, a staunch Southern Democrat of the old type. He harbors no delusions, is no dreamer, and tolerates no nonsense. He never deserted a friend nor loved an enmy."

UNCONNECTED BRANCHES OF THROCKMORTONS: NEW JERSEY AND VIRGINIA

3000. JAMES THROCK MORTON,† b. in N. J., 4 May, 1782. In the settlement of his father's estate he believed that he had been over-reached by his brothers, and was so imbittered by the thought that he was unwilling to bear longer the name of those who had wronged him. From that time on he called himself James Throck Morton, or more commonly James T. Morton. He moved early in life to Ohio, where he married his first wife. He was one of those engaged in building the Hamilton & Cincinnati Canal, but was unfortunate in his contracts and lost much of his property. He was afterwards an innkeeper, and then a shoemaker, a trade which he carried on, first at Salisbury and afterwards at Centerville. His circumstances were, however, considered good at that time, for the community in which he lived. He m. 1st, Abigail Bunnell (or Bonnell), in Ohio about 1806; b. 17 Feb., 1788. She bore him three children and d. in Hamilton Co., O., in 1814. He m. 2d, Sarah Miller, 14 Feb., 1815, at Springdale, O.; b. Elizabeth, N. J., 12 Feb., 1788; dau. of John and Hannah Miller. She d. 11 July, 1826. Her neighbors spoke of seeing her often on horseback. She was a large, robust, fine-looking woman of excellent character, good sense, remarkable memory and superior conversational powers.

James Throck Morton probably served in the War of 1812;* he had an intense admiration for Com. Perry and named his only surviving son by 2d marriage for this hero. He finally located in Wayne Co., Ind., where his youngest children were born. He d. 20 Sept., 1870, at the home of his daughter, Anna Maria Hart, Keokuk, Iowa, where he had lived for eight years, the greater part of the time an invalid. He was a man of sterling worth, sound sense, good judgment and strict integrity, and doubtless his famous son inherited something of Puritan sturdiness and patriotic spirit from him.

3001. I. WILLIAM S., b. Hamilton Co., O., about 1807.

3002. II. ANN MARIA, b. Hamilton Co., O., 16 Jan., 1810. Her mother died when she was quite young and her father moved to Centerville, Wayne Co., Ind. She m. there Edward K. Hart, 9 Aug., 1827; b. near Blue Sulphur Springs, Va., 25 July, 1806; d. 4 Feb., 1871. "He was a good husband and father, a consistent Christian man and member of the Methodist church." She d. at her home in Keokuk, Iowa, 15 Nov., 1882; int. there. "She was a woman of many sterling qualities. In early life she united with the Methodist church and was an active member of that church up to the time she became an invalid. For eight years she was a sufferer from paralysis. During that time she was never heard to murmur or complain. She was a woman who made and kept friends." Ch.: (1) Abigail S., b. 1828; m. Harvey C. Caldwell; d. 4 March, 1888. † The ancestry of James Throck Morton has never been established. He most certainly is not the James R. Throckmorton, son of Job and Mary Robinson Throckmorton (pp. 126 & 164), as given by C. Wickliffe Throckmorton in his just published History of The Throckmorton and Allied Families. This James R. Throckmorton was a grand-uncle of the compiler and well remembered by her. 3007. GOV. OLIVER P. THROCK MORTON (James 3000), or "Oliver Hazard Perry Throck Morton," as the name stands in the family register, son of James and Sarah (Miller), b. 4 Aug., 1823, in a two-story farm house in Wayne Co., Indiana, then kept by his father as a tavern. He was named for Com. Perry, but it was too much of a name for practical use. In early life he wrote his name O. H. P. T. Morton. But this was inconvenient and he dropped two-fifths of this obstacle to prosperity when he began the practice of law, and is now known in history as O. P. Morton. His mother died after giving birth to her 5th child. All these children except Oliver, had died before her. He was only three years old at time of her death. His splendid physique, his energy and indomitable will came mostly from her. He was brought up by his maternal grandfather, John Miller, and his two daughters, Polly and Hannah Whittaker (both widows), then living in Ohio. When about fourteen he was sent back to Wayne Co., Ind., and put under the tuition of Prof. S. K. Hoshour, then principal of the Wayne County Seminary. After leaving there he entered the Miami Univ., Oxford, O. Leaving the University without graduation, he again returned to Centerville, Ind., and began the study of law with Hon. John S. Newman.

May 15, 1845, he m. Lucinda M. Burbank; b. York Tp., Adams Co., Pa., 16 May, 1825; dau. of Isaac Burbank, a highly respectable and successful merchant of Centerville, Ind. (b. Bethel, Vt., 29 March, 1798), and his wife, Elizabeth Toxel (b. Emmitsburg, Md., 1808). In 1846 O. P. Morton was admitted to the bar, and soon took rank among the first lawyers of his State, both as a jurist and an advocate. His speeches were always distinguished for their strength and directness. His superior abilities were soon recognized and he was not long in obtaining a large and lucrative practice at Centerville. In 1852 he was made Circuit Judge and filled the office until it became elective under the new constitution, eight months afterwards. In the spring of 1854, the Democratic party, of which Morton had always been a member, repealed the Missouri Compromise and passed the Kansas-Nebraska bill. Morton had ever been a friend of free trade, but never an advocate of slavery extension; and when the demand was: Either sacrifice your principles or leave your party, he cheerfully did the latter. From that time forward, to the breaking out of the rebellion, he coöperated with the Republican party, but during the progress of the rebellion he know no party but the one for the Union. In 1856 he was nominated by acclamation, by the Republicans, as candidate for Governor of Indiana, but was defeated and returned to the practice of law; but in 1860 was elected lieu.-governor of the State on the ticket with Henry S. Lane. He was inaugurated 14 Jan., 1861. The following day Lane was elected to the U. S. Senate, and the duties of chief magistrate thus devolved upon Gov. Morton. Quoted from a biographical sketch:

"Civil War broke out very soon afterwards, and the momentous events that followed offered full opportunity for the display of Gov. Morton's great executive ability. Before the publication of Pres. Lincoln's proclamation calling for 75,000 men, he tendered to him, 15 April, 1861, 10,000 men, and April 24, called a special session of the legislature, which passed appropriation bills to the amount of $1,740,000 to equip, organize and support the State Militia. When the Democrats carried the State in 1862, however, the Governor's war measures met with determined opposition from a hostile legislature, which refused to receive his message or to make the appropriations necessary for carrying on the State government. The Democratic majority had also intended to take from the Gov. the military command, but the prompt withdrawal of the Republican members from both houses left the legislature without a quorum, thus frustrating the plan. Gov. Morton then conducted the State government alone, refusing to convene the legislature, and on his own responsibility he assumed obligations amounting to over $1,000,000. This bold course brought upon him the censure of the supreme court, but had the support of his party, and the next session of the general assembly so far indorsed his action as to order the money borrowed repaid out of the State treasury. Thus he was enabled to lend substantial aid to the Federal government at a time when it was sorely needed, and thus earned for himself the fame of one of the greatest among the loyal war governors. During his term secret organizations were formed for the purpose of resisting the draft laws, inciting to riot and in other ways hampering the action of the government. They resorted to every means in order to accomplish their objects, not even stopping at assassination. Several attempts were made to kill Gov. Morton and seize upon the State government, but the plans were discovered and the conspirators arrested. In 1864 he was triumphantly re-elected. While filling the second term, he was suddenly stricken with paralysis in the lower part of his body, 10 Oct., 1865. In Nov. following he went to Paris, France, to consult an eminent specialist. It was in vain, for he was never able to stand again without support. Yet there was no abatement in his power as a debater or in the effectiveness of his forcible popular oratory. . . . 23 Jan., 1867, he resigned the governorship, having been elected to the U. S. Senate the previous day, and being re-elected to the same position 26 Nov., 1872, served until his death. In the Senate he at once became the acknowledged leader of his party and he left his powerful impress on the legislature of that period. In ordinary debate he usually read and spoke sitting, owing to his infirmity, but when dealing with questions of national importance, he addressed the Senate standing, supporting himself with his two canes, and thus earned the appellation of "The Devil on Two Sticks." He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention, Phila., Pa., 1872, and at Cincinnati, O., 1875, and was one of the most trusted advisors of Pres. Grant. At the Cincinnati convention he was a candidate for the presidency and polled a strong vote, but after a few ballots he gave his support to Rutherford B. Hayes. He went to California in 1876 as chairman of committee to investigate Chinese immigration; in 1877 he visited Oregon as a member of a sub-committee to investigate the election of Sen. Grover. This was his last public service, as he was taken seriously ill during the journey, and returned to his home in Indianapolis, completely broken down in health, and died shortly afterwards, 1 Nov., 1877. In 1899 a life-size marble statue of him, by Charles H. Niehaus, was presented to the nation by the legislature of Indiana, and was placed with appropriate ceremonies in Statuary Hall in the national capitol in Washington."

Gov. Morton was a man of powerful intellect, determined will, and an orator of great popularity through his vigorous and straightforward speech. In his prime he was over six feet in height, with a powerful physique. His wonderful power and the impress left by his life and character are summed up in the eulogy written by Indiana's poet-daughter, Emily Thornton Charles:

"Bear the great hero to the silent tomb.
'Life's fitful fever's ended!' Lay him gently down
To rest eternal. The lips whose lightest words
Were as a signal of command are stilled;
The eyes whose fearless glance has thrilled
The multitude are closed in death,
The giant mind, which, like a mighty general,
Did send forth troops of thought,
With action armed, forstalling action,
Hath ceased to act.
The modern Hercules, whose massive strength
Has moved the Western World;
Whose voice hath swayed its people,
And whose finger point has led the way to victory,
Lies powerless; like grand machine worn out.
His mantle fold about him; none else can wear it.
His sword lay by his side; there's none can wield it now.
Who fought a nation's battles bravely,
Shorn of strength, lies at his Maker's feet.
A chieftain's dead
A Caesar's fallen "

MORTON

The warm pulse of the nation has grown chill,
The muffled heart of freedom, like a knell,
Throbs solemnly for one whose earthly will Wrought every mission well.

Whose glowing reason towered above the sea
Of dark disaster like a beacon-light,
And led the ship of state, unscathed and free,
Out of the gulfs of night.

. . . . . .

And yet tho' great the loss to us appears—
This consolation sweetens all our pains—
Tho' hushed the voice, thru all the coming years
Its echoes will remain.

ADDENDA

A recent letter has thrown a new light on the ancestry of William Allen Throckmorton. His father was Daniel Throckmorton of Hampshire Co., Virginia, who removed at an early date "to Western Pa., and thence to Crawford Co., Ohio." Daniel Throckmorton was undoubtedly the son of Lewis Throckmorton, cursory mentioned on page 103. Lewis migrated from New Jersey to Hampshire Co., Va., about the time of the Revolutionary War (p. 98) in which it seems he later served in Va. He m. Rachel Dumas(?) and d. about 1798. Several of his children moved to Ohio, and it is fair to presume his son Daniel also went there, via "Western Pa." soon after his marriage to Isabel. The following information from Mrs. Thomas R. Gowenlock, 1301 No. State Parkway, Chicago, Ill.:

He was a politician, and she saw him raised from city and county offices to the secretary-ship of South Dakota, to the office of lieutenant governor and through a campaign as the Republican candidate for the gubernatorial chair of that state. As his widow she now seeks the office once held by him,—Secretary of State. Throckmorton:" The author has found no Throckmorton migrating from New Jersey to Virginia before the American Revolution. C. Wickliffe Throckmorton, genealogist of the Va. branch, writes: "I am confident that the Halifax-Henrico Throckmortons descend from Job Throckmorton or his brothers of Monmouth Co., N. J." This will be hard to prove! Only the sons of Job and Frances Stout Throckmorton went into Virginia, and family tradition (corroborated by the N. J. Records) avers that they "went during or after the Revolutionary War." They were residing in N. J. as late as 1763, and later, according to N. J. Rec., Lewis and Job, sons of Job and Frances Stout Throckmorton, were bp. at Shrewsbury in 1746, neither of which could hardly have been the ancestor of "Josiah Throgmorton, b. in Va., 1750" and who had a son named Gabriel! The author has always thought the Henrico-Halifax Throckmorton and Throgmortons descended from the Virginia branch,—if not from the well known line, perhaps from the John Throckmorton who was "living at the Eastern shore, 1623-26."

"Richard Throckmorton, b. 1763, Henrico Co., Va.; enlisted from there as private in the Revolutionary War, May 1, 1780, for six months, under Capts. Sharp and Daniels; again enlisted Jan. 5, 1781, to March 1781, under Major Dick; April 1, 1781, to June 1, 1781, under Major Pleasants; July 1781 for two months under Major Richardson. Engaged in battle of Camden. Applied for pension Sept. 25, 1832. Resident of Halifax Co., Va., and Louise Co. in 1790. His claim was allowed. Certificate No. 12,568, issued May 10, 1833; $40,—per annum from March 4, 1831. Act Jan. 7, 1832. Richmond, Va. Agency; Va. Militia." (Pension Dept., Washington, D. C.)

"Richard Throckmorton d. 25 Dec., 1839, Halifax Co., Va., where he had resided for 50 years, and previous to this he resided in Henrico Co., Va. The last payment of his pension paid to Branch Sammons, Attorney, for Sarah Throckmorton, widow. No data on file as to his family." (Auditor Int. Dept., Washington)

THROGMORTONS OF VIRGINIA, NORTH CAROLINA AND TENNESSEE

5000. JOSIAH THROGMORTON, b. about 1750, on or near the Potomac River, Va., east or southeast of Washington City; from thence migrated to North Carolina and settled near Albemarle, where he d. about 1825, aged 75 years. He was buried in the yard of his residence. Name of his wife unknown (Family tradition). The only discoverable reference concerning him in Va. is found in the First Census of the U. S., 1782*: "Josias Throgmorton, head of family; Halifax Co., Va.; 5 white souls." Again in 1785: "6 white souls; 1 dwelling." He was b. probably, in Henrico Co., Va., and removed from there after marriage to Halifax Co., and later to N. C. He is closely related to the Henrico and Halifax Throckmortons already given. The former being the only line in which the Christian name, Josiah, occurs (3165).

* Heads of Families, Halifax Co., Va., 1782: "Robt. Throckmorton, 8 whites. Robt. Throckmorton Jr., 2 white." Also in 1785: "Robert Throgmorton, 4 whites. Robt. Throgmorton, 6 whites, 1 dwelling. Will Throgmorton, 2 whites, 1 dwelling." (See 7000). The New Jersey family were not known as Throgmorton.

† Letter from Rev. Thomas Jefferson Throgmorton, 1912: "I know of no Gabriel in my line since the family of my great-grandfather, Josiah Throgmorton. This name would lead me to think we descend from the Virginia stock of Throckmortons or Throgmortons."

W. P. Throgmorton, D.D., writes in a letter dated 9 Oct., 1922: "I know from well authenticated facts, that Gabriel Throgmorton was a brother of my grandfather, whose name was Thomas Throgmorton." (As the name Gabriel is found only in the Virginia branch, and occurring at such an early date, it would seem conclusive proof that this line does not descend from the N. J. family.)

5001. RICHARD THROGMORTON, b. Va., about 176–. He was a younger brother of Josiah. There may have been other brothers and sisters who remained in Va. Richard went at an early age to North Carolina and later to Western Tennessee, where he died. His descendants are scattered over some fifteen states of the union. He m. Oma (or Susan Naomi) Watkins. 5030. LEWIS W. THROGMORTON (Thomas 5005, Josiah 5000), b. Albemarle, N. C., 12 Nov., 1824. When he was nine years old his widowed mother moved to Henry Co., Tenn., with her children. He was a carpenter and, like most of the Throgmortons of that day, a Methodist; m. 31 Oct., 1848, Margaret J., dau. of George Simeon and Elizabeth (McSwain) Morton, and widow of his kinsman, Julius Throgmorton; b. 1 Dec., 1822, one of a family of 16 children, of English and Scotch-Irish ancestry. Her father was in the War of 1812 and her grandfather, Thomas Morton, was a Revolutionary soldier.

Lewis W. Throgmorton d. 30 Nov., 1851, and lies buried in an unidentified grave in the old M. E. burying ground at Manly's Chapel, near Manleyville, Tenn. After two years widowhood his wife m. 3rd, J. Wesley Gallemore, and in 1858 moved to the neighborhood of Buchanan, close to the old Point Pleasant Baptist Church. A striking incident in connection with this church occurred the 3rd Sunday in Sept. 1863:

"At the close of the service, when the congregation had gotten out in the church yard, a Confederate officer stood on the church steps and announced that he had been required to conscript every man of military age present into the Confederate army, and asked all from 18 to 45 to step into line. Sentries had been placed at various points to prevent the escape of any. Accordingly everybody lined up and all were duly sworn into the Confederate service. They were then instructed to go to their homes and to return to the church the next morning at 10 o'clock to take up their march to the Southward. Among those thus conscripted was J. W. Gallemore. Instead of reporting for service the next day he and a friend fled to southern Illinois, near Vienna, making the journey on mule back. And thither the wife and her son went in Oct. of the same year. Illinois was a new land, still in the depths of timbered tracts, much of it swampy. Chills and malaria and fever abounded. The pioneer simplicity of everything appealed to the big fourteen year old son, who easily fell into the habits of such a land. But the little mother could not forget her old home and friends. And the gentle spirit that had lived in happiness amid the hills of Tennessee pined amid the new scenes of its adopted state, and less than two years later, 22 Aug., 1865, she passed away. She was a rare and winsome woman, small of stature, with a sweet disposition and a strong faith in God. 1 Feb., 1866, her son left the Grantsburg neighborhood and went with his uncle, J. P. Throgmorton, to Grassy Precinct, Williamson Co., Ill." (Bi. of W. P. Throckmorton).

Sarah Ann Gallemore, second cousin, dau. of Larkin and Susan (Throgmorton), 4 Aug., 1847; b. near Paris, Tenn., 1825. At the breaking out of the Civil War, being a man of strong convictions, his judgment led him to advocate the cause of the union. On account of these views it became unsafe for him to remain in the midst of a secession community, so he went north and settled near Vienna, Ill., in 1862. He was with the Union army for quite awhile. In 1866 moved to Grassy Precinct, Williamson Co., where he followed the quiet pursuits of a farm life; d. 11 March, 1901. He was known far and wide as "Uncle Pink." Twice elected Justice of the Peace; member of M. E. Church for 55 years and of the Masonic fraternity for 50 years. His wife d. 26 Dec., 1896.

5070. REV. WILLIAM PINCKNEY THROGMORTON, D.D. (Lewis 5030, Thomas 5005, Josiah 5000), b. near Manleyville, Tenn., 19 Sept., 1849. In Oct., 1863, at the age of fourteen he came with his mother to Southern Illinois, stopping near Vienna, Johnson Co., where previously his stepfather, J. Wes. Gallemore, had preceded them. The following transcribed from his "Biography":

"Illinois was a new land, still in the depths of timbered tracts, much of it swampy. Chills and malaria and fever abounded. Pioneer simplicity still held sway,—the log cabin with its puncheon floor, its bright wood fires, its rifle and chopping axe, its homespun clothes and its desolate dreariness, where companionship was limited. Into this land came young Throgmorton to thrive where others failed, to live where others died, to grow where others merely existed. Their first home was in a double log cabin situated on a hill. Here he read his Bible and spent hours talking with his kinfolks in a nearby Campbellite settlement about their views, and he always took the side of the Baptists. He was exceedingly sharp for his age and knew how to hold his own in a personal controversy. The qualities that made him famous were beginning to sprout. He got his knowledge of the Bible first hand and became a Baptist through taking the Baptist part. Such education as he got was that of the common schools and what he could pick up by reading and observation. He succeeded in reading all the books his neighbors had. He was large for his age and they called him "Billy Pink" and "Willy Pink," short for William Pinckney. His mother died in 1865. After that bereavement he went with his uncle, W. P. Throgmorton, to Grassy Precinct in Williamson Co.

He was considered a brilliant boy and was a leader in his classes. At the age of 17 he began to teach in the rural schools and taught until 1877. One day he was trying to get a class of youngsters to guess the length of a foot,—showing them how long it was, and had them guess the length of a number of things. Finally he asked an overgrown boy to tell how high he looked as he stood before the class. The boy eyed him up and down and replied, "About thirteen feet" It was a stunning moment, and showed the effect of his six feet four inches* on the boy's imagination!

In the spring and summer of 1868 he attended a select school for young men at Stonefort, Saline Co. Here he studied algebra and geometry and made progress in other advanced studies. While teaching school and boarding at the home of David Baker, near Baker Ridge, he lost his heart to a daughter in the house and the following 24 Sept., 1869, he was m. to Eliza Catherine Baker; she b. Benton, Tenn., 10 Oct., 1851, her parents emigrating to Ill. in 1854. She was sixteen years old and he was nineteen. He joined the old Pleasant Hill Baptist Church, Williamson Co., July 3, 1870, and a month later was licensed to preach at the Saturday business meeting. He was ordained to the ministry in the same church in Dec. 1871. But did little preaching until the fall of 1875, when he was called to the pastorate of the Hopewell Baptist Church, in Johnson Co. The next year he held his first protracted meeting, and out of the great revival which followed grew the New Burnside Baptist Meeting House, his first church building. He pastored other churches in the country during his period of teaching school. Besides his ten years work among the churches of his neighborhood training, he pastored successively, Benton and Mt. Vernon, Ill.; Louisiana, Mo.; Fort Smith, Ark.; DuQuoin, Ill.; 1st Church, Marion, and 3rd Church, Marion, since 1925, and erected four churches.

Dr. Throgmorton first became known to the Baptist brotherhood in Southern Ill. through his Debating Societies, and his ability in "rough and tumble" discussions. He engaged in fifty public oral debates with various religious denominations, held in Ark., Mo., Ind., and Ill. These debates were later published in book form. In 1877 he became editor of the Baptist Banner while he was pastor of the Benton Church, but discontinued it three years later. But the lure of the editor's chair was not to be set aside and he has been an editor almost continuously since August 1877. During that time has has been editor-in-chief of the Baptist Banner, The Baptist News and the Illinois Baptist, and associate editor of the Baptist Flag and the Central Baptist, besides doing pastoral work most of the time. He is a Trustee of Ewing (Ill.) College, and Southwestern Bapt. Theological Seminary, Fort Worth, Texas. Ewing College conferred upon him the degree of D.D. in 1890, and LL.D., 1920. Many preferments, honors and distinctions have been his. In 1886 he was elected Moderator of the General Association at Springfield; from 1882 to 1907 he was on the Board of Missions; elected president of Ark. Baptist State Convention, 1893; delivered many commencement sermons in high schools, colleges and Theological Seminaries. As pastor, preacher, debater, author, editor and denominationalist he has multiplied himself endlessly."

Dr. Throgmorton was a Republican, Prohibitionist, Mason and Odd Fellow. His biographer† describes him as "A man of commanding height, self-possessed demeanor, authoritative manner, positive convictions and natural simplicity. While his pleasant countenance, gentlemanly deportment and Christian spirit, mani-

His long standing in his section of the land and his more than forty years as editor, give him a long reach wherever he goes." Mrs. Throgmorton d. sine prole, 1 Feb., 1921. She was dau. of Jacob David and Elizabeth (Sanders) Baker. Her obt. says in part:

"Mrs. Throgmorton was one of the best of women, pleasant, patient, true to her duties and responsibilities, ever ready to be of assistance, a real helpmate. Her influence largely helped to make her husband what he is to-day, a man of the people, beloved by a large following of Baptist people in Ill. and elsewhere."

He m. 2d, Katherine Edwards, his office secretary, 28 June, 1922. On account of failing health he retired from the editorship of the Illinois Baptist awhile before his death, which occurred 22 Dec., 1929. No children.

"Dr. W. P. Throgmorton, pastor emeritus of the First Baptist Church and associate editor of the Illinois Baptist, which he formerly edited, died at his home in Marion, 22 Dec., 1929, at the age of eighty. His was the greatest funeral ever held in Marion. Seventy-eight ministers sat in a body in the church and many took part in the services. Every seat in the church was taken, with many chairs used. . . . He was a great leader. A man of unusual force of character and had a large following in the Ill. Association, of which he was long an official." (An excerpt from one of many obts.)

THE NAME IN SONG AND STORY†

William Cowper (1731-1800), the most popular poet of his generation, and the best of letter-writers, removed to Weston Village about 1786. The Throckmortons had a mansion there, and Cowper was favoured with a key to their pleasure-grounds. Later he became a favorite visitor at Weston Hall, and for that reason was a frequent one. In 1791 he writes: "All our little world is going to London,—the gulf which swallows most of our good things, and, like a bad stomach, too often assimilates them to itself. Our neighbors at the Hall go thither to-morrow. Mr. and Mrs. Throckmorton, as we lately called them, but now Sir John and my Lady, are no longer inhabitants here but henceforth at Bucklands, in Berkshire."

Sir John Throckmorton having removed to Oxfordshire, upon succeeding to the baronetcy, Weston Hall became the residence of his brother George,* who had now taken the name of Courtenay, and at this time brought his bride there, the Catherine of Cowper's poems. Sir John is more than once referred to in "The Task," and Cowper addressed the following poems to his wife, Maria Catherine.

THE POET'S NEW YEAR'S GIFT TO MRS. (NOW LADY) THROCKMORTON

Maria! I have every good
  For thee wish'd many a time,
Both sad, and in a cheerful mood,
  But never yet in rhyme.

To wish thee fairer is no need,
  More prudent, or more sprightly,
Or more ingenius, or more freed
  From temper flaws unsightly.

What favour then not yet possess'd
  Can I for thee require,
In wedded love already blest,
  To thy whole heart's desire?

None here is happy but in part;
  Full of bliss is bliss divine;
There dwells some wish in every heart,
  And doubtless one in thine.

That wish on some fair future day,
  Which fate shall brightly gild,
('Tis blameless, be it what it may)
  I wish it all fulfill'd.

ON THE DEATH OF MRS. THROCKMORTON'S BULLFINCH

Ye Nymphs, if e'er your eyes were red
With tears o'er hapless favourites shed,
  O, share Maria's grief
Her favourite, even in his cage,
(What will not hunger's cruel rage?)
  Assassin'd by a thief.

Where Rhenus strays his vines among,
The egg was laid from which he sprung,
  And though by nature mute,
Or only with a whistle bless'd,
Well-taught he all the sounds express'd
  Of flageolet or flute.

The honours of his ebon poll
Were brighter than the sleekest mole,
  His bosom of the hue
With which Aurora decks the skies,
When piping winds shall soon arise,
  To weep away the dew.

Above, below, in all the house,
Dire foe alike of bird and mouse,
  No cat had leave to dwell;
And Bully's cage supported stood
On props of smoothest-shaven wood,
  Large built and latticed well.

Well latticed—but the grate, alas!
Not rough with wire of steel or brass,
  For Bully's plumage sake,
But smooth with wands from Ouse's side,
With which, when neatly peel'd and dried,
  The swains their baskets make.

Night veil'd the pole: all seem'd secure:
When, led by instinct sharp and sure,
  Subsistence to provide,
A beast forth sallied on the scout,
Long back'd, long tail'd, with whisker'd snout,
  And badger-colour'd hide.

He, entering at the study door,
Its ample area 'gan explore;
  And something in the wind
Conjectured, sniffing round and round,
Better than all the books he found,
  Food chiefly for the mind.

† Throckmorton, a novel, written by Molly Elliott Seawell, published July 1, 1890, by D. Appleton & Co., New York.

* See p. 27. These poems from an old copy of Cowper's Poetical Works, printed by John Childs and Son, Bungay, Eng., now in possession of the compiler.

Just then, by adverse fate impress'd,
A dream disturb'd poor Bully's rest;
  In sleep he seem'd to view
A rat fast clinging to the cage,
And, screaming at the sad presage,
  Awoke and found it true.

For, aided both by ear and scent,
Right to his mark the monster went,— Ah, Muse! forbear to speak
Minute the horrors that ensued;
His teeth were strong, the cage was wood,—
  He left poor Bully's beak.

O, had he made that too his prey!
That beak, whence issued many a lay
  Of such mellifluous tone,
Might have repaid him well, I wote,
For silencing so sweet a throat,
  Fast stuck within his own.

Maria weeps,—the Muses mourn;—
So, when by Bacchanalians torn,
  On Thracian Hebrus' side
The tree-enchanter Orpheus fell,
His head alone remain'd to tell
  The cruel death he died.

AN EPITAPH*

1792

Here lies one who never drew
Blood himself, yet many slew;
Gave the gun its aim, and figure
Made in field, yet ne'er pull'd trigger.
Armed men have gladly made
Him their guide, and him obey'd;
At his signified desire,
Would advance, present, and fire.
Stout he was, and large of limb,
Scores have fled at sight of him!
And to all this fame he rose
Only following his nose.
Neptune was he call'd; not he
Who controls the boisterous sea,
But of happier command,
Neptune of the furrow'd land;
And, your wonder vain to shorten,
Pointer to Sir John Throckmorton.

EPITAPH ON FOP*

A Dog Belonging to Lady Throckmorton
August, 1792

Though once a puppy, and though Fop by name,
Here moulders one whose bones some honour claim;
No sycophant, although of spaniel race,
And though no hound, a martyr to the chase.
Ye squirrels, rabbits, leverets, rejoice!
Your haunts no longer echo to his voice;
This record of his fate exulting view,
He died worn out with vain pursuit of you.
"Yes,"—the indignant shade of Fop replies—
"And worn with vain pursuit man also dies."

TO MRS. THROCKMORTON

On Her Beautiful Transcript of Horace's Ode
"Ad Librum Suum"
February, 1790

Maria, could Horace have guess'd
  What honour awaited his ode
To his own little volume address'd,
  The honour which you have bestow'd;
Who have traced it in characters here,
  So elegant, even, and neat,
He had laugh'd at the critical sneer
  Which he seems to have trembled to meet.

And sneer, if you please, he had said,
  A nymph shall hereafter arise
Who shall give me, when you are all dead,
  The glory your malice denies;
Shall dignity give to my lay;
  Although but a mere bagatelle;
And even a poet shall say,
  Nothing ever was written so well.

CATHARINA

To Miss Stapleton,
Afterwards Mrs. Courtenay

She came—she is gone—we have met—
  And meet perhaps never again;
The sun at that moment is set,
  And seems to have risen in vain;
Catharina has fled like a dream,
  (So vanishes pleasure, alas!)
But has left a regret and esteem
  That will not so suddenly pass.

The last evening ramble we made,
  Catharina, Maria, and I,
Our progress was often delay'd
  By the nightingale warbling nigh.
We paused under many a tree,
  And much she was charm'd with a tone
Less sweet to Maria and me,
  Who so lately had witness'd her own.

My numbers that day she had sung,
  And gave them a grace so divine,
As only her musical tongue
  Could infuse into numbers of mine.
The longer I heard, I esteem'd
  The work of my fancy the more,
And even to myself never seem'd
  So tuneful a poet before.

* These two epitaphs are engraved on the bases of two handsome urns in the park at Weston.

Though the pleasures of London exceed
  In number the days of the year,
Catharina, did nothing impede,
  Would feel herself happier here;
For the close-woven arches of limes
  On the banks of our river, I know,
Are sweeter to her many times
  Than aught that the city can show.

So it is, when the mind is imbued
  With a well-judging taste from above,
Then, whether embellish'd or rude,
  'Tis nature alone that we love.
The achievements of art may amuse,
  May even our wonder excite,
But groves, hills, and valleys diffuse
  A lasting, a sacred delight.

Since then in the rural recess
  Catharina alone can rejoice,
May it still be her lot to possess
  The scene of her sensible choice!
To inhabit a mansion remote
  From the clatter of street-pacing steeds,
And by Philomel's annual note
  To measure the life that she leads.

With her book, and her voice, and her lyre,
  To wing all her moments at home,
And with scenes that new rapture inspire,
  As oft as it suits her to roam,
She will have just the life she prefers,
  With little to hope or to fear,
And ours would be pleasant as hers,
  Might we view her enjoying it here.

THE SECOND PART
ON HER MARRIAGE TO GEORGE COURTENAY, ESQ.
JUNE, 1792

Believe it or not, as you choose,
  The doctrine is certainly true,
That the future is known to the muse,
  And poets are oracles too.
I did but express a desire,
  To see Catharina at home,
At the side of my friend George's fire,
  And lo—she is actually come.

Such prophecy some may despise,
  But the wish of a poet and friend
Perhaps is approved in the skies,
  And therefore attains to its end.
'Twas a wish that flew ardently forth
  From a bosom effectually warm'd
With the talents, the graces, and worth
  Of the person for whom it was form'd.

Maria* would leave us, I know,
  To the grief and regret of us all,
But less to our grief, could we view
  Catharina the Queen of the Hall.
And therefore I wish'd as I did,
  And therefore this union of hands;
Not a whisper was heard to forbid,
  But all cry, Amen! to the bans.

Since therefore I seem to incur
  No danger of wishing in vain,
When making good wishes for her,
  I will e'en to my wishes again;
With one I have made her a wife,
  And now I will try with another,
Which I cannot suppress for my life,
  How soon I can make her a mother.

* Lady Throckmorton, p. 27.

ADDENDA 1930

BASSINGBOURNE THROCKMORTON* (Sir Lyonel, Simon, John, Thomas of Coughton), of City of Norwich, Eng., b. 1564; m. Mary Hill, dau. of William and Jane (Annabel) Hill, 7 Dec., 1591; m. 2d, Hester Pye, widow of —— Linicke. He was a grocer and alderman of Norwich; taxed xd. 1633 (Norwich Rate Book, St. Paul's); d. 21 Sept., 1638. Will dated 10 Sept., 1638; proved in London, 5 Nov., 1638. Will of Bassingbourne Throckmorton, Esq., citizen and Alderman of Norwich:

My body to be buried in the Trinity church or chancell of Bungay co. Suffolk, near my father and mother there buried. . . . Mentions the reparation of St. Powles church in Norwich, poor of St. James parish, Norwich, my cousin Chapman of Bungay 20s., Mr. Gamon, minister of St. Lawrence parish in Norwich, the poor of East Wymer in Norwich. To children of dau. Elizabeth Layer £5 each at 21 years. To son Thomas £100 for use of my dau. Layer and her children; her husband John Layer to have no part thereof. To son-in-law Wm. Railey (Mary's husband) £100 for his daus.: Margery, Anne, and Susan. To Edward Curtis 40s. To Mary Senior 40s., and to the rest of the servants 5s. To Hester Throckmorton my wife, household stuff given by my mother Dowinge. To sons: Lyonell, Thomas, John, Miles, Robert, all my household stuff not before given or bequeathed; and the lease in Norwich which I purchased this 15 Sep., 1638 of Sir Edward Blenerhassett equally divided between them. To Lyonell all my lands etc., in Norwich, Bungay, and elsewhere. To John Linnicke and Hester Gleane £5 each. Exrs.: Mr. Eustacy Darcie, Mr. Raphe Blenerhassett. Wits.: Henry Rose, Christofer Giles, Edmond Smith, John Mathews.

(P. C. C., 152 Lee)

Will of Hester Throckmorton of St. Paul's, Norwich, widow (undated): To son John Linicke £100 and goods. To brother Edward Pye. To dau. Hester Gleane . . . Ex.: son-in-law John Gleane. (Probate not given.)

13 May, 1640, Lyonell, Thomas, Myles, and Robert Throckmorton, son of Bassingbourne Th., late citizen and alderman of Norwich, deceased, filed a complaint against Darcy & Blenerhasset, stating that they had embezzled part of the estate and had not distributed the remainder according to the will. (The son John not mentioned in the document). Eustace Darcy, Esq., answered the complaint, telling how much each had been paid, saying that Robert Th. had been beyond the seas at the time and that "the eldest child of the dau. Layer is in Virginia." And this defendant saith that the said testator (Bassingbourne) in his life time was doubtful whether John his son were living or dead. And that he this defendant is not satisfied whether the said John be dead or living, and therefore craveth that he and said coexecutor may be secured against the said John his executors and adms. for and concerning his dividable parte of the said testators estate. The defendants deny they have embezzled any of the estate of the deceased, and intend to distribute it as fast as available according to the will of the testator. (Chan. Pro. Chas. I, T-32-66. Kindness of Capt. G. Andrew Moriarty, Boston, Mass.,—a desc. of John Throckmorton 1st, of Salem, Mass., through his dau. Patience Coggeshall.)

"John Throckmorton, son of Bassingbourne, bp. 9 May, 1601; apprenticed to his uncle, Robt. Debney, a scrivener, in 1620: "28 Mar. 1621, Robert Debney, alderman of Norwich, enrolled an indenture of 20 Mar. 1620/21, whereby John Throckmorton apprenticed himself to said Robert for 7¼ years from Christmas, 1620, to the mystery and art of a scrivner; to be taught said mystery, maintained for said term, and at termination to receive double apparel." "Honoured Srs. beinge a strainger in these ptes (& by the reason of the infirmitie of olde age in my dull hearinge) to pr sent too farr molestations. I desire to pr sent these fewe lines unto this Honoured Court.

Honoured gentlemen my request is that whereas my Sonne Freegift Throckmorton who died last May at Jamaica & having sent over a considerable estate into this jurisdiction: I his sayd father John Throckmorton of Providence & having the full power & authority of my son John Throckmorton (being the next of kinne unto the aforsayd Freegift inhabitant at Middletown New Jarnesey neer New Yorke) by a ter of attorney made over unto me, Concerning the said John his right unto his brothers goods deceased: I doe desire & intreat from this honoured Court a letter of Administratione (for the recovering the aforsayd estate according to lawe) in the roeme of my selfe & my son John & in behalfe of the rest of my children And this is the request of yo^{r} Humble Freind to serve yo^{r}

Page 101—Daniel Throckmorton, d. Hampshire Co., Va., 26 Sept., 1798, when his only son, Daniel Throckmorton, and Mary, his wife, were parties to an indenture (Hampshire Co. Rec.). Thus the presumption that Daniel Throckmorton b. Hampshire Co., Va., 12 Oct., 1773, was the son of Daniel Sr., is proven.

Page 289—line 16. John Carder Throckmorton's birth should be 22 Aug., 1892; public school teacher and dairy farmer. His dau. Peggy Jane's birth should be 9 July, 1926. He also has a dau., Frances Geraldine, b. 25 Feb., 1929.

ARMS OF THROCKMORTON

On a field of gules a chevron bright,
Its silver sides flash back the light,
Three bars gemelled, of sable hue—
Thrice cut its flashing sides into.

These words are blazoned on the casque:
"Virtus Sola Nobilitas";
And rising high above the rest,
A silver falcon forms the crest.

—C. Wickliffe Throckmorton.
